TALKS DELAY MORE SLAYINGS

Angered Hijackers Kill First Hostage

Times News Services

TUNIS — Palestinian gunmen killed a hostage today but agreed to postpone the slaying of more than 40 other captives in a hijacked airliner and resume negotiations with Tunisian authorities, government officials said.

The government-controlled TAP news agency quoted an "authoritative source" as saying 13 maverick Palestinian guerrillas, whose release the hijackers are demanding, will be flown from Cairo to Tunis.

Egyptian authorities Friday refused to release the prisoners but after the slaying of the first hostage by the gunmen shortly after 8 a.m. today Tunisian President Habib Bourguiba appealed to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to meet the hijackers' demands to avoid further bloodshed.

The hijackers said they would blow up the hijacked British Airways jetliner after executing the hostages, negotiating sources said.

Earlier today representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organization said their attempt to negotiate a compromise with what they called an extremist "suicide commando" had failed.

The gunmen shot West German banker Werner G. Kehl, 43, and dumped his body on the tarmac of the Tunis-Carthage airfield where they landed Friday with the British Airways jetliner captured in Dubai.

Witnesses at Tunis-Carthage airport, where the hijacked British Airways VC10 has been sitting since Friday, said they heard a gunshot and saw a body fall from the plane.

The body was put on a stretcher by medical personnel, carried to an ambulance and driven away at high speed, witnesses said.

TAP reported that at 8:35 a.m. the rear door of the hijacked plane burst open and a body was hurled onto the runway.

The gunmen said they were double-crossed because they were falsely told the 13 Palestinian prisoners were flown to Tunis in a special Egyptian airliner. In fact, the plane brought in a PLO delegation and only one of the 13 Palestinian guerrillas.

The gunmen belong to a left-wing extremist faction that has been the target of a violent purge by the main Palestinian guerrilla groups, communiques issued in Beirut indicate.

Readers Are Judge

It's Claude Hopper's birthday, well sort of, and he wants to hear from you.

Two months ago today the Times began publishing Officer Hopper's experiences as he stumbled from one near miss to another, that cartoon strip top left on the comic page.

Hopper, myopic egofist that he is, would never admit it but he's the creation of 41-year-old civil servant Barry Caviness of Saanich.

His future now rests with Times readers.

The question is: What do you think about Claude Hopper? Does he add something to your life or not? How about dropping him a line, care of the Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria.

If Hopper passes this popularity test, efforts will be made to gain wider distribution of the cartoon through syndication, thus assuring his continued appearance.

Britons Bomb, Assault Irish

Times News Services

BIRMINGHAM, England — A wave of firebombings, bomb threats and assaults against Irishmen and Irish-owned businesses swept parts of Britain today.

Police said the attacks apparently were in reprisal for Thursday night's bombing of two Birmingham taverns by the Irish Republican Army. The blasts killed 19 persons and injured 184, many of them seriously.

Security officials in Northern Ireland said at least one of five persons killed in Belfast since Thursday night was shot in revenge for the Birmingham bombings.

For a second day Birmingham police questioned five suspects in the pub explosions. The chief investigator reported some progress in the inquiry.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson's appeal Friday night for no backlash against Britain's one million Irish-born residents was ignored in several cities.

Firebombs wrecked a tavern and several construction company trucks in Birmingham. In each case the firms involved were owned by Irishmen.

A gasoline bomb touched off a small fire at the Irish centre in Birmingham Friday night.

There were no injuries in any of the incidents.

Cambridge police received a call from a man who said five Irish-owned taverns in the university city would be bombed and they issued a warning to all taverns in the area to be on the alert.

Police in Birmingham said they were investigating "more than a dozen" instances of stones being thrown through windows of Irish homes, windshields of Irish-owned taxis being smashed and Irishmen being assaulted in the street.

A British army spokesman in Belfast said the bullet-riddled bodies of a young man and a woman were found in a pool of blood at a filling station in a Protestant area of the city.

Security officials said a 17-year-old Roman Catholic girl shot to death Friday in Belfast was killed in revenge for the Birmingham bombings.

Government officials in London worked through the weekend to prepare emergency legislation — perhaps banning the IRA in Britain — for presentation to parliament next week.

During a tour of Birmingham General Hospital Thursday British Home Secretary Roy Jenkins heard of Thursday's blast effects from a white-faced young surgeon who had worked all night.

"We've got a young girl who's almost certainly blind in both eyes, she'll probably lose a leg. We've got two or three people who'll probably lose a leg as well. We've got people with bits of metal in their necks and bodies and glass in their legs. A man came in, 30 years old, both legs blown off, arm blown off. There was an ambulance with four bodies, charred, burned, maimed, blasted. It's just horrific. Very horrific."

A senior bomb squad police officer said Thursday night the reason for the charring on both the living and the dead is a new IRA-designed bomb which is meant to kill by explosion then scatter a napalm-type substance on the survivors to roast them alive.

Ottawa Oil Export Ban Raises Ire

Times News Services

The federal government's decision to limit oil exports to the United States brought swift and angry reaction from the oil industry today, demands from the opposition that Ottawa cease its "war on the provinces," and official silence from Washington.

The president of the Canadian Petroleum Association John Poyen said Friday's announcement was "the other shoe" that the industry had been awaiting.

"It's counter-productive," Poyen said. "I think the thing that bothers me the most is that we seem to ignore our future requirements.

"I guess that the combination of the budget and excessive taxation and excessive royalties being imposed on the industry by the provinces has already siphoned off a great proportion of the cash flow for the industry."

G. W. Cameron of Calgary, manager of the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada, said Energy Minister Donald Macdonald's proposal to reduce oil exports to 650,000 barrels a day from a possible 900,000 barrels by mid-1975 only adds to the uncertainty created by the federal budget.

Hans Maciej of Calgary, manager of the Canadian Petroleum Association, said the budget already has cut the oil industry's income and the export reduction will undermine its market.

The industry spokesmen agreed the only positive aspect was that the federal government did not take the "rash step" of cutting oil exports immediately.

The 800,000-barrels-a-day export limit proposed for Jan. 1 is similar to actual exports to the U.S. during the last six months, they said.

Stan Milner of Chieftain Developments Corp. Ltd., said in Edmonton that Ottawa's long-term strategy appears to be one of getting control of Alberta's oil resources by taking away the only competitive market.

Reducing exports is a negative step making Alberta's oil industry dependent on the eastern Canadian oil market, according to Milner.

"The U.S. has always been prepared to pay us the fair market value for oil," he said. "The Montreal oil market has never done this and once the pipeline to Montreal is built, we will wind-up subsidizing them as well as paying for their pipeline."

Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed said reduced exports will make no difference in Canada's move towards a serious energy shortage.

"Unless we find more oil shortly, we're in a very serious situation," he added.

The danger would occur, Lougheed said, if Canadians are misled into thinking that a move to control exports will

More Idled

Times News Services

U.S. Steel Corp. Friday announced the layoff of 4,300 more employees and began banking several additional blast furnaces because of the coal strike.

This brings to 18,000 the number of U.S. Steel employees furloughed since the start of the strike two weeks ago.

No break is yet seen in that dispute which has seen the disappearance of 23,000 coal-related jobs. Analysts in Washington say that figure could reach 400,000 by December.

Slumping new car sales, meanwhile, led to a further 50,000 men being laid off by major U.S. auto manufacturers Friday.

The layoffs touched into Canada, with an announcement from American Motors that 1,000 men would be idled at its Brampton, Ont., plant.

The latest auto layoffs bring to 178,000 the number of blue-collar workers who will be out of work all or part of next month, but the cut also extended to office personnel.

Grain Inspectors Strike, Meat Men Work-to-Rule

VANCOUVER (CP) — Grain shipments from Vancouver were halted for the second time this year when 45 federal grain inspectors went on strike today for higher pay.

No pickets were reported at the downtown offices of the Canadian Grain Commission, or at the Saskatchewan and Alberta wheat pools, although no loading or unloading operations were being conducted at either of the elevator terminals.

Three pickets appeared at the Burrard Terminals, where grain pellets were scheduled to be loaded.

A terminal spokesman said railway unions which bring the grain to the terminal, grain handlers who load and unload it, and longshoremen who handle the grain products on board ships all are respecting the picket line.

"The inspectors have agreed to allow us to continue maintenance and housekeeping work, which will keep 20 men employed for about a week here," the Burrard spokesman added.

About 100 federal meat inspectors in the Vancouver area, also members of the Public Service Alliance, were to work to rule today and 40 to 45 of them who have the right to strike will do so in a few days.

The work to rule plan is just as effective as a strike, said regional alliance spokesman W. E. Bitz.

"There are so many regulations and when the inspectors require all of them to be followed to the letter, it will bring operations in all packing plants to a halt within a few days," Bitz explained.

"We can promise the public that their meat will never be inspected better than it will be over the next while."

VW BILL $1.9M

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (UPI) — A U.S. superior court jury has awarded $1.9 million to a teacher, severely burned in an auto accident, on the grounds that her volkswagen's gas tank design was a safety hazard.

Marlene La Grippo, 31, of Long Beach, Calif., received third degree burns over 70 per cent of her body when the Volkswagen collided head-on with another car in 1967, and flaming gasoline from the front-mounted tank showered back on her.

The jury said there was negligence in putting the gas tank in the trunk in front of the driver, where fumes could accumulate, placement of the filler cap on the left side, which is most often hit in collisions, and failure to place a firewall between the gas tank and the driver.

Defence attorneys said they would appeal.

Ford, Breshnev Click

VLADIVOSTOK (UPI) — Cancelling a formal dinner at their summit site in frozen Siberia, President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev spent almost eight hours today in marathon talks on nuclear arms limitations.

It was the first meeting between the two, and both pledged to give "an irreversible character" to Soviet-American detente.

The White House issued a text of a toast Ford had planned to give at the dinner, calling for the nuclear superpowers to "get on with the business of controlling arms."

But Ford and Brezhnev struck such an instant rapport and the talks were going so well that the dinner was brushed aside in favor of hard discussions.

A presidential spokesman said Ford took two half-hour breaks during his 7 hours, 45 minutes of talks with Brezhnev at a snow-covered ocean-side health spa near the secret port city of Vladivostok.

Hopes Fading For Fishermen

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Hopes are fading that five fishermen lost in heavy seas north of Vancouver Island will be found alive.

"We might as well say goodbye to them if they hit a rock in those seas," Stan Svege, owner of the fishing vessel, Yaquina, told the Times from his home in Bellingham.

A search resumed at dawn today for the five men who abandoned the 75-foot fishing boat in stormy Millbank Sound early Friday.

Three aircraft from CFB Comox and at least six boats are battling huge seas and gale-force winds searching for the men who radioed at 2:40 a.m. that the Yaquina was sinking and they were taking to a liferaft.

At the time seas were running with 25 to 30-foot waves buffeted by a 60-mile-an-hour gale.

A long tendril of wreckage was sighted Friday between Goose and Price Islands, about 70 miles north of Vancouver Island, but rescue officials have been unable to determine if it is from the Yaquina.

Svege said his boat was equipped with a 10-man liferaft which was well provisioned with water and food and carried automatic running lights.

If they managed to get into the raft and zip the cover shut they probably would be able to survive, he said.

"But it seems unlikely they made it . . . I mean how could searchers from the air fail to spot the raft — it's a huge thing and bright yellow."

Svege said he was holidaying in Mexico and returned home last Sunday to find his boat gone.

He said it had been taken without his knowledge and was disturbed to learn the man who took it had also taken his son along with him.

"I would never have al-

Little 'Gardens of Eden' in Canada?

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians, don't despair! Although we would be among the first to bear the brunt of a new ice age, which some scientists say is imminent, there could be cozy Gardens of Eden among the mountains of ice.

At least, that was true during the last ice age, known properly as the Wisconsin Glaciation, which began 30,000 years ago and lasted for 18,000 years, say federal scientists.

In fact, the largest land area free of ice was in the Yukon, says Gerry Holdsworth, an environment department glaciologist. This territory formed a gap between two giant ice caps that came together and moved southwards.

He and V. K. Prest, a glacial geologist in the energy department's geological surveys branch, said there is evidence that man and animals lived and survived comfortably in the Yukon during the ice age.

Dr. Prest said other ice-free areas where man and beast survived included Banks Island in the Arctic, a thin strip of land in the Alberta foothills and the Cypress Hills area of southern Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The ice pack, whose movements can be calculated by rock and soil deposits and erosion, travelled as far south as southern Ohio, he said.

Both scientists termed premature the reports this week from London of experts warning of a new ice age. They said it was too soon to predict whether the earth's present cooling trend will be long-term.

Options Open on Power Sources

Thermal power plants on Vancouver Island which burn garbage or wood wastes . . . collecting energy from windmills on the Queen Charlotte Islands . . . geothermal power, tapped from the earth in the Lillooet area . . .

Resources Minister bob Williams told a public forum on energy conservation held in Victoria today that these among others are possibilities the provincial government is studying.

Environmental studies, many related to better use of energy, are under way in British Columbia on a scale never known before, he said.

The cabinet's environmental and land-use committee, like the cabinet itself meets each week, he told an audience of about 60 at the opening of the "Energy and You" symposium held at Newcombe Auditorium by the Greater Victoria Environmental Centre.

The day-long program includes five workshops to debate how the public can better use energy sources in home, transportation, shopping and through recycling.

Williams also mentioned the use of coal on northern Vancouver Island as a possibility under study. Most of the island's electric power now arrives via vulnerable underwater cable from the mainland.

The limited view on energy development taken by the province in the past has changed, he said, and disenchanted experts in the field who had left B.C. are returning.

New policies of B.C. Hydro show a basic change in direction to reflect the government's belief in public power.

Bulk users, such as forestry mills, face rate increases up to 70 per cent in the next year and a half.

Williams said a basic aim of new legislation on wood chip prices is to make the forest industry look to wood waste as a source of power for themselves.

Higher chip prices could make it economical for the industry to use the waste it now leaves on the forest floor.

It could bring a change in outlook on the forest resource and that's an energy problem.

One calculation showing the present degree of waste suggests that the world's current energy needs could be met by 10 per cent of the present annual growth of trees, he said.

'Badge of Shame'

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Israel today rejected the UN general assembly's recognition of the Palestine Liberation Organization and its goal of national sovereignty and called the decisions "a badge of shame" for the world body.

Defence Minister Shimon Peres said Syria would tip the Middle East towards another round of fighting if it refused to extend the UN peacekeeping mandate along the Golan Heights buffer zone next week.

In a radio interview, Peres said he thought a Syrian decision on extending the UN Golan mandate would come only "at the very last minute" before the Nov. 30 expiration date.

Cup Not Running Over . . .

VANCOUVER (CP) — Grey Cup fans here have lost some of the combative spirit they showed in 1971 and 1966, city police and private security guards say.

Boisterous crowds surged through downtown hotel lobbies, but were co-operative when cautioned by security guards hired for the weekend. There were no reports Friday night of revelry getting out of hand.

In 1971, when the Grey Cup was last held in Empire Stadium, the Georgia Hotel suffered about $1,000 damage from fans who ran amok, and about 10 persons were injured and six arrested.

But in 1966 there were riots during Grey Cup week here, and police had to use dogs to control crowds and 300 were arrested, with many injured.

The ire of some fans was raised Friday night, however, when they discovered city police had ordered their cars towed from areas not allowing night parking.

Wing Flaps Cited In Jumbo Crash

COLOGNE (Reuter) — The West German airline Lufthansa said Friday that the wing flaps on its Boeing 747 jumbo jet liner which crashed in Nairobi, Kenya, Wednesday were not all in position for takeoff.

An official airline spokesman said the commission investigating the crash found that the flaps on the front edge of the 747's wings were fully retracted.

The giant plane crashed from a height of 100 feet shortly after taking off, killing 59 passengers and crew. Ninety-eight people survived in the first-ever fatal crash of a 747.

The flaps on the back edge of the wing were properly extended in the correct take-off position, Lufthansa said, but the front edge flaps were not.

This would explain why the plane was able to rise into the air but had not enough lift to keep climbing.

Lufthansa Deputy Chief Captain Hans von Gablenz said a pilot of the Belgian Sabena airline, who was on board the ill-fated plane as a passenger, noticed when it took off that the front-edge flaps were not out.

After the crash he spoke to the jumbo jet pilot, Captain Christian Krack, who was among the survivors, and asked him why he had not extended the flaps. Gablenz said the West German pilot replied that they must have been out because the green indicator light was on.

lowed him to take his son . . . in winter fishing it is just too dangerous."

All of the men aboard are residents of Washington state. One is Svege's brother-in-law.

The boat, a bottom dragger, had 100,000 pounds of fish in its hold, he said.

"They would probably have fished one more day and then return home.

"The thing I can't figure out is what were they doing that far north?

"When it's blowing a westerly, no one goes north into open seas."

Svege said the Yaquina was equipped with electronic gear including a 64-mile radar set and a 180 fathom meter.

"It had everything on it."

He said he was in the process of selling the boat and had it listed at $120,000. A prospective buyer had called him as late as Friday night.

The boat was 80 per cent insured, he said.

He praised the efforts made by searchers — especially three Canadian fishermen who have braved the heavy seas to look for the lost men.

The 65-foot RCMP patrol boat Tofino from Ocean Falls is in the area, as well as the Coast Guard cutter Ready and two or three federal fisheries patrol boats.

An official at the Pacific Rescue Centre in Victoria said it was raining in the area this morning and winds were expected to drop later in the day.

Poultry Inspectors Start Work-to-Rule

Three federal government poultry inspectors working at Maplewood Poultry Processors, 2901 Sooke Rd., began a work-to-rule slowdown today.

Tom Dalzell, regional representative of the Public Service Alliance of Canada said Friday it could escalate into strike action in the near future and drastically affect pre-Christmas turkey sales.

Action by the union is to protest a conciliation report contract recommendation which proposed a wage increase of 12.5 per cent over a 15½-month period, starting last July, and a lump sum wage increase of 9 per cent retroactive to July 29.

Dalzell said union members found the recommendation unacceptable because it fell short of cost increase reflected in this year's consumer price index.

The contract dispute involves a total of 10 meat an poultry inspectors locally. Maplewood is the only federally-inspected plant on Vancouver Island.

About 1,000 of the 2,300-member PSAC bargaining unit across Canada are meat and poultry inspectors designated as essential to public safety and forbidden by law to strike.

Bargaining with the treasury board was to continue today in Ottawa.

Oil Export Ban Raises Row

change the oil-supply situation.

Federal policies have already hurt the situation seriously, he added.

"In short, Canada's unique position as being the only industrialized country in the western world supposedly self-sufficient in energy has gone out the window due to ill-advised federal policies in the course of less than a year."

Reactions in Ottawa were mixed as Conservatives claimed the action was alarmist while New Democrats felt Macdonald had not gone far enough.

Alvin Hamilton told the Commons there was no need to "terrorize the people of Canada with predictions that their future was opaque and abysmal."

Hamilton said that "given sufficient lead-time and proper economic incentives, there is a good prospect that Canada could become self-sufficient in energy for a long period."

The new policy was part of Ottawa's war on the provinces and should be ended immediately, he said.

Phasing out exports of Canadian oil to the United States could lead to unfavorable economic conditions essential for the orderly development of the Canadian economy, he said.

T. C. Douglas, speaking as the NDP's energy spokesman said that he felt "like a passenger on the Titanic watching the captain re-arrange the seating arrangements after we've hit the iceberg."

Canada is heading into "a very critical energy crisis," he said.

"I think we're into a race against time," he said.

Douglas said both the government and the National Energy Board are over-optimistic in their estimates of oil supplies.

Instead of reducing exports over seven to eight years, they should be stopped within three or four, he said.

United States government officials withheld judgment on the policy.

"Our people are generally aware of the situation," state department spokesman John King said.

"However, they don't want to shoot from the hip on it."

A spokesman for the Federal Energy administration said the office had been briefed in advance on the outlines of the Canadian program, but wanted to look at it in detail before commenting.

One government official, who asked not to be named, said the U.S. was aware that it could not count on Canadian supplies continuing at current levels.

"One thing this does," he said, "is to increase the sense of urgency that attaches to the availability of oil and gas supplies from Alaska."

Particle Stuns Physics World

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — A second new and mysterious nuclear particle has been found deep within the atom, just days after the first discovery was announced, physicists said Friday.

"I don't know just what I think right now," said physicist Burton Richter, when asked about the significance of the burst of new activity in the world of physics.

Richter, the head of a research team at the Stanford Liner Accelerator Centre (SLAC) said the two discoveries "leave us with still more questions to answer . . . and very little sleep for anyone."

The newest discovery, made just last Thursday, at SLAC, is of a nuclear particle named PSI 3700, found in the cascade of particles produced in the collision of beams of particles at the Stanford centre. It was found at an energy level of 3.7 billion electron volts (BEV).

Last Saturday, the SLAC group announced the discovery of a particle at 3.105 BEV and named it the PSI 3105. The same particle also was announced at the same time by a team from Massachusetts Institute of Technology-Brookhaven National Laboratory. The east coast group named it the "J" particle.

The atom is composed of a nucleus of protons and neutrons with electrons in orbit around them, much like the planets orbiting the sun. This picture of the inner structure of the atom gave way to one of as many as 100 subnuclear particles.

The strange subnuclear particles are produced in accelerators, or atom smashers, either by smashing two beams of particles together, or by hurling a beam at a stationary target.

The discovery of the first PSI or J particle did not fit into any of the theoretical schemes the physicists had constructed to explain the nature of matter. The discovery of yet another particle is not yet understood.

Rare Bird Link With Mexico

STRAY FEATHERS
harold hosford

For a few days earlier this month, Qualicum Beach, British Columbia, and Mazatlan, Mexico, had something in common — a kind of bird.

For the west-coast Mexican town it was a familiar, everyday kind of bird; for the east-coast Vancouver Island resort town it was a startling rarity, a new kind of bird for Canada.

In both cases the kind of bird was a Thick-billed Kingbird.

According to my book, Thick-billed Kingbirds — so named because of their rather heavy, kingfisher-like beaks — are residents of the arid canyons of western and central Mexico from which they recently invaded the United States to establish themselves in similar habitat in southern Arizona.

Like their cousins, the Eastern and Western Kingbirds so familiar in Canada, Thick-billed Kingbirds are essentially insect eaters which means that they must reside where temperatures are warm enough to ensure a continuous supply of this winged food.

Most Thick-billed Kingbirds had solved this problem by remaining well within their Mexican mountain enclave, seldom venturing very far north of their sub-tropical homeland. That was until November 1974 when a strange kind of bird turned up in the yard of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Brandon, at Qualicum Beach, one that didn't seem to fit any bird in their book.

Ken Kennedy, custodian of the nearby Marshall-Stevenson Migratory Bird Sanctuary, was called in and tentatively labelled the stranger as a Thick-billed Kingbord. I say tentatively because, except for their oversize beak, Thick-billed Kingbords lack any easily-recognized field marks.

The word soon got out and drifted down to Victoria and a parade of local birdwatchers to Qualicum Beach began.

First on the scene were Vic and Peggy Goodwill who, after several hours of patient watching and about 50 feet of 15mm movie film, were finally convinced that what they were seeing was in fact what Ken Kennedy said it was.

Close behind the Goodwills came Jack and Dorothy Williams of Sidney. They added another roll of 35mm Kodachrome to the photographic record and their concurrence in the identifcation.

The story could have ended there with only the photographic evidence and the word of some of our best birders to substantiate the find. But the nature of the record being what it was, a difficult-to-identify species, 1,600 miles from home, required something more, if the bird was to become a bonafide member of the Canadian list.

Fortunately — for the record, not for the bird — "something more" appeared, in the form of a gentle nod from Lady Luck; the untimely death of the bird and fortuitous discovery of its body in the yard of a neighbour of the Brandons.

The body was quickly brought down to the Provincial Museum here in Victoria where Wayne Campbell and Keith Taylor confirmed what all along, thus shutting off the field observers had said once and for all what might have developed into a drawn-out and almost certainly, inconclusive debate on its identity.

Recovering the body not only erased any doubts that might have persisted in the minds of some about what kind of bird we were dealing with but it will also help to determine the bird's physical condition at the time it died as well as something about the foods, if any, it was eating just before death.

But there was another unforeseen bonus for the recovery of the Kingbird's body; the Museum people were able to determine from its colour and size that it was from the western Mexican arm of the Thick-billed Kingbirds — thereby providing me with my Mazatlan-Qualicum tie.

While all this post mortem business may seem like pretty gruesome stuff it's the stuff from which the solutions of many birding mysteries come.

Agents' 'Hostility' Lashed

The Insurance Agent's Association has disregarded the convenience of the public, shown contempt for the negotiating process and an "unremitting hostility" to the Insurance Corporation of B.C. Transport Minister Bob Strachan charged Friday.

In a nine-page report on the "thorny" relations between ICBC.

In a nine-page report on the "thorny" relations between ICBC and the IAA, Strachan said he wanted to clear up the "false and misleading statements" made by the IAA leadership during the recent dispute which saw many agents in B.C. withdraw their services for several days.

The minister said that the agents' association had "gleefully" claimed that up to 400,000 errors were lodged in the ICBC computer files.

But massive numbers of those errors were made by the agents themselves, Strachan said. "I make no judgment now whether they were made in good or bad faith but the fact remains that the cause of many problems for which ICBC has been castigated . . . were the errors made by the agents, not the computer."

The minister said he had not spoken out on the IAA charges until now because of the tense atmosphere which surrounded the agents' dispute.

He said now that the controversy has cooled and tempers are more stable "it is my public duty to dispel any lingering confusion and to set the record straight."

As an example of the tense situation, Strachan revealed that an anonymous bomb threat had been phoned into the Vancouver motor-vehicle branch Nov. 12, the first working day after the agents withdrew their services.

The bomb threat forced evacuation of employees for an hour, but no bomb was found in the building.

Several times in his report, Strachan said there was an effort by the IAA leadership to "stampede" agents into a "war" with ICBC.

Strachan quotes from September issue of the agents' association newsletter where an article by association president Jack Hamilton states, "The crunch is here . . ."

In his article, Hamilton said that the executive of the association was "speaking with a strong voice, from a strong position."

But Strachan says in his report that no ballot of the membership as a whole was ever taken to determine what support there was for executive's ultimatum that ICBC must make an acceptable contract offer to agents, or the agents would withdraw their services.

The minister said he received a wire from a prominent agent, saying that if he (Strachan) did not accede to the agents' demands: "in comparison Northern Ireland will appear a pastoral scene . . . and the public will shed flesh and blood for this and I guarantee it."

Strachan charged that some individual agents "masqueraded as a trade union movement on strike for higher wages, but it should be abundantly clear . . . by now that this was a minority group in a businessman's association in which placard lines were manned by company presidents . . . in an effort to squeeze a higher profit factor out of the public motorists' insurance fund."

The minister said ICBC's hike in the 1975 payment schedule to agents is "generous and exceeds the rate of inflation expected next year."

He said that during the 1972-73 licence year, the last full year under the private insurance scheme, agents across the province received payments of $15.4 million, and had to process both policies and claims for customers.

Strachan said the same agency force will this year receive from Autoplan $17.3 million.

Next year that figure will rise to between $18 and $20 million, he said.

The minister said the private insurance companies whose policies the agents still market, had not been as considerate towards the agents as ICBC.

"Why was the treatment accorded ICBC so different although the public corporation had made more concessions to the agents in one year than the private industry had done in a lifetime?" Strachan asked.

He said the ICBC will live up to its responsibilities in the province "regardless of how long Mr. Hamilton and his colleagues continue to conduct their 'war' against this public enterprise."

Credit Unions Into Autoplan?

Credit unions in B.C. will be able to sell Autoplan insurance policies if an amendment bill is passed by the legislature.

The bill, the Statute Law Amendment Act, proposes that the Credit Unions Act be changed so that: "A credit union may act as agent for its members and for such other persons as may be designated by the lieutenant-governor-in-council."

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall, answering a question from Liberal Leader David Anderson, said the amendment would allow credit unions to handle Insurance Corporation of B.C. business and that the intent was to provide better service for the public.

No mention was made of the recent withdrawal of services by some private Autoplan agents in B.C. and the bill passed second reading. It now awaits third reading and final adoption.

Encouraging Moderation

Moved by the spirit of the 1960s, Canadian legislatures lowered legal drinking ages, liberalized public drinking and added general bonhomie to an aspect of life that used to be a footnote to the seven deadly sins in this country. In the 1970s we are beginning to wonder what has been wrought. With more than 600,000 Canadian alcoholics, and untold millions lost in car accidents and absenteeism the pendulum is beginning to swing the other way.

The federal government is considering more stringent liquor and beer advertising measures which the industry says it will comply with voluntarily. Finance Minister John Turner's recent budget raised federal taxes on distilled spirits and wines. In round figures Canadians spent $2 billion on alcoholic drink last year. Approximately $1 billion of this figure eventually found its way into provincial and federal coffers. British Columbia alone will profit more than $100 million from the sale of alcoholic products in the coming year. All levels of government are extremely sensitive to issues concerning the liquor issue, but they can't deny it's an important source of revenue.

Yet whenever the issue surfaces, most administrations react with the same old platitudes: education on the evils of drink, higher liquor taxes and less advertising. With more than three quarters of the adult population at least moderate drinkers the problem is not going to submerge. Hindsight has taught us that prohibition is an unworkable alternative as well. Alberta, with more imagination than other provinces, has decided on a new tack. In response to temperance group lobbying the provincial liquor board has lowered taxes on all wines containing less than 14 per cent alcohol. By slashing wine prices 11 per cent the board hopes to encourage people to drink alternatives to the ubiquitous "rye and ginger." Most distilled spirits on Canadian shelves contains 40 per cent alcohol by volume as compared with unfortified wine which is only one third that strength.

In B.C. of course, the province enjoys a healthy mark-up on local wines, and drubs foreign wines with more than a 100 per cent mark-up — something the pious NDP would never allow any private business to do. Given the new federal taxes, a bottle of scotch in B.C. will cost well over $8. If the provincial government would change its gouging ways scores of good wines between nine and 12 per cent alcohol could be made available in the $2 to $4 range. The Alberta measure won't solve the problem of alcoholism, but it could change our drinking habits to the point where a glass of wine would be preferable to a triple rye that would put one over .08 in a police breathalyzer test.

An Answer Needed—Soon

A centre where the handicapped of Greater Victoria can meet for training, productive work, therapy and social contact is a dream that has been a long time in realization. Perhaps too long. Galloping inflation has overtaken the funds that were raised so painfully to construct the centre on Vernon Avenue and they are now insufficient for the project, which is unique in Canada.

President Floyd Fairclough of the Greater Victoria Activity Centre Society explained it at the society's annual meeting this week. When the society began its fundraising, $855,000 seemed a realistic target. Now, if construction were ordered tomorrow, the bill would be $1,450,000. Another six-month delay and it would rise to $1,590,000. Funds firmly committed so far total $775,000.

The society is asking the B.C. government to increase its $300,000 pledge and will make a similar appeal to the federal government, which has promised $200,000. Various local groups, in addition to those who have already committed funds, are asking how they can help.

Last month the Victoria Times printed a poignant article by Miss Donna Pistell, who suffers from cerebral palsy. In it she likened the plight of herself and fellow handicapped to those who are locked into dilapidated houses, able to see out but unable to communicate with passersby.

"We may be confined to a wheelchair or walk with an awkward, stumbling gait," Miss Pistell wrote. "We must learn to cope with these frustrating defects, and to utilize our limited abilities, and for the most part, we do.

"But where do we go when the clinics, the hospitals, the therapists, the teachers, have done all they can for us? When the clinic doors close behind us — young, intelligent men and women in our 20s and 30s, wasted, condemned to live the life of the aged. Not only are we wasted, but the potential benefits of thousands of dollars and years of education and therapy which were provided for us cannot be fully realized."

Let's hope that the governments and the people of Greater Victoria will find the right answer to Miss Pistell's question. The community as a whole will be enriched by the activity centre.

Power for the Sake of Power

TORONTO — Macmillan of Canada has printed 7,500 copies of The Power and the Tories, which is a book about Ontario politics by Globe and Mail reporter Jonathan Manthorpe. This is a large first printing and reflects the publisher's conviction that the book will cause a political stir and sell well.

If so, it could be another nail in the Conservative coffin. Manthorpe is obviously not enamored with Ontario's Tories, especially the current Davis period with which he is personally familiar. The latter part of the book is largely a re-telling of recent Conservative pratfalls, scandals, machinations and manipulations which the government, considering its present standing with public opinion, can well do without.

Personally, I doubt that the book will cause much political stir. There are no fresh disclosures in it to titillate the imagination and no political insights to spark debate. It will certainly be bought by many persons who will immediately turn to the index to see how they have been treated, but for the general public the book doesn't seem to have much that is new, exciting or even instructive.

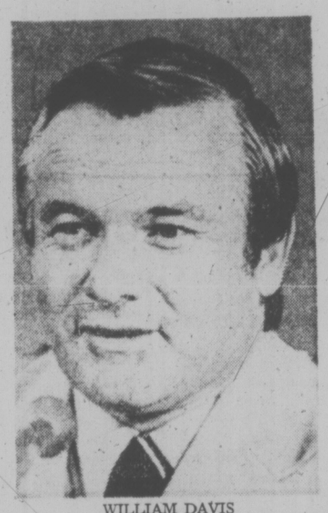
Electorate Uninterested

This, however, is the opinion of a political journalist who is undoubtedly too close to the scene. The Ontario electorate has never been all that interested in or informed about provincial politics but it may well be that there are many voters, younger ones in particular, for whom this recounting of the Conservative era will be a shock and a discovery. If so, the Tories will be facing yet another constituency of restless voters as they approach the 1975 general election.

But even if Power and the Tories has no political impact at all, it is still a fascinating document — precisely because it is a failure. Manthorpe is a good reporter, a fair enough writer and he had a year (thanks to a Southam fellowship) to work up his material. But he still ends up with a stringing together of information which, apart from some relatively minor detail, was already unknown. He gives us the who, what, when and where, some of the how, but no why.

This in itself says something about the Tories who have run Ontario for 31 years. They are a mystery, a cult. Nobody outside the inner circle understands them and it is doubtful if anyone inside does either. They do not reveal themselves to the public and they do not tell tales on one another. They are intensely and inherently secretive.

Premier William Davis, for example, emerges from this book flat, wooden and one-dimensional — as he has ever been. The reader will wonder in vain as to what, if anything, he believes in. There are no revelations of his motives, philosophy or thought processes. No one can observe William Davis in action for long without wondering what he is doing in public life. The Power and the Tories leaves one wondering.



WILLIAM DAVIS
. . . book unflattering

This is not Manthorpe's fault. He did his best to find out, but the more he tried, the more the veil of secrecy tightened against him. He found, as he pursued his research, that one top Tory would know what he had asked another top Tory — and what he had been told. He found, as time went on, that Davis was increasingly unavailable.

Davis was informed early about the book in progress and promised co-operation but arrangements for interviews were always cancelled until in the end Manthorpe got only one hour with the premier, and no satisfaction.

Perhaps this was only to be expected since one of Manthorpe's obvious interests was the building of the Big Blue Machine, the collection of advertising men, fund-raisers, advisers and organizers which Davis has gathered around him to help run the Conservative party and, on occasion, the government.

The machine is real enough, however it may be called, and the discovery of its activities is the cause, more than any other factor, of the government's current low standing with the public. But Davis is hardly the man to talk about it, since he has refused to admit, publicly or privately, that it even exists.

Secrecy, of course, is part of every politician's armor to some degree, but with Ontario Tories it is a way of life, and one can only worry why. Personally, I suspect it is because they have nothing to reveal. They are not in public life because of policy, philosophy or program; they simply want and hold political power for the sake of power.

Relies on Cliques

It was not always so. The Conservative era in Ontario began with George Drew in 1943 and Colonel Drew never hesitated to let everyone know where he stood about anything: hatred and fear of socialism — the "red menace" — and loyalty to the British crown were the political springs which made him run.

But with Leslie Frost in 1949, the Tories quickly evolved into a cult. There developed a jargon, a litany of double-talk responses for addressing the public; cabinet government became one-man government, pragmatism replaced policy, the government and the Conservative party became synonomous, contact with the public was maintained not through the legislature but by patronage and a network of party agents. Power became not a trust but a right, something the Tories needed because they were the chosen managers of society.

Nothing much has changed today. If anything, the Tories under William Davis have become more cultish: the retreat from open political debate, the identification of party with government, the reliance on cliques, the use of propaganda and double-speak — all have intensified since Davis became premier. The name of the game is power, for the sake of power.

BRUCE HUTCHISON

Doubts of Democracy's Survival

WASHINGTON — The Canadian who tries to understand what is really happening in the great republic beside him should remember two decisive dates. On July 4, 1776, the American colonies declared the "self evident" truth that all men were created equal with the "unalienable" right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. On November 15, 1863, while a civil war was raging, Abraham Lincoln asked at Gettysburg whether any nation dedicated to a system half-slave and half-free could long survive. Perhaps, we can add a third date.

In the year 1974 a nation which had endured all its earlier trials faced not merely the constitutional crisis of a president's ruin but, less understandable, a much larger question — can the democratic process long endure in a world unforeseen by the founding fathers, by Lincoln or anyone else?

New Situation

Americans, Canadians and all free peoples usually dismiss that question as irrelevant, even absurd. But their answer, it seems to me, is too easy and automatic. For democracy now finds itself confronting, overnight, an entirely new situation of which hunger, energy shortage, financial disorder and other evidence are daily reminders.

Or, to take a tiny but vivid symptom of democracy's sickness, the Americans who watched their congressional election returns on television this month saw certain remarkable exhibits.

Between the changing figures from state to state, some charitable organization appealed for aid to the hungry peoples abroad, with harrowing pictures of little children bloated and doomed by starvation. Then came an advertisement for vitamin-rich dog and cat food guaranteed to keep the household pet sleek and healthy.

After that, some earnest politician appealed for the patriotic conservation of gasoline and a moment later there appeared a breathless commercial recommending the purchase of Detroit's latest monstrosity, a huge automobile that travels about ten miles to the gallon.

All this makes no sense in politics, economics or morals but can it be rightly blamed on the democratic process? The answer depends on what you mean by democracy.

If you mean that it is no more than a system of government, a constitutional device, a machine of administration, then clearly it is falling far behind its immediate necessities. On the evidence of political performance by democratic governments everywhere the ordinary, nameless citizen might well despair.

He sees, for example, that the strongest democracy has yet to find a leader adequate for his almost impossible task or an opposition presenting any definitely better alternative. In Canada a re-elected, euphoric government has hardly begun to master or admit its problems and, when most needed, the parliamentary opposition, for motives unexplained, suddenly chooses to drop dead. But these are passing difficulties which the political system doubtless will cure later on. There is more to democracy than its temporary failures and personalities.

From the beginning it made assumptions even bolder and more subtle than those of Jefferson's declaration or Lincoln's Gettysburg speech. It assumed, far beyond written constitutions and legal documents, the natural virtue and reasonableness of the human species. It assumed, above all, that men, in some enlightened nations at least, would freely discipline themselves and avoid the alternative of tyranny.

Moreover, they would not demand unlimited rewards from the limited resources of their society or the sacrifice of their weaker fellows by powerful, rapacious groups. In short, democracy must live or die as it voluntarily obeyed the unwritten rules that no constitution alone could enforce. And it is primarily those rules, not the political apparatus or the personalities in office, that have been everywhere broken and stand in question today.

For some two centuries the rules worked well enough in the birthplace of modern constitutional democracy. By historic measurement, however, that is a very short time, a brief candle, a brave but still dubious experiment in a very few nations.

If its brevity, its hazards and its organic interdependence were fully recognized, if its governors would stop fooling its citizens and themselves with impossible promises, if free peoples learned to understand what they are up against in a new sort of world, then we could be sure of democracy's future. We cannot be sure when old illusions persist and old assumptions are disputed by myriad forces unknown before our time.

Old Illusions

Yet the Canadian who visits Washington these days and sees the epicentre of democracy at a moment of many-sided people far stronger in their instincts and sanity than their superficial politics seem to indicate. If they were not so, the wild surmise of Jefferson's declaration and Lincoln's speech would have perished from the earth long ago. But all the vitality, the native genius of the republic, will be needed in the days ahead, and the immediate task is to discover a man, or men, who can invoke and galvanize it.

To these imponderables a foreigner is tempted to add a modern exhibit from an American president now without an equal in democratic politics anywhere. "I feel," said Harry Truman shortly before his death, "that if our constitutional system ever fails it will be because people get scared and turn hysterical and someone in power will demagogue them right into a police state. That's what I've always worried about. And I still do."

This, from a truly great democrat, should be something for all free peoples, Americans and others, to think on while there is yet time for sane thinking, but not much.

A Nature Ramble With Skipper

By Freeman King

This fall there has been an entirely different pattern in the changing colors and the falling of the leaves.

All of this is due to climatic changes, brighter days and very little frost at night.

In some places the foliage of the dogwood is still on the tree and still holds its delicate pinkish tinge. The same applies to some of the maples with their warm golden color. Yet in other places, especially among the very old trees, the leaves are a dark brown or have completely fallen.

Since the rain has come there is another change taking place. The weight of water on the leaves is breaking them away from the twigs.

I have spotted in several places garry oaks which have put on a new covering of bright green leaves. This I think was because during the spring, little loopers or inch caterpillars had denuded the trees and now the rain has helped to bring it back into production again.

The "red flagging" of the cedars has been late in their changing of tiny little leaves which are scale-like in appearance on the branches.

It is quite noticeable because of the fungi that appears on the beautiful leaves of the maples. The breaking-down process takes place before the leaves fall.

In the last few days, the alders have shed leaves very rapidly and if you look where there is a group of these rather fascinating trees, you will see a dark green carpet around the base of their trunks. Even the ever-changing Indian plum has hung onto its leaves this fall. As a rule it is one of the first to give way.

There is a rather delightful little legend about the trees which came down from the Indians, about the falling of leaves.

Apparently a long, long time ago the trees were all given a job to do but they became lazy, so the great spirit called them together and said they all were to stand where they were and not to go to sleep for seven ays. The trees thought this would be easy, but slowly, one by one, they nodded their heads and slept.

But some of the conifers—the evergreens—kept awake by singing among themselves, so on the seventh day when the great spirit spoke to them and said all those who slept should shed their leaves and stand naked and cold all winter, but the conifers could keep their clothes on all the time.

So that is the reason we now see the broad-leafed trees standing cold and forlorn during the winter months. In the spring they carry a new array of foliage to brighten the landscape and give joy to us, telling the world they have been punished but the great spirit hasn't forgotten them.

Man-Eating Tiger

The income of Imperial Oil will be $1 billion more this year than last (50 per cent greater). How? By charging, for example, 36.5 cents per gallon for heating oil that sold for 22.5 cents in January, 1972, though coming from the same crude oil sources, and still costing 3 cents per gallon at the well!

This remarkable income is used to acquire more of our dwindling mineral resources, for the 70 per cent of foreign owners, and at no further outlay to them. Were this not enough, Imperial has optioned off vast future gas resources to American companies for a paltry $30 million, "because it needed more money for development."

Our children's heritage is being given away to foreigners, and paid for with our own money.

Oh Canada, does anyone stand on guard for thee? I think I have a tiger in my tank — a man-eater. — R. Sutherland, 3960 Cedar Hill Road.

Sam Sells a Crystal 'Garden'

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

If Ald. Sam Bawlf felt so disposed, he could probably persuade his colleagues on Victoria city council to designate a garbage depot as a heritage structure, and to spend a few hundred thousand dollars on fixing it up as a period-flavored palais-de-danse.

A persuasive fellow is Sam, and persistent to well-heeled boot. Throw in a more-than-passing knowledge of architecture, design and the intricacies of development finance, plus the ability to talk on these subjects until strong men quail, and you have a pretty formidable combination.

It's a combination that is looking more and more likely to achieve what seemed, even five months ago, well-nigh impossible: city-initiated restoration of the old Crystal Garden as an arboretum attraction.

When Bawlf first plugged the idea strongly last summer, his chances of succeeding appeared slim, to put it mildly. He was up against a solid wall of skepticism and opposition from other members of council.

Mayor Peter Pollen argued forcefully that there are many community needs ranking higher in importance than an arboretum, not the least of them being a conference centre.

And Ald. Mike Young seemed to have general council backing when he said the city's wisest course would be to invite development proposals from the private sector and to lay down strict terms of reference for the building's renovation and operation under a long-term lease.

No one said so in as many words, but the obvious fear lurking at the back of council's mind was not so much the capital cost of a go-it-alone approach by the city, but operating costs.

Would city fathers end up the shame-faced owners of a colossal white elephant, disconsolate outcasts wandering alone and unloved 'neath the palmettoes and umbrella trees?

Almost with relief, it seemed, council turned to considering a developer's $2 million proposal for restoring the glass-roofed dowager and giving her a new commercial image — as a "dolphinarium."

But, apart from getting council to strike a special Crystal Garden ways and means committee, Bawlf bided his time. Until a couple of weeks ago, that is, when he played a trump card by organizing a council trip to Vancouver.

Ostensibly it was an all-purpose day's sightseeing of that city's major civic improvements, including the Granville Street Mall, but there's little doubt that Bawlf's main concern was to have fellow-aldermen see the dome-shaped Bloedel Conservatory in Queen Elizabeth Park.

At any rate, they went, they saw and if they weren't quite conquered, they were apparently convinced that the idea of a similar facility in Victoria is well worth considering.

At a meeting of the Crystal Garden committee on Thursday, both chairman Young and Ald. Malcolm Anderson seemed impressed by the fact that the Vancouver parks board's facility — donated by the Bloedel Foundation — actually makes money.

And that, as Bawlf noted, is achieved by charging only 65 cents a head admission.

Almost setting mental cash registers jangling, he predicted an arboretum in the Crystal would attract at least one-quarter of the million or so visitors who file through the nearby Provincial Museum's doors each year. "At a buck a head that's $250,000."

In addition there would be revenue from renting out a big chunk of commercial floor space for a tea-garden, boutiques and what have you.

That was enough to make Young come perilously close to abandoning his native Scot's lawyer-trained caution. "On the basis of sustaining operating costs, most of us are convinced that you can do so," said the erstwhile doubter.

But still an enormous question mark hovers over the renovation job itself, and particularly how much it is going to cost. City engineer Jim Garnett speculated this week, before he was instructed to prepare rough cost estimates, that the bill will come to at least $1.5 million.

Bawlf noted that all this amount need not come from borrowing, and the provincial government, for one, "might be persuaded to participate." In addition, those citizens who had been "beseeching" city council to preserve the old building might be prepared to contribute.

Young seized on that last point to make it crystal-clear that he would expect "a very positive response" and "real enthusiasm" from the community — in the way of hard cash — to convince him that the city should go it alone.

"If there was not sufficient response we should investigate the opportunity to have someone develop it commercially," he said, adding: "We own an attraction and all we have to do is revitalize it. It is not an attraction we should lightly discard."

So don't be surprised, you Crystal-lovers out there, if City Hall passes the hat around any day now.

And finally, here's a suggestion for Pollen, Bawlf et al. If the arboretum ever comes about, how about getting Johnny Weismuller, the original screen Tarzan, to perform the opening ceremony?

After all, he swam in the original Crystal pool. Maybe he could wing through the arboretum on tropical lianas.

Thirties' Echo Heard by Jews From the UN

By W. GUNTHER PLAUT

(Dr. Plaut is rabbi of Holly Blossom Temple in Toronto. This article was written for The Globe and Mail.)

ANGRY ISRAELIS hurl body of dead Arab terrorist from window of apartment in town of Beit Shean raided by terrorists this week. Four terrorists died in attack in which three Israelis were slain and 20 injured. Bodies of the attackers were later burned by angry crowd.

Historians of tomorrow will come to assess last week's appearance of Yasser Arafat, head of the Palestine Liberation Organization, as a tragic moment for the United Nations. The days of the nineteen-thirties are being re-enacted: the international community standing by while a lone and isolated country is offered for sacrifice.

A New Majority

Twenty-seven years ago the Assembly voted to establish an independent Israel. Now, a generation later, a new majority gave thunderous applause to a man who called for an end to that very Israel. For when all the rhetoric is passed, that is what Arafat advocated and the majority acclaimed.

No wave of emotionalism can hide the bitter fact that the dream of an international forum and instrument for the development of peace is once again in danger of being shattered beyond repair. This — and not the dramatic appearance of the PLO leader and the publicity surrounding it — was the real core of the historic events which transpired in New York last week. The existence of Israel, affirmed and created by the UN in 1947, is in the process of being denied its legitimacy in 1974.

Arafat is the head of the PLO, which in itself comprises a number of subgroups, the philosophies of which are in sharp contrast to one another. The largest of these is El Fatah (which Arafat heads). Its philosophy is the least ideological and the most pragmatic of all the groups, while others, such as the Popular Front and the Arab Liberation Front, stress Marxist or Maoist revolution as a prerequisite for the establishment of a Palestinian state and consider it merely the opening wedge of revolution in all Arab countries.

It is noteworthy that the PLO — although officially praised by all Arab nations and recognized by the recent Rabat summit meeting of the Arabs as the legitimate representative of the Palestinians — is denied effective presence in all Arab countries contiguous to Israel.

Only in Lebanon

The PLO cannot establish military camps in Egypt; it is proscribed in Jordan; and even from Syria, with which it is ideologically most compatible, it is forbidden to mount guerrilla campaigns against Israel.

Its only foothold is in southern Lebanon, in what is commonly called Fatah Land, an area which the Lebanese army cannot control, though if it had a choice it would most certainly like all other neighboring Arab countries evict the PLO.

None of the states tolerates the PLO at home, for its presence would endanger their own regimes. Approving the PLO as representatives for an as yet non-established state and giving it ample funds for propaganda and terrorist activity, is the Arab states' method of endorsing a principle without having to apply it in their own countries.

It is also well to remember that the PLO only claims to represent the Palestinians in Gaza and on the West Bank, although there is less than certainty that a popular referendum would grant it this representative status.

There is no question that Arafat made a romantic and appealing address at the UN. Speaking of olive branch and freedom-fighter's gun makes good copy and there was much in his speech which was likely to appeal to the unsophisticated who could not hear what lay behind his phrases.

Who would not wish to approve and applaud a man who could say that "we do not wish the shedding of one drop of Arab or Jewish blood; neither do we delight in the continuation of killing, which would end once a just peace, based on our people's rights, hopes and aspirations, is finally established . . ."

'National Charter'

But what is it precisely that he means by "our people's rights, hopes and aspirations?" For this, one must go to the Covenant which at its formation the PLO in 1968 adopted as its charter. It has not been amended. As late as two years ago the final communique of the Palestinian Popular Congress reaffirms its belief in, and adherence to, the Palestine "national charter."

This charter calls for the elimination and destruction of Israel. Furthermore Article VI of the Covenant limits the number of Jews allowed in the new Palestinian state to those who lived in Palestine before 1917 (and possibly, though it is not stated, to their offspring also).

This would leave 2 to 2½ million Jews immediately homeless and make a mockery of the pious acclamation that the PLO desires a "secular democratic state" for all, with equal rights.

It is the clear understanding of the Covenant that the majority must be Arab, that the nature of the state must be Arab, and that while Arabs have national rights Jews do not. Every Arab commentary written on the Covenant makes it unmistakable that in such a state, contrary to all rhetoric, Palestinian Arabs would not be on the same footing as Jews and that preference would be given to Arab claims so that equality of rights would only be partial.

The Covenant does not speculate on the fate and future of 2½ million Jews. But with the past record other nations have established in receiving Jews in distress one can only speculate that the single place where Jews would be received, albeit mercilessly, would be the sea.

Record of Terror

It is for reasons of recognizing the clearly enunciated and never disputed claim of the PLO to destroy its country that the Israelis refuse to deal with it — quite aside from the PLO's sorry record of terror at Munich, Lod, Ma'alot and Kiryat Sheamoneh. To negotiate with the PLO for the establishment of a national entity at its own doorstep, 30 miles away from Tel Aviv and at the gates of Jerusalem, a PLO backed by Russian military equipment of the latest and most sophisticated sort, is to invite suicide by voluntary means.

Israel has declared that it is ready to negotiate with any Arab state and that it is willing to help in the creation of a Palestinian entity both in Gaza and in the West Bank — but not on the terms of the PLO, that is, by assuring its own self destruction. Yet this is what Arafat proposed, and this is what the majority of the UN members (including one member of the Canadian delegation) rose to applaud.

In his address Arafat said a number of other things worth noting.

He made constant reference to Zionism as distinguished from Judaism, and he appealed to Jews to let themselves be "liberated" by the Arabs. This invitation conjures up odious memories. Over the Auschwitz extermination camp too there was an invitation to Jews to enter for the purpose of "work and freedom." Alas, that "freedom" turned out to be death.

Further, the Arafat distinction between Zionists and Jews, now orchestrated fully by the Arab-Russian propaganda machine, is both artificial and has other dangerous byproducts. It makes it possible for a renascent Western anti-Semitism to focus on Zionists (always defined as "aggressive imperialists") and do so with abandon, when in fact the attack is squarely aimed at Jews and blatantly exploits the vestiges of anti-Semitism in the Western world.

Moscow Composition

It is important to note Arafat's assertion — and the Arab-Russian propaganda apparatus repeats this orchestration with high frequency — that the Zionists serve "imperialist aims." This is nothing but a disguised reference to the United States and reveals that the score is composed in Moscow and not in Rabat or Cairo. Aside from serving his own and his group's national ambitions, Arafat thus is also the witting or unwitting pawn of Soviet policy. For what the Russians want is a firmer foothold in the Near East, culminating in the control of the land and the sea routes surrounding the Arabian peninsula where the majority of the world's oil is located.

Israel stands squarely in the way of Soviet imperialist ambition and Arafat serves their purposes at this moment. How far the Russians will go in pressing their claims and interests cannot be predicted. Most certainly they are currently limited by their desire for detente with the United States.

It is now clear that neither the Soviet Union nor Arafat wishes peace between Egypt and Israel, or Jordan and Israel. Such a peace would of course have to recognize Israel. Both the PLO and some of the Arab states such as Iraq and Libya stand firmly on the Khartoum proclamation of an earlier Arab summit conference: No recognition, No negotiation, No peace with Israel.

But what about the "legitimate rights of the Palestinians?" The Palestinians are and always have been a reality and they do have legitimate rights. It is harder to determine what these rights, or for that matter Jewish rights, might be.

Historical precedent — like saying "this is our land" — depends on how far one is willing to turn back the clock. The Arabs want to turn it back to 1800 when there were relatively few Jews in the land, but of course as one turns the clock a little farther back one comes to total Jewish possession. This is ultimately an exercise which has no rational solution and on this basis few nations of today would have any "rights" to live in their present borders.

Took Hard Line

The fact is that for better or for worse, the ancient Holy Land knows today the presence of two peoples and two cultures, each with national aspirations, both of which need fulfilment. One thing is sure: they cannot be exercised to each others' exclusion.

It is sad but true that in the drama and tumult of Arafat's appearance at the UN, tenuous peace hopes which had just begun to come into sight, were badly injured. The Soviet Union has clearly walked off the winner, leaving all of U.S. Secertary of State Henry Kissinger's efforts a potential failure. Unfortunately, Arafat's gun was more prominent than his olive branch. He did not want to negotiate, he wanted Israel. He took a hard line and left no room for compromise.

In the face of what transpired last week it may be said that an existential and ancient fear has overcome the Jews of the world: that the events of the Thirties will be repeated while humanity, with horrified fascination, stands aside to witness a second holocaust. It is a prospect no one can relish.

Will World Stand By Again?

Sadness at Supermarket

RUSSELL BAKER

Old people at the supermarket make you feel what's the use.

Staring at 90-cent peanut butter. Taking down an orange, looking for the price, putting it back.

Old turn-of-the-century babies with 1965 dollars, remember Teddy Bears, Teddy himself, Woodrow Wilson, Kaiser Bill, Arrow collar man, flaming youth, wandering among $7 ribs, pausing at sugar at 60 cents a pound and rising.

They shop like sappers going through a mine field, like Onassis looking at new corporations for sale.

Old people dress up to go to the supermarket, but their money becomes shabbier every day, and how do you put a gloss on those old 1965 dollars they dig out of their purses for the check-out clerk?

It is sad watching them fumble through those antique old dollars, and hearing the clerk call for more.

"These ancient dollars, madam, have been heavily discounted since you were last in circulation, and are quite worthless except in great bulk."

Clerks do not utter this advice aloud to old people. It is simply implied thunderously by everybody in the country and every mouthful of food in the supermarket. Old people have a way of laboriously counting their change at the cash register and trying to engage the clerk in sociable conversation, as though asserting a bit too defensively their right to be there despite their shabby old out-of-date dollars.

Maybe only because they have no place to arrive at in a hurry to pick up a batch of the new 1974 90-cent-peanut-butter dollars.

Do old people at the supermarket care about Henry Kissinger's latest flight for peace? Does it matter to them that Republicans and Democrats are quarreling about whether the Democrats have a mandate?

And the latest economic program for ending inflation by 1977, is it of any interest to them at all?

Do they think of President Ford's meetings with Soviet leaders as news?

Perhaps so. News nowadays is largely an entertainment of flying professors, pointless quarreling among telegenic careerists, posturing theorists and Presidential travelogues, and old people rely heavily on television for entertainment.

Old people at the supermarket make you wonder about all those middle-aged people who are jogging the streets to preserve their vascular systems for another 50 years.

And about all the people of all ages over the country who are eating less, drinking less, smoking less, driving safer, and in general looking for a deathproof safety suit to get them over the peak years and down into the valley of old age fit to enjoy the fruits of their abstention and labor.

Will anyone care when they get there?

Will they be able to afford an orange?

And if not, will professors quit flying for peace, politicians cease thumping their clavicles, theorists stop forecasting milennia for the next generation and presidents forego red-carpet arrivals at distant airports long enough to say, "Hey, old people in this country still have a hell of a problem; let's close the circus long enough to do something about it?"

Old people at the supermarket are being crushed and nobody is even screaming.

Old people at the supermarket make you feel what's the use.

'Hostage' Arouses Irish Dander

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

The Camosun College, theatre arts program has made its debuut before the public with a production at Open Space of Brendan Behan's The Hostage.

Or perhaps it would be more factual to say that director Maurice Harty has freely used the Behan script as a lively vehicle for his students and guests.

I suspect that the author's Irish dander might be somewhat roused by the liberties taken.

Not that the play, which continues tonight and Sunday in the Fort Street loft theatre, fails to entertain. It has been directed and is acted with verve, assurance, good tempo and pace.

The trouble is the matter of truth to the playwright's intent.

When Behan assembled his dilapidated gaggle of people in the run-down Belfast bawdy house, he was writing about the pitiful attempts of humanity to cope with situations it creates for itself; its good humor, warmth and cruelty; it's irrational and twisted logic.

The drumbeat of death is a constant accompaniment to the ribaldry, anger and intermittent high spirits that precede the taking of the British soldier hostage.

It is a play full of poetry of an earthy, typically Gaelic kind. And this group of actors, I am convinced, could have played it that way, rather than skittering about on its surface as they do.

The music that is a homogenous, impulsive element in Behan's original script, is replaced with arbitrary and artificial inserts fragmenting the production into a kind of poor man's Broadway epic.

As for the actors, there are excellent performances by Margaret Martin as the keeper of the house and by young richly talented Hank Stinson as her old gimp-legged almost-husband.

Glynis Leyshon and Barry Grimshaw sustain well-developed characterizations and Jean-Paul Destrube is superbly consistent, reminding us that there are no small parts that a good actor will not flesh out.

Michael Reid, who possesses a wonderfully expressive face and body and great powers of concentration, makes the small role of the volunteer on guard over the hostage, a standout.

Worth noting also, are Rupert Downing as the hostage, Sandra Thomson as the compassionate skivvy, Brian Tremblay as the rigid IRA officer and Peter Montgomery as Monsewer, the round-the-bend bagpiper.

For the play, which is to be repeated next weekend and Dec. 6, 7 and 8, considerable improvement has been made to the seating and lighting at Open Space.

Second Try On Computer Privacy Law

A second try to have computer privacy legislation passed by the B.C. legislature was made Friday by Hugh Curtis (SC—Saanich and The Islands).

His first attempt in the spring sitting of the house died on the order paper along with other bills of private members.

Curtis said outside the house he will continue campaigning for protection of individuals from unauthorized disclosure of personal information filed in a government computer bank.

At present, he said, there is little or no protection against abuses "knowingly or unknowingly."

His bill would apply to all electronic data processing information compiled by the government or its agency.

ICBC Using 'Strongarm' Tactics

The government is trying "strongarm" tactics with its Motor-Vehicle Act amendment that would allow driver's licence suspensions for non-payment of Autoplan bank loans, Socred Don Phillips said in the legislature Friday.

At one point he accused Transport Minister Robert Strachan of "throwing his principles out the window" to make the Insurance Corp. of B.C. work.

But at the request of committee chairman Hartley Dent (NDP-Skeena) Phillips withdrew the remark.

Phillips said the amendment would not only deny individuals the right to drive because they had not paid up their bank loans arranged through Autoplan, but it would cause hardship to the wives and families of those who drive for a living.

"Ground the family car if you have to, that's OK," Phillips told Strachan. "But never in the history of any province or any jurisdiction has the right to drive been cancelled because of a debt incurred to a bank."

Bob McClelland (SC-Langley) asked Strachan to pull the bill and reconsider it. "The attorney-general would never allow this bill to go through," he added.

He reminded the government of its position when in opposition in favor of those who could not be licensed because they could not be insured by private insurers.

Liberal leader David Anderson called the amendment the "Royal Bank benevolent act" because the scheme for lending money for Autoplan insurance was worked out with that bank.

He said it was a special provision for the Royal Bank so it would no longer need the services of a collection agency to get payment on defaulted loans for insurance policies.

The amendment gives the bank "muscle" against those two made only a down payment on their insurance in order to get their licences, Anderson said.

"This is not available to any other creditor in B.C. except ICBC itself," Anderson stated.

The government's arrangement with the Royal Bank was an unwise move in the first place: "We say stick it to the Royal Bank if they are dumb enough to get into an arrangement with you."

Admiral Named

MONTREAL (CP) — Admiral John C. O'Brien has been appointed general manager of revenue of the orginizing committee of the 1976 Olympics, it was announced Friday. Mr. O'Brien, 56, was born in Montreal and joined the Canadian navy in 1937 after studying at Kingston Royal Military College.

Hall Wins Land Law Wrangle

Opposition members Friday accused the government of setting itself above its own law, but Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall squelched the attack by showing they hadn't done their homework.

Conservative and Social Credit members charged an amendment to the Laws Declaratory Act would excuse the Crown from local registration of land use or development; planning, construction, alteration, servicing, use or maintenance of improvements as defined by the assessment Act.

Bob McClelland (SC — Langley) said the government should not place itself above local planners and councils and should "stop riding on the backs of local taxpayers."

Hugh Curtis (S C — Saanich and The Islands) said the amendment represents a double standard that no government should be permitted.

McClelland asked the bill be withdrawn for reconsideration.

Then Hall explained the provision had been contained in legislation for 20 years, citing 1972 and 1973, but it had been omitted when the law was revised earlier this year.

Opposition members said that was no excuse for slipping it back in the omnibus Statute Law Amendment Act 1974 No. 2.

Scott Wallace (PC — Oak Bay) said the amendment was "devastating," making a mockery of municipal legislation.

The amendment passed committee of the whole house.

Hospital Bargaining Plan Studied

Labor Minister Bill King said Friday he is studying contents of the Blair report on hospital negotiations but would not be in a position to disclose details until all parties had digested it.

Bert Blair was appointed under the inquiry provisions of the Labor Code Aug. 27 to make recommendations dealing with union negotiations at Kelowna Hospital, and proposals leading toward an improved or more viable system for bargaining at all public hospitals in B.C.

"I would expect some profound changes coming out of the report," King said, referring to the document as a "far-reaching report."

He said there had been problems of local interpretation of collective agreements negotiated on a provincial basis for local hospital negotiations in different parts of the province, although the Blair report centres on contract bargaining on behalf of Hospital Employees Union Local 180 at Kelowna.

Other unions involved are the Health Sciences Association, Registered Nurses and Operating engineers.

It would be several weeks, King said, before his department would take steps arising from Blair's report.

Bridge Bids Reliability Questioned

Reliability of bids for highway construction projects was questioned Friday by Highways Minister Graham Lea commenting on a $1.75 million saving by his department through rejecting the low tender on a new bridge.

Lea said bids on a new crossing of the Kootenay River at Taghum, five miles west of Nelson, had come in some $2 million over estimates.

Partly for that reason, he said, the department decided to change the highway alignment slightly to avoid the long bridge envisaged and substitute a much shorter crossing.

It will be built a short distance downstream from the existing 60-year-old structure, approaches will be built up, and an overpass constructed over railway tracks. New highway already built at the site will be used for local access only.

Lea said the low tender his department turned down was almost 75 per cent above the estimate. All tenders were "very high" and plans were then reviewed.

"It makes me wonder if we are getting true estimates these days," Lea commented, suggesting high bids may be put in by contractors using the excuse of "inflation."

"It is true they are paying more for their supplies and labor, but maybe they are making a larger marginal profit than before," Lea said.

The Marks & Spencer Story. Part II. The Label.

An unusual story. An unusual store.

Why on earth, when we have a brand new store full of beautiful, inexpensive, quality clothing for the entire family, would we devote an entire page to telling you about our label?

It's because this label represents something quite unique in terms of quality, value and guaranteed satisfaction.

St Michael

Our exclusive brand: your money-back guarantee.

Everything Marks & Spencer sells carries our exclusive St. Michael label. It's your guarantee of total satisfaction and we are glad to accept full responsibility for every garment bearing it. Why? Because we ourselves specify how each St. Michael garment is made.

How it begins.

Once we at Marks & Spencer decide to produce a garment for sale, we first specify the fabric. We then subject our fabric choice to laboratory tests to ensure it will behave properly in wear. Once the fabric and selected components—buttons, zippers, thread and trim—meet our high standards of quality control, we have the garment made up. We specify where reinforcement will go. How deep pockets will be. What type of needles will be used. Even the number of stitches to the inch.

The torture tests.

The finished garment then goes back to the lab where it is subjected literally to torture on machines designed for the purpose. It's washed and beaten, it's stretched and rubbed and pulled. It's tested for colorfastness, stress, washability, resilience, comfort, fit and durability. Then, a panel of people report back to us very critically on how the garments perform in real life. How they feel, how they fit, and how they behave when worn.

Only when a garment passes every one of our tests successfully does it earn a St. Michael label, and only then is it made available in a Marks & Spencer store.

Size 12 is always size 12.

Simply look at the St. Michael label and you'll find all of the relevant measurements. Then, when you find the size that fits you, you'll find that every other garment of that size in every Marks & Spencer store will fit you too. We don't depend on different manufacturers' ideas of sizing—we specify all our sizes ourselves.

That's why our sizing is as consistent as our quality.

Your new Marks & Spencer.

Shopping at your brand new Marks & Spencer store will be . . . an unusual experience. The store will look different. It's geared to be nothing but straightforward and honest. There are no flashy displays—instead, you'll find plenty of space to take the crush out of crowds. The sales girls and their attitudes will be different too. Because they are very special people trained to know their customers and their stock.

They're nice people too, who courteously stand back until you want assistance, then, they're right there to help you.

And now an invitation.

We'd like to prove to you that quality and service aren't things of the past. That value still exists. We'd like to have you visit us. That visit could be the beginning of a beautiful friendship.

Boilermen 'Threatening' Industry

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of the Construction Labor Relations Association (CLRA) said Friday the current strike by boilermakers threatens to disrupt the entire construction industry and affect the whole economy of B.C.

Charles Connaghan accused the Boilermakers' Union of "sitting in the weeds" by rejecting a settlement already accepted by all other building unions.

Connaghan sounded his warning after the boilermakers Union gave notice Thursday its members might soon begin picketing construction sites throughout the province.

The boilermakers have been involved in a contract dispute since their previous agreement with CLRA expired April 30.

Boilermakers employed by CLRA firms went on strike Monday but have refrained from setting up picket lines.

Addressing a meeting of the Vancouver Island Construction Association in Victoria, Connaghan said an agreement signed by the boilermakers with three independent eastern Canadian companies is vastly inferior to the one being offered by CLRA contractors.

"But having committed themselves to the eastern companies, the boilermakers' union officials here find themselves boxed in," he said.

"Our offer to the boilermakers amounts to a package rate of $11.40 per hour and that means $1,744 a month," he added.

Union business agent Don Vinoly said "nothing seems to be forthcoming from CLRA so their contractors should be prepared for imminent picket lines in the very near future."

However, he refused to state when the union would begin picketing construction sites.

The union is seeking a 14-month agreement with a total increase of $1.74 an hour as compared with CLRA's offer of a package increase of $2.90 an hour in wages and fringes over two years.

Vinoly said CLRA's last proposal called for the first increment increase to be paid on the day of signing of a new agreement rather than being paid retroactively to May 1, the date from which other construction unions received their increases.

Gets Tour Card

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (CP) — Dan Halldorson of Brandon, Man., carded a final-round 77 Friday and barely qualified for the Professional Golfers' Association tour.

Halldorson's over-all total of 589 for two 72-hole tournaments placed him in a tie for 18th spot. Only the top 18 and ties will recieve PGA cards.

41 Face Yule Eviction

SURREY (CP) — About 20 mobile home owners in this Vancouver suburb have been forced into a pre-Christmas panic to find a new place to live.

The families were issued with eviction notices after municipal council ordered the Delta Motel and Trailer Court's business licence revoked for health and safety violations.

The notices say the families totalling 41 persons must leave by Dec. 31, but most are threatening to stay because they can find no place to go.

"I don't know what to do in mid-winter," said Frank Jilek, who lives with his wife and daughter on $71 a week unemployment insurance.

"What place can you find in mid-winter? Nobody moves."

Jilek's frustrations were echoed by other tenants, who have been searching for vacant mobile home pads in the lower mainland without success.

Always at a premium, all vacant spaces are reserved by dealers for new mobile homes, the tenants say.

They fear they will have to sell their own mobile homes at a loss and either buy a new mobile home or join other tenants searching for standard rental accommodation when apartment vacancy rates in Greater Vancouver are about .03 per cent.

The tenants will meet with a lawyer Nov. 26 to discuss their plight, Frank Izzard, president of the Surrey Tenants Association said.

The municipality has some responsibility for relocation, which would cost between $700 and $1,000 a family, providing alternate space can be found, he added.

The court's licence was revoked after a year of inspections and reports by municipal officials, which cited poor electrical wiring and vulnerability of water pipes to contamination.

Additionally, municipal officials complained that the 20 mobile homes on the one-acre site were nearly double the permitted density.

A spokesman for court owner Rose Mah of Vancouver said it would be too expensive to upgrade the motel unit on the property and that lowering the mobile-home density would make rents uneconomical.

The owner instead decided to allow its business licence to be revoked.

Loggers Like Price Boost

The British Columbia Independent Logging Association says it favors efforts to raise the price of wood chips but doesn't like all the terms of the Timber Products Stabilization Act.

The association said in a news release Friday it did not ask for government controls on the pricing of wood chips, although it did ask for short-term measures to bring up the price.

The act, still before the legislature, would raise the price paid to independent sawmill operators for residual wood chips which are used in making pulp.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Two men each charged Monday with serious offences were remanded to next week for election and plea when they appeared in provincial court Friday.

Richard Wayne Steele, 18, of 1040 Rockland, charged with attempting to murder Michael Mayall, of 640 Linden, by running over him with a motor vehicle on Monday, having sexual intercourse with a 20-year-old Victoria woman without her consent and stealing a motor vehicle, was remanded to Tuesday.

And Douglas Stanley Halstead, 22, of no fixed address, was remanded to next Thursday on a charge of confining a Victoria man, extracting $20 from the petty cash at Thomas Plimley Ltd., and stealing a car from the Plimley firm.

Liquor was blamed by a 20-year-old man for his offence of stealing two oil paintings.

Randall George Porter, 1900 Mayfair, pleaded guilty to stealing the paintings, worth $40 each, from Mt. Tolmie Ridge Apartments, where he lives.

He was fined $200 for the offence, which occurred Oct. 11.

Porter told the court, "I would never intentionally steal anything ... that evening I was under the influence of alcohol."

"I think this has probably been a severe lesson for you," Judge William Ostler told Charlotte Edith Slater, 20, of 2240 Oregon, when she was sentenced for two counts of fraud and for one count of attemtped fraud.

Slater, who earlier pleaded guilty, was fined $50 for each offence.

She used stolen credit cards to buy $64 worth of goods from Woodward's and to buy goods valued at $44 from Simpson-Sears.

She also tried to buy four pairs of slacks from The Bay, but left the store when a clerk made a phone call to check the credit card.

The offences occurred earlier this month.

Harry Smith, 66, of Victoria, was given a suspended sentence and six months' probation for causing mischief by breaking 13 windows Dec. 30, 1973, at the Harbour Light Hostel, 516 Yates.

Smith, who was found guilty, was also given concurrent one-day jail terms for failing to appear in court earlier on the charge and for failing to report to the police station.

The windows were valued at $466.

Russell Durocher, 17, of 655 Douglas, was given a one-day jail sentence and put on a year's probation for taking a car without the owner's consent.

Durocher was also given suspended sentences for driving without a driver's licence and a driver's certificate.

He had taken a car from The Empress parking lot Nov. 9, but later left the car when it boiled over on the Pat Bay highway at the Sayward intersection.

Saanich police, who saw Durocher about half a mile from the car, found he had the car keys when they questioned him the following day.

In drug cases, a 20-year-old woman was fined $450, put on probation for six months and given two concurrent one-day jail terms for three drug offences.

Gudrun Barbara Steffen, 2810 Graham, earlier pleaded guilty to two counts of possessing a narcotic and to one count of possessing a restricted drug.

Police found eight bags of marijuana, five marijuana cigarettes, one pill box of marijuana, seven pieces of hashish and two capsules of MDA when her purse was checked Nov. 1 in the 1100-block Langley.

Richard Roberts, 23, of no fixed address, was fined $75 for possessing marijuana.

William Herbert Badger, 18, of Esquimalt, was fined $100 for possessing MDA.

Members of the drug squad found a vial containing three capsules of what Badger said was MDA in a downtown Victoria hotel Friday.

Douglas Kelly Westman, 17, of no fixed address, was remanded to Tuesday for further hearing on a charge of trafficking in marijuana Aug. 24.

Bernard Smith, 21, of 7316 West Saanich, was fined $75 banned from driving for three months and put on six months' probation for impaired driving. He was ordered to take a counselling course for impaired drivers if required by a probation officer.

Smith was also given a suspended sentence and put on a $250 peace bond for driving without a driver's certificate, and was fined $25 for not having a driver's licence.

A Bearable Year

CHURCHILL, Man. (CP) — For polar bears and people, who haven't always got along together in this Hudson's Bay seaport, it wasn't a bad year.

The troublesome fall migration season is about over and conservation officer Paul Rod says there have been no reported conflicts of two-legged and four-legged inhabitants.

Eight potentially-dangerous animals had to be shot. Another 11 were airlifted out of harm's way. The fact that an incinerator has replaced the local garbage dump also has helped.

There's a major inland denning area south of Churchill to which the polar bears retire before the ice moves out of the bay.

Trouble tends to begin when the bears emerge from the dens late in the short summer season and wander back to the coast — only to find miles of open water barring their way to the Arctic ice floes.

Churchill is right on the migration route and some residents have been mauled when running afoul of the bears while they scavanged around the dump. Six years ago a child was killed after stumbling across a reclining animal on a bush path.

Some bears haven't been too anxious to dash off across the barrens after unloading but the blast of a flare gun usually sends them on their way. And some prefer to hang around the bright lights of Churchill — a sow and two cubs deposited 300 miles away padded their way back in 18 days.

Since the relationship between Churchill and the bears is likely to be a continuing one, conservation officers frequently lecture school children and adults about how to live with the animals.

"Churchill is probably the most unique place in the world as far as polar bears are concerned because it brings the bears and a large community of people together," said Rod.

"Polar bears are certainly one of Manitoba's finest natural resources but also about the hardest to manage."

RCMP Force 'Unwarranted'

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Federation of Civil Liberties and Human Rights said Friday it has gathered new evidence that indicates that the RCMP used unwarranted force in breaking up a demonstration on Parliament Hill Sept. 30.

The demonstration was staged by the Native Peoples Caravan. Some members of the Communist Party (Marxist-Leninist) also took part.

In a press release Friday, the federation said it has arranged a meeting with Solicitor-General Warren Allmand to present the new evidence and to renew its demands for an independent public inquiry into their accusations.

Woman Charged In Stabbing

Marilyn Joan Frank, 23, of Vancouver was remanded to Jan. 6 on a charge of non-capital murder when she appeared in Nanaimo provincial court here today.

She is charged in the death of Clarence Frank Wells, 42, of Richmond, whose body was found Wednesday on a fishboat moored in Nanaimo. He had been stabbed in the chest and had been dead about a week when found.

A psychiatric examination was ordered for Ms. Frank.

The Banana Belt Bunch

More Fugitives From Snowfields Prefer Living on Wheels in City

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

The gypsies have come to Victoria.

Not the kind who have dark flashing eyes and dance around campfires.

The kind who are Saskatchewan farmers and Newfoundland secretaries and Kamloops truck drivers, all in search of a mild snow-free winter in Canada's banana belt.

There is a whole community of them living in the Inn City Trailer Park on Seymour Avenue one of the few trailer parks close to downtown.

Officially the park is for tourist camping, with stops of five to seven days, but this year most people seemed to have settled for the winter.

There are 45 trailers there this week, compared with about 20 this time last year, according to park manager William Popowich.

He said he gets four or five calls a day from people looking for a place to park their trailer.

Like many in the park, the Popowichs are escaping from Saskatchewan winters.

They came two months ago and took charge of the trailer park in return for free use of the manager's residence.

Other residents pay $85 a month to set down their trailer or motor home and hook it up to water, sewerage and electricity.

People in this mini-community come from across the country, but they seem to make friends quickly and do a lot of visiting between trailers.

Hazel Patrick of Cornerbrook, Newfoundland, has been here since the end of September and still hasn't found work yet as a medical secretary.

She's pretty well given up hope of finding a house.

Mrs. Patrick spent her first week in Victoria at the Red Lion Inn and answered every house ad that appeared in the papers, with no success.

No one wanted to rent to a woman with two small King Charles spaniels. She bought a second-hand trailer so she wouldn't go broke paying hotel bills.

Darleen Thiedt of Whitehorse, Yukon Territory, came with her husband and four children in September expecting to settle here.

Now they're planning to go back north.

"We found the housing prices here so out of reach we had to forget it," Mrs. Thiedt said.

The family has ended up living packed into their small trailer, with the children going to nearby schools. The family funiture which was shipped down remains stored in Vancouver and will have to be shipped back to Whitehorse.

"For the wages here your cost of living is much too high," Mrs. Thiedt said.

Her take-home pay as a nurse in the Yukon was more than her gross pay here.

Jack and Bertha Anderson, farmers from Arelee, Saskatchewan, are enjoying their first winter here.

Anderson isn't looking for work, and has been spending the last few weeks in the legislature listening to the debates.

"Why take jobs away from B.C. people who need them?" he says.

The Andersons, who leave the farm for six months each year, spent a month at the trailer park last winter.

There were only about a dozen trailers there then, they said, and many were Saskatchewan people like themselves. This year there seem to be more B.C. people in the park because of the housing crisis, Anderson said.

Their next door neighbors on both sides are teachers working in the city.

Martin Doree of Kamloops is one of several students living in the park this winter.

His trailer provides cheap accommodation, and when he's through at the University of Victoria he can just hitch up his home and move on.

Only thing he misses at the trailer park is not having a phone, and having to rely on one phone for the whole park.

The telephone company considers the residents transients, so won't install phones, said Doree.

Disappearance of Marine Life Alarms B.C. Ecological Chief

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

The new head of B.C.'s ecological reserve programs says marine life in tidal zones needs protection.

Various forms of marine life around B.C. shores are slowly but systematically being depleted, says Bristol Foster, who gave up his job as director of the Provincial Museum to administer a program that sets aside samples of endangered flora, soil and animal life in natural laboratories.

He listed as an example the abalone in Barkley Sound.

"A year-and-a-half ago you had no trouble in finding abalone," he said. "Now they are getting difficult to find as the number of hunters increase."

He also noted that the Japanese today are havesting sea urchins off the west coast of the island. The depletion of these animals would affect the food chain, he said.

"The day may also not be far off when Japan may seek to harvest our blue mussels," he added. "All this is going to affect life in inter-tidal and sub-tidal zones."

FOSTER
. . . time running out

Foster said the matter of providing legislation to protect marine life in inter-tidal zones is complicated because it involved federal and provincial jurisdictions.

"Something will have to be worked out by the two governments," he said.

Foster is equally concerned at the vast changes in the province's environment.

"Never have so few people done so much change to such a new area (the province) in such a short time," he said. "And change is moving at an ever-increasing pace."

"Take Vancouver Island for example," he added. "In 20 years there won't be any virgin forest left except in parks. The island today is criss-crossed by roads. Hundreds of creeks and rivers have changed."

He noted that Tsusiat, Hobitan and Squalicum lakes in the Nitinat area, to be included into Pacific Rim National Park, will be the only natural, untouched low level lakes on the south half of the island.

"The trouble is when man cuts the forest, he generally replants the land with one or two species — on land which once produced 30 species," he said. "as he simplifies, he destroys the complexity of nature and wipes out species.

"So we are losing species at an unknown rate," he added. "The world is losing its genetic diversity."

This was why the setting aside of land as ecological reserves was important today, Foster said.

"They provide a benchmark against which the environment altered by man may be compared," he said. "They also protect life forms endangered by man."

He noted that since the Ecological Reserves Act was approved in 1971, 55 reserves had been created and 65 others are under consideration.

They ranged from virgin stands of Douglas fir to windswept bird islands off the west coast of the island.

Foster said B.C. was the first province to enact an ecological reserve act.

"Quebec is now expected to pass a similar act," he said. "One state in Australia is also showing an interest in doing the same and is asking us for information.

Ald. Joe Bourque of Saanich is looking for residents who have been left off the municipality's voters' list.

Bourque, chairman of Saanich council's legislative committee, said that because of the re-enumeration of voters, some residents may have found themselves unable to cast their ballots in last Saturday's municipal elections.

Under an amendment to the B.C. Municipal Act, all municipalities were required to make up new voters' lists which were to include all residents—both property owners and tenants.

Enumerators called on most residents and left application cards where the residents were not at home.

Bourque said the responsibility for getting on the voters' list now rests with the resident.

He asked anyone who is not sure whether or not they are on the list to call Saanich Municipal Hall at 386-2241.

Pollen Asks 'Discipline' On Educational Costs

The provincial government should impose a "disciplined budgetary process" on various educational agencies and force them to co-ordinate their activities, Mayor Peter Pollen said today.

Pollen said the Victoria community should be able to induce capable people to run for election as school trustees, people who would be able to keep educational costs from "skyrocketing."

"But if they can't, and they don't seem to be able to, then the provincial government should step in."

Pollen said the school board, Camosun College, the Greater Victoria Library Board, the University of Victoria and the newly-created Community Resource Boards are all competing in various areas of education in an "uncoordinated way."

"Each of these agencies is building library services, each is developing night courses and each is demanding a larger share of the tax resources," the mayor said.

"If this continues, the community will go bankrupt and it's also obvious that some co-ordinating and responsible authority must impose a financial discipline on these agencies."

Pollen was reacting partly to an expected increase of 30 per cent in the Greater Victoria School Baord budget, and a 58-per-cent increase in Camosun College's budget.

Pollen earlier described the candidates in last week's school trustee election as "appalling."

School trustee Walter Donald countered by saying the mayor had never been to a school board meeting and "how would he know what is required of a school trustee?"

But Pollen said today his description of the candidates was not meant as a personal description," because I don't know them."

"But they are appalling in their lack of definition of the problems of education and what they're going to do about them."

Visitors on Rise

A record 176,107 visitors have toured the Legislative Buildings this year, Public Works Minister Bill Hartley said Friday.

The steady increase, compared to 145,357 last year and 87,015 in 1972, is attributed to a "growing public interest in seeing the legislature in session."

Hartley said most visitors expressed approval with the $5 million restoration project in progress.

Increase also included higher number of school student visits, he said.

Chief Asked to Report On Student's Findings

Victoria police chief Jack Gregory has been asked to submit written comments on the controversial Teskey report on the city police force.

The request was made Friday at a meeting of the full Victoria Police Board.

The report, written by University of B.C. second-year law student Kenneth Teskey, 22, details his impressions while a special constable on the force last summer.

The board unanimously supported remarks made by its chairman, Mayor Peter Pollen, who earlier declined to make the report public.

Pollen said the report only dealt with "routine police procedures" which were of "little interest" to the public.

The board will review the matter at its next meeting Dec. 18.

Teskey has refused to release his report because he says the "people who can do something about it" have the document. He also didn't want to jeopardize the program of hiring law students as summer constables.

Teskey's report mentioned low morale, understaffing, inadequate uniforms and overused cars.

VICTIM NAMED

Victoria police have released the name of a man on crutches who died at 7 a.m. Friday, 45 minutes after he was hit by a B.C. Hydro bus at Douglas and Pandora.

He was Andreas Lampert, 717 Pandora.

Lampert, a one-legged retired millworker moved to Victoria a few years ago after a long career with MacMillan Bloedel in Port Alberni.

Sparks to Fly at Hearing

Hot and heavy debate is expected at a Saanich public hearing Monday when Colquitz residents take aim at a plan to build 305 housing units in the Interurban-Marigold district.

An indication of the strong opposition nearby residents are expected to mount against the project of provincially-owned Dunhill Development Corporation was given at a meeting Thursday in St. Joseph's church hall on West Burnside.

At the meeting the project was attacked as certain to cause problems of traffic, schooling and esthetics.

Monday's hearing begins at 7:30 p.m.

Needed by Barrett, an Ear for Echoes

ONCE IN THE AGE OF INnocence when practically every British Columbian who wasn't a Liberal was a Conservative, a cynical old codger undertook to define a socialist for me.

"He believes that what's yours is his," this beer parlor pundit declared, "and that what's his is his own."

The struggling little Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, a party born of adversity and nursed through its formative years by some very fine Canadians, held a loftier view of both human nature and the socialist intent.

"To each according to his need — from each according to his ability." That was CCF doctrine, reiterated in the flea-bag halls where the faithful gathered to share the vision and the dream.

It was a noble doctrine, and as a needy young hireling of the capitalistic press assigned to cover those meetings, I knew CCF effectives who practised it in their daily lives. The elder Winch for instance and if ever a politician deserved party sainthood, that good man did.

But not every dream can survive the harsh daylight of reality. The CCF became the NDP, the New Democratic Party became our provincial government, and increasingly these days, I catch a mocking echo from the past.

The gravest threat to the Barrett government does not stem from the industries that are feeling its heavy hand, or from its own ineptitutes in office. It is implicit in the interpretation of human nature which the old fellow in the beer parlor offered as his tongue-in-cheek definition of the socialist credo.

To understand this inconsistent but very widely held attitude, it is necessary to accept the fact that true, bedrock socialism has relatively few adherents in this province.

Like the CCF before it, the NDP has its convinced stalwarts who hold firmly to the tenets of socialism, and can be depended upon to support the Barrett government in any kind of weather. But these consititute a minority, and they lacked the voting strength to sweep their party into office.

What about the others, the not-so-silent majority of voters whose collective clout sent Social Credit down the road and rocketed the NDP Opposition into the seats of the mighty?

We can speculate that the vote went as it did in protest against Social Credit, or from a widespread belief that the NDP would deal kindly with education and organized labor, or out of concern over the corporation grip on our natural resources. But whatever the combination of reasons, I find it impossible to believe that socialist conviction on the part of the electors figured significantly among them.

This is not the outraged bleat of an old-liner whose party has been relegated to the dark side of the moon. I enjoy the luxury of being about as non-political as a man can get. I also suspect that the Barrett government may be right for this province at this time, and hope that its premier will not upset his applecart by failing to recognize the nature of the governed.

In more than ample strength to dictate the outcome of the next election, we are a province of small capitalists. Not slaves of the capitalist system, but capitalists in our own right.

The change was part of the shift from a depression economy that began in the late 1930s. It was paced by the growth of the unions and accelerated dramatically by the desperate need for industrial manpower that continued through the war years into the post-war period of replenishment.

It amounted to a revolution that profoundly affected the employed British Columbian on fronts ranging from job and living conditions to sense of personal worth and status in his community.

His way was opened to possessions and luxuries that would have amazed the workers of earlier generations. He might damn the system under which these benefits accrued. But a capitalist he had become, inhabiting a climate in which the true-blue socialism of share and share alike does not flourish.

With this in mind, I suggest that the Barrett government develop an ear for echoes. British Columbians, within reason, have demonstrated their willingness to give to each according to his need. If this weren't so, no United Appeal drive would achieve its quota.

Beyond that point, we cling to the dour, capitalistic conviction that 'What's mine is (or should be) my own.'

As a detached observer, I think the Barrett government has let some badly-needed daylight into the swamp without yet treading too heavily on non-socialist toes. But the margin between reform and unwarranted trespass is narrowing and a party that would retain a working legislative majority would do well to take warning.

YOUR TAXES

By I. H. ASPER

Monday night's budget proposals will be viewed from several key angles: their direct and immediate impact on the average taxpayer, the effect on business, the long term national economic results, and their influence on federal-provincial affairs. After all that is evaluated, the country's financial and tax planning professionals will begin the process of tuning in to the benefits the budget resolutions offer.

That the average taxpayer will be happy is self-evident. A 5 per cent tax cut for 1974, rising to 8 per cent in 1975 will produce tax savings of $150 at the bottom and $500 at the top this year, and minimum savings of $200 up to $750 next year. That goes some distance, if not all the way toward using the tax system to offset the rising cost of living, particularly at the low end of the income scale.

For the middle income group, there is a tremendous incentive to save, rather than spend. A family of five can now earn $5,000 per year from interest and next year it will include dividends tax free. In a family group such as that, the annual tax saving would be in the order of $2,000 to $2,500 per year, and that offsets rising costs.

In fact, the tax incentive for saving is so strong that it may reduce consumer spending. For example, the first $1,000 of pension payments is now to the tax free and that will encourage older taxpayers to pump more into pension plans, rather than consume more goods and services; by saving $1,000 per year toward buying and furnishing one's first house, one can save tax on the $1,000, through the Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan, and the earnings of the Plan are to be tax free.

Saving, through a Registered Retirement Savings Plan has also been given a shot in the arm, in that a spouse whose earnings aren't high enough to qualify him for a $4,000 tax deductible contribution to an RRSP, can now contribute any shortfall to a plan for his wife.

A special group of taxpayers, the 250,000 Canadians who need new homes ea h year, come in for beneficial treatment. Each first-time home buyer will receive a grant of $500 toward the price of his home. The reduction of federal sales tax on building material should reduce his cost by at least $500.

The previously mentioned incentives for savings should put sufficient cash into the hands of our financial institutions to permit a substantial lowering of interest rates on home mortgages over the next few months. Even a 1 per cent interest drop on a $30,000 mortgage cuts the monthly payment by $25.

Thus, in general, the vast majority of Canadian taxpayers have reason, in their personal terms, to celebrate Finance Minister Turner's budget.

So does small business. The doubling, from $50,000 to $100,000 of the amount that they can earn at the 25 per cent tax rate before reaching the 50 per cent bracket, will put nearly $12,000 per year of additional working capital into their hands.

The provinces didn't come off too badly, either. Other than Alberta's and Saskatchewan's disappointment over Mr. Turner's decision to compromise but not abandon his insistence on federal primacy in the field of resource industry taxation, the seven have-not provinces will enjoy a $300 million increase in equalization grants from Ottawa.

So the only really contentious point about the budget is whether or not it serves Canada's immediate and long term economic interests. Here there will be much debate. It will be argued that the finance minister failed to take advantae of his field position, and elected to go for the single point rather than a field goal or touchdown, if a Grey Cup Week metaphor can be excused.

There is a real possibility that the 10 per cent corporate surtax, meaningful in May, is negative in November. Corporations will now be required to borrow more for expansion and this could slow the dropping of interest rates.

As well, the budget did not provide for the reduction in government spending that had been hoped for, but rather, slowed down the rate of increase in spending. Only time will tell whether or not the economy, and particularly employment opportunities, would have been adversely affected by more dramatic cuts in spending.

There will be disappointment in many quarters that the budget did not provide more incentives for private sector investment and expansion. Indexing of capital gains, and freeing from capital gains tax profits made by venture or risk capital companies would certainly have been helpful, at modest cost to the treasury.

And finally, unsung, undiscovered and unexplored, by the media reporting on the budget, are well over 100 changes in tax law crammed into 256 single spaced pages of proposed new law. These rather technical changes are, for the most part, beneficial to the business and investing public. They will keep tax planners busy for several months.

They require further analysis, study and, then, public comment.

On balance, then: pleasure in seeing a reasonable and responsible response to the national fiscal and economic needs, but disappointment that it did not quite go far enough, which probably means the budget proposals will find general acceptance with most Canadians.

QUEBEC INDIANS 'TAKE FUTURE IN OWN HANDS'

SEPT-ILES, Que. (CP) — The Montagnais Indians who live near this North Shore community decided "to take their future in their own hands" by forming a company to construct a $6-million commercial centre.

Recent sod-turning ceremonies for the centre at this mining town 320 miles northeast of Quebec City was the first step towards completion of that dream.

Les Galeries Montagnaises, a 280,000-square-foot, 50-store shopping centre will be located on the town's main commercial street but still on reserve land.

The centre, to be completed by the spring of 1976, will be the property of L'Immobiliere Montagnaise Ltd., a company established earlier this year by residents of two reserves at Sept-Iles and nearby Maliotenam.

Excavation work was started by Jean-Marie Vollant, 13, who operated the controls of a giant earth-mover to turn the first sod.

Paul-Emile Fontaine, band chief of the two reserves, said it was symbolic a young boy be the one to begin officially the construction, which will be for the benefit of "future generations of our reserves."

Chief Fontaine said the commercial centre "will become the most important crossroads of the region and will permit people of the area to make their purchases all under one roof.

"This commercial centre is the fruit of the initiative and of the foresight of some Indians from our house. That, I believe, is necessary to emphasize."

The project was not under government supervision and finances had to be obtained through the regular channels open to any land developer.

A company spokesman would not say where the finances did come from but was emphatic that the government did not provide funds.

"For the 1,300 Indians of Sept-Iles and Maliotenam, the realization of the Galeries Montagnaises is only the first part of a program of economic activities which will permit the population of our two reserves to take the future in hand," said Chief Fontaine.

He said plans included renovations of homes and the construction of one or more community centres "where the Indians will be able to manifest new collective activities."

The shopping centre, he said, would also be a vehicle to enhance amicable relations between the residents of Sept-Iles and the neighboring reserves.

About 350 jobs would be created with the centre's completion. A company spokesman said Indians would not be given preference for employment at the centre.

Walter Jourdain, president of L'Immobiliere Montagnaise, said the centre, with parking facilities for 1,400, would serve a population of about 50,000 persons.

Les Galeries Montagnaises will be the largest shopping centre on the North Shore and the first to feature an enclosed mall, which spreads over 38,000 square feet.

Still Trappers, Dirt Farmers Except for U.S.—Barron's

NEW YORK (CP) — Barron's, the American business and financial weekly, says it is a good bet that Canada still would be "a nation of trappers and dirt farmers" were it not for United States enterprise and capital.

Canadians might reflect on "some of the benefits of what they call American colonization," suggests the weekly, which is publishedd by Dow Jones, in an editorial sharply critical of Canadian export oil prices and moves by Canada to control its own natural resources.

Barron's concedes that it is "perhaps understandable" that Canadians want to use their energy resources for the development of their own country "rather than feed the insatiable appetite of the industrial giant to the south."

"But before they raise too many barriers to foreign capital at the 49th parallel, they might reflect on some of the benefits of what they call American colonization.

"After all, no native companies came forth to finance the Athabasca tar (Alberta oil sands) experiment, and it was Tennessee gas that launched the trans-Canada pipeline.

"For that matter, if it weren't for U.S. enterprise and capital, it's a pretty good bet that Canada would still be a nation of trappers and dirt farmers rather than one which enjoys the second-highest standard of living in the world."

Critizing the increase in Canadian oil prices to the U.S., the weekly warns that "if Canadians fix their image in American minds as 'the Arabs of the north,' they run the risk of reprisals" which could end a centuries-long tradition of fruitful collaboration.

"At the very least, they will hinder the development of resources — like the Athabasca tar sands and the Mackenzie Valley natural gas — which could be vital to both peoples.

"The so-called Third World has long been notorious for killing the goose that lays the golden eggs. Now those who should know better are sharpening the axe."

Iraq Awards Contract

TORONTO (CP) — Acres International Ltd. of Toronto has been awarded the engineering contract for a power transmission grid in Iraq.

Acres will engineer and supervise construction of the grid for the Iraq National Electricity Administration, a government agency.

The value of the Acres contract was not disclosed.

The Canadian Press erroneously reported Wednesday that the Acres contract was worth $150 million.

This is the total cost of the grid construction, not just the engineering phase which Acres was awarded.

"Scalp tension, a sign of the times, is one cause for your hair loss," says Harrison trichologist to balding man. A specialist from the famous Harrison Hair and Scalp Clinic will be here to advise men and women how to correct hair troubles by home treatment.

How to save and improve your hair demonstrated by expert here Mon. and Tues.

New home treatment methods for preventing baldness—and improving the appearance of the hair—will be demonstrated in Victoria this Monday and Tuesday, November 25 and 26.

This news was released here today by Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists. In their announcement, they named staff trichologist P. Mirosnikov to conduct the Victoria clinic. Mr. Mirosnikov will personally examine hair-worried men and women from 1:00 to 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at the Sussex Apts. Hotel.

Examine You Free

You incur no charge or obligation by seeing Mr. Mirosnikov. Your only obligation is to yourself — to free your mind of worries about hair loss, dandruff, itching or other scalp disorders, by learning how to take care of your hair. If your trouble is beyond the scope of Harrison treatment, we will frankly tell you so. But less than five per cent of the people we examine are "hopeless."

Who Can Be Helped?

We cannot help men who are slick-bald after years of gradual hair loss. But where your scalp still grows hair, we can at least improve what you have. The important thing is:

DON'T WAIT UNTIL IT'S TOO LATE !

Our biggest problem is to overcome the average man's initial skepticism. He's usually quite desperate by the time he nerves himself to see a Harrison trichologist. He's "tried everything," so he starts consoling himself with one of the old superstitutions about hair: That men naturally lose hair as they get along in years; that nothing can be done to prevent hair loss . . . and a lot of other notions that we know are not true today.

Free Scalp Examination

See Mr. Mirosnikov in person. Learn how baldness can be avoided and hair growth encouraged. The new Harrison method permits you to save and improve your hair in the privacy of your own home. For an examination and discussion of your hair problem, ask the desk clerk at the Sussex Apts. Hotel between 1:00 and 8:00 p.m. for the suite number of Mr. Mirosnikov.

Job Switch at M-B

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada's largest forestry firm, MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., is changing its form of management to let people "do their own thing," its president and chief executive officer says.

Dennis Timmis says group executives are being made responsible for running their own businesses.

"And everything doesn't have to funnel to the top of the wretched pyramid for a decision."

A number of changes are in progress, Timmis says, because the company has come to recognize that time and people change.

"People want their work to be more interesting and more satisfying and I find myself completely in sympathy with this."

Among significant changes are two experiments at company plants in New Westminster, and Thunder Bay, Ont. In New Westminster, employees are learning all the jobs in the mill and regularly switch positions for variety. The program was initiated with the co-operation of the International Woodworkers of America.

At Thunder Bay, all workers at a new plant will be salaried and will have a chance to improve their skills, move around to avoid monotony and earn the maximum rate of pay. If successful, this experiment will be extended to B.C. mills, after IWA consultation.

Timmis says the company is paying particular attention to equal rights and opportunities for women.

"It is surprising how little you realize the extent of discrimination until you look into it," Timmis said after meeting a committee of women employees to discuss recruiting and promotion.

"We actually had a separate recruiting office for women," he said. "We have straightened all that out along with the posting procedures for jobs.

"A number of women have been promoted into supervisory roles and have moved into hourly-paid jobs that had been traditionally held by men," he said. "We have women on the mill green chains and involved in logging operations."

LOOKING AHEAD AT TAXES

Company Cars For Private Use

The following tax tips have been prepared by Revenue Canada for the Victoria Times to assist readers to plan ahead on taxation matters.

If our civilization is really built around the automobile as many proclaim, it's not surprising that taxation, which enters almost every facet of our lives, should also encompass cars.

As employees who use company cars for their private use have found to their sorrow, such benefits are not tax free. And senior executives, to whom the fringe benefit of chauffeur-driven company cars was one way of having tax-free fun, must now pay for these status symbols.

Any employee who uses his employer's automobile to travel between his place of work and home is considered to be using it for personal purposes. Unless you're willing to drive about in a truck, ambulance or hearse, that is; "automobile" as viewed by Revenue Canada, Taxation includes none of these, but limits it to an automotive vehicle with seats for no more than 10 passengers.

Usually, if an employer requires or allows an employee to go direct from his home to a point of call other than a settled place of work (for example, a salesman visiting customers), he is considered to be on his employer's business from the time he leaves home. In such cases he will also be considered to be on his employer's business on a working day until he returns home from his last call.

Normally, for income tax purposes, the value of personal use of an employer's automobile by an employee is a portion of the total operating costs for the year. For this purpose, operating cost includes such things as licences, insurance, repairs, gas, oil, servicing charges, rentals paid by the employer for a leased automobile that is dependent on miles of use, and capital cost allowance for an automobile owned by the employer or rental paid by him for a leased automobile not dependent on miles of use.

When a chauffeur-driven vehicle is supplied for the personal use of an employee, the operating cost would also include the salary or wages paid to the chauffeur. However, where the owned or leased automobile is used substantially for business purposes, operating costs need not include capital cost allowance for the owned automobile or rental paid for a leased one not dependent on miles of use.

Where an employee pays his employer for allowing him personal use of the car, this payment reduces the benefit to be added to his income.

There's a prescribed formula for working out what are called standby charges for the number of days an employer's car was made available for personal use of employees. The result of the calculation is added to the employee's income as a taxable fringe benefit. A variation on this formula is used if the car is leased, not owned, by the employer.

The calculation is not so cut and dried when an employer has a large fleet of cars and numerous employees, or where an employer doesn't make a specific car available to an employee but sanctions use of a number of different cars out of the pool.

For the automobile salesman who uses a car provided by his employer for his personal use, there is yet another formula to be applied to estimate the amount he must add to income when filing his income tax return.

All this information is readily available from any of the 28 District Taxation Offices across Canada. If you are not within close range of one of them, ask the telephone operator to dial ZENITH 0-4000. You will have the answer as quickly as you've outlined the circumstances.

Dave's Esks Older, Super

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

VANCOUVER — Maturity is the simple difference between this year's version of the Edmonton Eskimos and the team which represented the West in the Grey Cup final last year.

That is the view of Dave Cutler, 28, Victoria's contribution to this year's classic, which will be played at Empire Stadium Sunday afternoon.

Cutler, who was No. 1 in the West in scoring for the third straight season with 144 points on 34 field goals, 32 conversions and 10 singles, describes this year's Eskimo team with football's established cliche "super." But the real difference this time around is the feeling of camaradarie within the club, he explained.

"After all, we are a year older," he said. "Our offence is intact from last year, there is an excellent team feeling, and the co-ordination has been terrific.

"This year after we won the West from Saskatchewan there was little excitement in the dressing room, compared to last season. We knew we had to beat a great club, Saskatchewan, and we did."

A wet ball and a wet field possibility doesn't bother Cutler that much although naturally "I would prefer it dry" and as for kicking off artificial turf, "it might even be better," he said. "Certainly it is a nice, flat surface and you don't have to worry about your foot wobbling on uneven ground."

Although Cutler lost the CEL record of most field goals in a season (36) to Gerry Organ of Ottawa Rough Riders this year, he is satisfied with his contribution to the Edmonton attack, and also a staunch defender of the value of field goals.

"I feel the field goal is a part of the game," he said, "and I'm a part of the team because of it."

Matter of fact his percentage in '74 was his best yet. He hit 34 out of 51 for a .667 per cent success story, and he missed only seven from inside the 45. His longest was 56 yards in Winnipeg and that's where he had the most in one game, five. In last week's Western final he contributed 13 points.

Historically, Cutler now is second in total field goals with 146 which have been accumulated over six years, whereas Larry Robinson of the Calgary Stampeders, who is the leader with 171, took 14 years to achieve his record.

Cutler feels Montreal will be a fair test indeed in the final because when the teams met earlier in the season and a 28-28 tie was the result, the Alouettes were without two of their fine defenders, Junior Ah You and Gordon Judges. In that game, too, the Esks had a lead but "tired in the final quarter." So perhaps the match-up was even and still is.

Teaching school in Victoria is Cutler's winter pastime. Last year it was physical education and Canadian history at Lansdowne which were his subjects. Before that he taught at S. J. Willis and other schools.

This year, he's not certain where his assignment will be.

"I'll take a couple of weeks off first" — but it's pretty certain that Sunday's history at Empire Stadium will be one of the first subjects demanded of him by the students. Especially if the Esks do well, more so if he does.

"It helps the kids to identify, and me, too," he once said.

Until then . . . "Well," said Cutler. "This time we feel we don't have to do a lot of talking about our ball club. We've proved ourselves for the second time. That's what I mean about maturity."

'First' for Grey Cup: Western Club Favored

VANCOUVER — The Vancouver Police Department was in its prevent-defence and holding, as this was written, and Grey Cup fever, if mounting, was still under control.

Police and security people seemingly were everywhere. Friday night Vancouver finest standing in pairs on all street corners in the Vancouver-Georgia Hotel area, site of some past Grey Cup rioting. Security forces were manning the doors and on duty in the lobbies of the hotels. Most removable objects were missing from the corridors and the foyers although the main furniture was still in place. Four-man police-car patrols were the rule rather than the exception and motorcycle policemen kept circling the four-block area, mostly travelling in pairs.

The overall mood was jovial, rather than ugly, and if there was a predominance of rooters, it was mostly from Edmonton that the songs rang out "Go, Esks, Go." As the bands came and went and played on, perhaps the fact the Montreal airport was reported snowed in accounted for the missing Alouette fans.

Meanwhile, the oddsmakers say it will be Edmonton by four points at game time Sunday, and if so this will be the first time ever that a western team has been favored in the Canadian classic.

Sensational Mark for Wilkie

But perhaps there is a reason other than the fine Edmonton record during the season for this view.

For in the past 10 years, only twice has a western team won the Grey Cup and on both occasions the game was in Vancouver: In 1971, Calgary Stampeders edged Toronto Argonauts 14-11; and in 1966, Saskatchewan defeated Ottawa Rough Riders 29-14. Besides, in six previous Grey Cup finals at Empire Stadium, the west has emerged victorious four times. The last western team to win in the east was the B.C. Lions, in 1964, and that may be a surprise to many.

The weather forecast for Sunday is mostly cloudy with a chance of showers and the temperature hovering around the 40-degree mark. And it's that chance of showers that may turn the tables either one way or another.

Edmonton, it would appear, would prefer it dry because of the phenomenal passing of quarterback Tom Wilkinson. He had a sensational 66 per cent completion score this year, with only seven interceptions, another first among the regular signal callers. In addition, the most valuable leg in football is also in the Edmonton backfield, Dave Cutler having the edge over Montreal's Don Sweet, who will be playing before his hometown fans.

Sweet, who attended high school here, became a field-goal kicker only after his third year at college, and his first at Washington State, where he had enrolled in search of a teaching degree after attending Wenatchee Junior College on a baseball scholarship. Sweet this year kicked 24 field goals, compared to Cutler's 34.

With both offensive lines considered about equal, and the defense perhaps favoring Montreal slightly because the Alouettes did lead the CFL in four separate categories during the past season, the key to a good western showing obviously rests with the most-valuable player in the league, chubby Tom Wilkinson.

Rodgers Could Upset Eskimos

If he can keep out of harm's way, and that includes the tough Montreal front four, then perhaps Edmonton can put enough points on the board to win.

Coach Ray Jauch has suggested that the final could well be a high-scoring game, and he would go with his season-long theory that if the Esks can score from 21-25 points they should be able to hold the opposition to about 16, and that would ensure a victory.

On the other hand, there is the very articulate Johnny Rodgers, runner-up to Wilkinson in the most-valuable-player balloting. He is considered by many as the possible game-breaker and rumor has it that the Alouettes, rather than using Rodgers almost solely as a pass-catching threat, where he led the league, may run him out of the backfield at times to give the Eskimos something extra to look for.

There is one other problem that has more or less been ignored in the Grey Cup picture, because of the time element involved. But in all fairness, it should be considered as well.

That concerns the announcement from the Northwest Congress of Jehovah's Witnesses that the end of the world will come at precisely 3:30 p.m. Sunday.

With the game scheduled to start at 1:30 p.m. that should bring an end to the festivities about the start of the fourth quarter. By that time, if you are interested, the Eskimos will be leading by five, about 26-21 and after that it won't matter anyway.

Will it?

BOWLER OF WEEK

Final game of 236 carried Brian Crexton to victory in seventh week of 12th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition. Rolling in Automotive League at Mayfair Lanes, Crexton also fired games of 193 and 206 for three-game total of 635 to collect men's tenpin award that qualifies him for Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs.

Vikings Chill Dinos With Tight Defence

By JIM CREBAR

University of Victoria Vikings played it cool Friday night and made their first entry on the winning side of the ledger in the Canada West University Athletic Association men's basketball league.

Vikings rebuffed a late press by Calgary Dinosaurs for a 67-54 victory at UVic gym to complete a double-header sweep by UVic teams. In the first game, the Vikettes whipped Calgary Dinnies 83-34 in a CWUAA women's game. It was the biggest total Vikettes have run up since Mike Gallo took over as coach three years ago.

Vikings have a 1-2 won-lost record while the Vikettes are 3-0 and both teams play Calgary again tonight, the women at 6:30 and the men at 8:30.

A game between UVic Jayvees and Western Washington University was cancelled Friday when the U.S. school sent word it couldn't make the trip. Jayvees arranged a game against James Bay Athletic Association of the Senior "B" men's league this afternoon.

Vikings' strong defence Friday cut off Calgary hopes of much inside shooting and Dinos failed to click from the outside.

"The first half was the best defensive half we've played this year," coach Gary Taylor said. He singled out Dave Mulcahy, Lorne Dakin and Robbie Parris as being especially effective.

Mulcahy was the game's top rebounder, grabbing 11, and scored 12 points. Dakin, a freshman from Terrace, had a big night offensively with 16 points while Parris, a freshman from Oak Bay, came up with a superb ball handling display.

Top scorer of the night was Vikings' Lee Edmondson with 20 points and an excellent 62 per cent average from the floor. Lyle Leslie, shooting 50 per cent, led Calgary with 23 points.

Marg Mainwaring led Vikettes with 18 points, shooting 53 per cent, while Lorna McHattie and Edna Ritchie added 14 each. The winners had a 35 per cent field goal average compared to 17 for Dinnies and hauled down 61 rebounds to Calgary's 25.

Dick's Hopes Last For Just 15 Laps

Dick Midgley of Victoria saw his hopes of winning the L.A. Times 500 go up in smoke during practice Friday at the Ontario Motor Speedway in California.

Owner Midgley's machine, with Hershel McGriff of Portland behind the wheel, blew its engine on the 15th lap of practice in its first real road test. McGriff wasn't hurt but the damage to the car is close to $5,000.

In the scramble for the pole position in Sunday's race, Richard Petty finished first to earn the top spot with A. J. Foyt second, David Pearson third and Bobby Allison fourth.

Rookie Continues Bid To Snatch Henri's Job

By The Canadian Press

Rookie Doug Risebrough made another strong bid Friday night for the job left open by an injury to Henri Richard.

Recalled from the minors last week after the Montreal Canadiens captain broke an ankle, Risebrough scored his first National Hockey League goal Monday night and said coach Scotty Bowman had told him Richard's job was his to earn.

The 20-year-old scored two goals Friday night to lead the Canadiens to a 7-6 victory over Kansas City Scouts.

Montreal now is tied for the Division 3 lead with Los Angeles Kings.

In other games, New York Islanders whipped the slumping Toronto Maple Leafs 6-0 and Buffalo Sabres tied Atlanta Flames 4-4.

Risebrough, who started the season with Montreal but went to Nova Scotia in the American League for conditioning, scored the Canadiens' first and last goals. Mario Tremblay, who made the trip to Halifax and back with Risebrough, also added his third goal of the season.

Pete Mahovlich, Jim Roberts, Jacques Lemaire and Yvan Cournoyer also scored for Montreal.

CUP HOCKEY CALLED OFF

Bad weather and poor field conditions have put an end to hopes of holding this season's Bridgman Cup field hockey tournament for Vancouver Island girls' high school teams.

Originally scheduled for last Sunday, the annual tournament was postponed because of rain. Slated for this Sunday, the tourney was cancelled because the soggy fields at Lansdowne Junior High School wouldn't be able to withstand the 31-game draw.

Aeros Blast Blazers

Houston Aeros added to their lead in the Western Division of the World Hockey Association Friday by whipping the Blazers 4-1 in Vancouver.

Toronto Toros, drawing 10,240 fans to Maple Leaf Gardens for the second-largest home crowd in their history, were thumped 8-2 by the sizzling Edmonton Oilers and Chicago Cougars downed Michigan Michigan Stags 5-3.

Gordie Howe, the 46-year-old veteran, put the Aeros in front with a goal two minutes into the second period at Vancouver. Jim Sherritt and John Schella added Houston tallies before Rob Walton counted for the Blazers in the third period. An empty-net goal by Frank Hughes completed scoring for the Aeros.

At Toronto, Ron Climie scored twice for the Oilers and single goals went to Steve Carlyle, Ed Joyal, rookie Mike Rogers, Bruce MacGregor, Tom Gilmore and Ken Baird.

Frank Mahovlich and Pat Hickey scored for the Toros.

Pro 'Spiel Project Interesting, But . . .

THE CURLING SCENE

By Ernie Fedoruk

If Canada's "top curlers" are planning a full-scale professional bonspiel circuit across the nation, Vancouver Island's rock-tossers haven't heard about it.

In case you missed the item earlier this week, Ontario's Paul Savage says a Canadian cash circuit will offer prize money totalling from $50,000 to $100,000 at each 'spiel.

"We're working on it," he said. The groundwork being undertaken includes the forming of an association of competitive curlers and the search for sponsors who might wish to contribute "big money."

Savage says that Warren Hanson of Calgary, Terry Braunstein of Winnipeg and Vancouver's Bernie Sparks, all veterans of national playdowns, are on the "project committee" trying to set up the tour.

None of the Greater Victoria clubs, however, have been approached.

"No, we haven't heard of it," said Playland manager Harvey Mossup.

And since a majority of the area's best competition-minded curlers were on their way to or in Vancouver for the big Totem 'spiel, it was hard to find anyone who had first-hand contact with the project.

There's one good reason why local club officials haven't been contacted. If you read between the lines of the Savage declaration, there was an inference that clubs could not possibly expect to host the big 'spiels.

Savage and his pals will need seating for spectators. Only hockey rinks can accommodate the crowds needed to support the venture. Curling clubs simply don't have the seating.

Playland's $5,400 cashpiel is the biggest on the Island, and the jump into the $50,000 bracket couldn't be achieved without strong fan support at, for example, Memorial Arena.

Victoria icemaker Harvey Hodge, who would have no trouble in drawing an invitation to join the competitive ranks, likes the idea. So does Roy Allan, who founded the Playland club and can see problems involved from both sides of the fence.

"Big arenas would be a must," said Roy. "More important, and speaking as a curler, I would object strongly if they made it a 'closed shop' insofar as entry was concerned.

Allan feels the idea won't survive if the "circuit" became a "benefit" for Canada's best 32 or 48 rinks. The originators, said Allan, would have to make sure good rinks and fringe foursomes would be allowed to participate.

Obviously, there are many obstacles to overcome. Prize money might be a primary one. The question of fan support will be raised.

Nonetheless, Savage's plan has "interesting" possibilities.

LOOSE STRAWS: Playland Men's League turned domestic this morning to cook up and serve breakfast this morning for the women in the annual Dogwood 'Spiel . . . One of the most enthusiastic curlers in the area, Gus McDonald took a step up the executive ladder by accepting a job transfer to Montreal . . . Emily Farnham's strong Saskatoon rink, which won the Canadian women's championship at Memorial Arena last spring, plans to remain intact for the 1975 playdowns . . . Back with Emily are Donna Collins, Pat McBeath and Linda Saunders . . . Everything else has a "week" and the curlers get theirs Dec. 7-14 . . . Would you believe "National Curling Week?"

Steady Tim Ready to Open Pocketbook for Partner

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

There's no assurance that next year's partner will pay the bill, but Tim Williams is quite prepared to buy the steak dinner for his present defence mate after this Western Canada Hockey League campaign ends.

No special reason except that a bet has been made and Williams' reasoning epitomizes the spirit which permeates the Victoria Cougar lineup these days.

Among the defencemen, Williams rates second in scoring, fourth in exposure and a leader in generating esprit de corps.

The 18-year-old Williams turned in 90 consecutive games as a Cougar before an ankle injury forced him to miss last Tuesday's game in Saskatoon. The hurt hasn't completely disappeared but Williams is expected to be back in the lineup tonight when the Western Division leaders go after Calgary Centennials and try for a 10th straight victory.

'Mr. Steady' of Cougars selects a stick

Until the sitout in Saskatoon, Williams' service record almost escaped notice.

But that's not the only case of neglect involving the 185-pounder. As the season evolved, Rick LaPointe, Kim Clackson and Gord Roberts dominated attention directed towards Victoria's defencemen.

But Williams has contributed greatly to Victoria's success.

He's affectionately hailed as "Stumpy" by his teammates but recognized as "Mr. Steady" by coach Pat Grinnell.

"As the way things have happened," noted Ginnell, "Tim's been operating in the shadows of LaPointe, Clackson and Roberts. But let me tell you, nobody, on defence or up front, has played any steadier than Williams."

The Manitoba-born defenceman has been teamed with LaPointe to form one of the most reliable partnerships in the league. In addition to regular assignments, both also see heavy duty as penalty-killers and on the power-play.

Williams, who played 67 games with the Cougars last season after being obtained in a trade with Flin Flon Bombers, has been averaging a point a game. He has six goals, including three power-play efforts, and 17 assists in 23 games.

He's a good skater and puck-carrier and the possessor of one of the most effective shots on the team. While he shoots extremely hard, the greater effect lies with his ability to keep his shots low.

Ginnell's training-camp decision to pair Williams with LaPointe seems to have resulted in an excellent match.

They sit side by side in the home dressing room and invariably sit together on the bus during road trips. Strategy is constantly discussed.

"Rick and I have about five plays we use," said Williams, "and it's getting to a point where we don't have to look around for each other. The plays are for faceoffs in our zone or for breakout patterns."

Communication between the two is constant. Each is quick to supply the other with onice advice, such as "Be cool . . . You've got two coming at you . . . Lotsa time . . . Dump it out . . . Behind you. . ."

They also spice their play with some rivalry.

"We made a bet for a steak dinner at the end of the season," Williams confided. "I told Rick I'd get more points than he would. Loser buys."

At the moment, LaPointe has 10 goals and 17 assists and enjoys a four-point edge over his partner.

"Playing with a guy like Rick really helps me," added Williams. "If things are not going too well for me on the ice, I find myself trying and going harder for Rick's sake.

"It's his draft year and I want to help him as much as possible.

"Next year (Williams' draft year), I hope some 18 or 17-year-old will do the same for me . . ."

Pats Climb And Aid Cats

Regina Pats gave the Victoria Cougars a helping hand Friday while giving themselves a boost at the same time.

Pats outlasted Medicine Hat Tigers 7-6 in Regina to keep the Tigers from gaining any ground on the Cougars, who will attempt to boost their Western Division lead in the Western Canada Hockey League when they tackle Calgary Centennials at Memorial Arena tonight.

Victory for the Pats, combined with Brandon Wheat Kings' 4-3 loss to Kamloops Chiefs Friday, also moved them into a second-place tie with the Wheat Kings in the Eastern Division.

Pats battled back and forth with the Tigers for the lead but didn't take final possession of it until Jon Hammond scored his third goal of the game for the Pats with just 16 seconds remaining in the contest.

In Kamloops' victory, the Chiefs outshot the Wheat Kings three-to-one in the second period as they scored three unanswered goals to take a 4-2 lead. Brandon tallied once in the final period but couldn't get any closer.

In other action Friday, Lethbridge Broncos tripped Winnipeg Clubs 6-4 behind two goals by Ron Delorme and Saskatoon Blades, who lead the Eastern Division, edged the slumping Edmonton Oil Kings 4-2.

Soggy Opening In Cricket Test

BANGALORE (AP) — The touring West Indies team scored 212 runs for the loss of two wickets on a rain-soaked field Friday on the opening day of the first cricket test against India.

The game was delayed 90 minutes by rain that had fallen throughout the day, allowing commencement of play before noon.

Dunsmuir Well Back

KAMLOOPS — Dunsmuir of Victoria, the Vancouver Island champion, has its work cut out if it mants to climb higher in the standings at the B.C. high school girls "A" volleyball championship.

Dunsmuir was in seventh place after the opening day of the ten-team, two-day tournament. On Friday, the Victoria team defeated Lumby, 15-11, 15-11, and Houston, 10-15, 15-10, 15-13, and lost to Winfield, 11-15, 11-15, Salmo, 7-15, 3-15, and York House, 8-15, 6-15, to post a 2-3 record.

100 Mile House leads the tournament with a 5-0 mark with Winfield and Salmo tied for second with 4-1 records.

Saints Fall

Saanich Westerners moved back into sole possession of second place in the Senior "A" Women's Inter-City Basketball League Friday night at Centennial Junior High.

Westerners thumped Victoria Saints 59-33 to take a two-point lead on idle Simon Fraser University. The win, the third straight for the Westerners, also moves them to within four points of league leading Vancouver Buzz Bombs.

Angie Dobie led the Westerners with 16 points while Ronni Hind had 15 for the Saints.

Indonesian Shuttle Stars Appear in Victoria Monday

Is there a future world champion among the Indonesian badminton players currently touring Canada?

That question and others should be at least partially answered Monday night when four Indonesian aces compete against Canadian rivals at the Racquet Club of Victoria.

The Victoria visit is part of the Canadian Badminton Association's eighth annual fall tour for foreign players. This one, a 20-city safari, opened Nov. 2 in Wolfville, N.S., and concludes Dec. 4 in St. John's, Nfld.

Representing Indonesia in women's matches are Theresia Widiastoeti and Imelda Wiguna. The Indonesian men playing here will be Liem Swi King and Nunung Murdjianto.

All are listed among their country's best and King, especially, has drawn rave notices for his shotmaking ability in the past year and is considered by many to be a possible successor to countryman Rudy Hartono as world champion. Hartono has been rated the world's best for the past seven years.

Scheduled to represent Canada Monday are Sandra Stevenson and Mike Epstein in women's and men's singles, brothers Geoff and Greg Harris in men's doubles, Stevenson and Mimi Nilsson in women's doubles and Nilsson and Rolf Paterson in mixed doubles.

Opening ceremonies will begin at 7:30 p.m. Monday with Mayor Peter Pollen scheduled to welcome the Indonesian delegation. Tickets may be obtained during the weekend at the Racquet Club office or at the door Monday night.

Harry Sadd And Turnbull Post Upsets

Liz-Anne Ogden will have her sights set on a second straight championship tonight when she meets Diana Rogers in the women's singles final in the Saanich Open badminton tournament.

Miss Ogden beat Diane Sluggett 11-6, 11-6 to make it to the final while Miss Rogers earned her berth by defeating Lyn Polson 11-2, 11-4.

In the men's final, fourth-seeded Harry Sadd will take on unseeded John Turnbull after both players pulled upsets Friday, Sadd defeating top-seeded Ian MacKay, 15-11, 15-10, and Turnbull trimming second-seeded Murray Foubister, 15-2, 15-6.

All finals will take place tonight, starting at 7 p.m., in the Brentwood Community Hall.

Prying Open Some Wallets

Suppose, next year some time, the media were suddenly to carry the news that, due to its deficit load, the Victoria Symphony Orchestra was facing imminent dissolution.

What would you as a member of the symphony-conscious public attempt to do about the situation?

It's fairly safe to assume that most of the more than 3,000 people who either regularly or from time to time attend concerts, including, and probably especially, students and old age pensioners, would be squeezing their resources to come up with a few dollars in the hope of saving the situation.

Even those among the reasonably well-to-do who are highly resistant to parting with any cash might be spurred to write a three-figure cheque in the face of such an eventuality.

But if this should happen next year, such actions could well turn out to be too little much too late.

The time to think about the situation is now before the problem becomes overwhelming and crushes a fine influential Victoria and island organization out of existance. Coped with before it reaches a crisis point, the solution is obviously much more easily come by.

Selfishness and apathy on the part of so many of the more prosperous citizens of this city never ceases to appal me. Within the last year or so, for instance, the Victoria Symphony as part of a fund-raising campaign canvassed two of the leading professions.

The result, shockingly, was virtually nil.

The symphony societies in Canada have been told by Canada Council director Andre Fortier that they must seek more sources of financial support.

That's a great idea and there is nothing a hard-pressed symphony board would be more delighted to uncover. But can Fortier tell us how to instil in this community at any rate, the loyalty, pride, generosity and catholicity of outlook that would permit a few dollars to leak out of well-primed bank accounts?

Victoria Symphony officials are trying hard to discover ways to help themselves. Preferring to offer something in return rather than just calling for a $50 or $100 donation, they have come up with the idea of a dinner at one of the city's most attractive downtown restaurants.

In addition to a particularly delightful menu, and a pre-dinner reception, there will be musical entertainment arranged by Laszlo Gati and prizes that include a pair of return tickets to Rome.

But when the cost of $50 a plate is mentioned, the withdrawal symptoms of the prospective purchaser sometimes astonishing. Yet if it were to be looked at as a donation in support of the symphony for which in return the contributor is getting a memorable evening of enjoyment instead of a mere bit of paper for tax purpose, the proposal should have considerable appeal to a reasonably person.

Everyone knows that a good dinner in a high class restaurant costs in the neighborhood of $15 or $20 today. So the actual donation being made to the symphony is pretty modest.

The dinner and evening of music and fun is scheduled for next Friday and all necessary information concerning it can be obtained through the Victoria Symphony office on Johnson Street.

While I am in the mood to carp and complain I might as well get something else off my chest.

With other people over the years I have been often irked at concerts by the rudeness of those who push their way up the theatre aisles while the artist is still taking his bows or is preparing to play an encore.

It happened at the McPherson Wednesday as Nicolai Petrov had seated himself at the piano for his first encore. It was even more crassly apparent, I am told, at Monday night's symphony concert.

Come now, what's the hurry? Who can honestly say that five or even 10 more minutes getting out of the theatre and out of the parking lot, is going to make a major difference.

Surely the performer who has given of his best deserves our good manners in return.

And one more beef while on the subject of performers and out theatres.

The Royal is turning out to be exactly what some of us prophesied it would be at the time of its proposed purchase — a disaster area.

Audiences are not too aware of it, despite dilapidation in the seating area and a bottleneck foyer. But iof you have even been backstage or downstairs you should feel highly mortified every time a visiting artist or group moves in.

The Royal Winnipeg Ballet management has said "no more." They will not come again to risk their valuable feet and legs on the deteriorated stage or cope with the antiquated lighting.

And another artist recently performing there, commenting on the revolting condition of the dressing and washroom areas, is quoted as saying she believed the last performer who had refused to play there must have been a Lippizan stallion.

UVIC music department's George Corwin (standing) confers with composer Martin Bartlett whose work, Helix, will be performed by UVic's Sonic Lab.

SONIC LAB MUSIC AT UVIC

A concert that will represent closer communication between the musicians of Victoria and Vancouver will take place Sunday at University of Victoria's MacLaurin auditorium.

Last before Christmas in the university music department's Sunday afternoons series, it will commence at 4 p.m.

Featured on the program will be Gerald Stanick, viola; Eileen Gibson, oboe; James Hunter, cello; all of Victoria; John Loban, violin, and Robert Silverman, piano, both of University of B.C. music faculty.

Another highlight will be a performance by UVic's Sonic Lab conducted by George Corwin. This group will perform a composition entitled Helix by UVic composer Martin Bartlett.

Other music includes Mozart's Oboe Quartet and the Brahms Quartet in C minor, Op. 60.

Co-ordinator for the concert is Boyde Hood.

Admission at the door is $1.

CONCLUDING a full year of readings across Canada and the United States, P. K. Page will appear at Victoria Art Gallery, Tuesday at 8 p.m. She will give a chronological reading covering a selection of published and unpublished poems written throughout her lifetime in Canada, Australia and in Canada again after a sojourn in Brazil. Slides of the drawings and paintings she made in Brazil will accompany her readings.

Music Studio Recital

Honoring Canada Music Week, which ends Sunday, students of the Hilda King music studio presented a recital recently.

Many of the pupils contributed work of their own to the program. Improvisations under the direction of Pam Borden and compositions of orignal merit were presented by Tim Boss, Cindy, Linda and Nancy Cox, Michelle, Green, Joy Hendrickson, Rhiannon Hamdi, Wendy Hooper, Patricia Macdonell, Beverlee Park, Alexandra and Fraser Rieché, Robynne Swailes, Bobby Tweten and Tracey Vendt.

Other piano solos and ensembles featuring work of Canadian composers were played by this group and by Geoffrey and Lindsey Cairns, Jane Eastwood, Sian Edwards, Ellen Holding, Karen Johnson and Derek-John Mansfield.

Haitian Plea

OTTAWA (CP) — Roman Catholic bishops called on the government Friday to let Haitians facing deportation remain in Canada. In a message to Prime Minister Trudeau and Immigration Minister Robert Andras, the Canadian Conference of Bishops said deportation is "not a humanitarian solution." Mr. Andras already has rejected appeals by more than 900 Haitians who entered Canada illegally and want to remain.

Music Awards Concert

A new award, the Erie Edwards Scholarship for highest mark in Grade V theory examinations, will be presented Wednesday to Mary Des Roches, a 1973 Bachelor of Music graduate from the University of Victoria.

Mrs. Des Roches is also a 1974 recipient of the ARTC piano performer diploma of the Royal Conservatory of Music, Toronto.

The presentation will be made at the annual awards recital sponsored by the Victoria Branch of the RCM Alumni Accociation. It will take place at St. Matthias Church Hall, Richmond Road and Richardson Street, at 8 p.m.

An Alumni bursary for voice or an instrument other than piano, will be presented to voice student Robin Powell. Sydney Condrashoff, who passed Grade X with first class honors and had completed all theoretical requirements, will receive the Gertrude Huntley Green senior piano scholarship.

Presentation of RCM silver medals and diplomas will be made in additon to the scholarships.

Any interested member of the public may attend this event.

Man of La Mancha

The musical, Man of La Mancha, is a very different kind of stage show to most of its genre.

For one thing, says its Victoria Operatic Society director, Allan Purdy, it is both realism and fantasy. And at the end one character — the tavern wench Aldonza — is transformed by the fantasy personality with which she has been endowed.

Man of La Mancha, complete with its unusual story, haunting atmosphere, poignant characters and memorable music, opens at McPherson Playhouse, Friday, and will remain there until Dec. 7.

The action takes place during the Spanish Inquisition of the 16th century. The scene is a dungeon where prisoners of the Inquisition are being held. One of the prisoners is Miquel de Cervantes, the real-life author of Don Quixote.

Only a sort o fprologue and final scene deals with reality, however. The body of the musical is concerned with Cervantes' enactment, using the prisoners, of the tale of Don Quixote.

"It is intriguing," says Purdy, "to realize that Cervantes originally wrote Quixote with the idea of debunking the romanticism that surrounded knight-errantry.

"The effect however in the succeeding centuries has been to bathe the image in an even richer glow — to immortalize Don Quixote as the prototype of all those brave foolhardy souls who fight impossible foes for the sake of their beliefs."

Purdy has had considerable experience with the VOS, having directed two of their most successful shows, The King and I and Sound of Music.

A past president of Victoria Theatre Guild for which he has also directed several memorable plays, he is immediate past president of the Community Arts Council of Greater Victoria, and has conducted several theatre workshops in this area and up island.

Music direction for Man of La Mancha is by Tudor Jones, also a frequent VOS director. June Elsdon is doing the choreography.

In the role of Cervantes-Don Quixote, an outstanding Victoria actor will be seen. Colin Skinner, distinguished in many fine performances for UVic and the Theatre Guild and as Fagin in the VOS production of Oliver, stepped into the role after illness forced VOS regular Harry Elsdon to withdraw.

Experienced singing-actress Janie Woods is playing Aldonza-Dulcinea and UVic theatre graduate Jim Leard, Sancho.

The score has much delightful melodic invention including such haunting songs as The Impossible Dream, Golden Helmet of Mambrino, Dulcinea, Little Bird, and many others.

VOS will give a matinee performance on Sunday, Dec. 1 at 2 p.m. but there will be no performance on Dec. 3. Tickets are now on sale at McPherson box office.

Onley Landscapes on Show

Silkscreen prints and watercolors resulting from the artist's trip to Greece and the Arctic will be the subjects of an exhibtion by internationally noted Vancouver artist, Toni Onley, at the Bau-Xi Gallery, 827 A Fort Street.

The exhibition will open to the public Wednesday and cont9nue through Dec. 9.

The Arctic landscape is particularly suited to Onley's talent and he has produced about 75 exceptional watercolors as a record of his experience.

Onley has works at the National Gallery, Ottawa, the Museum of Modern Art, New York, and the Tate Gallery in London.

Wind Quintet In Concert

A free concert will take place Sunday in the Gordon Head Community Centre on Feltham Road at 2:15 p.m.

Performers will be the Victoria Wind Quintet consisting of James Kennedy, flute, Lionel Martin, oboe, Larry de la Haye, clarinet, Jackie Spring, horn and Amy Bonham, bassoon.

The concert is free to the public through contributions from the Music Performance Trust Fund of the Musicians' Union and the Victoria Community Arts Council.

'Greek Vision' For Students

Back in town after an eight-week tour of Alberta and Vancouver Island, Company One will be performing The Greek Vision throughout next week for pupils of the Sooke school district.

Performances will take place in the McPherson Playhouse upper foyer.

The Greek Vision portrays a view of the world of classical Greece, its life, mythology and drama. Dr. Peter Smith, dean of fine arts at UVic, is the author of this event, working in collaboration with the company and its artistic director, Carl Hare.

DAVID OISTRAKH

'Spectacular Violinist' Performs

It is not easy for a son following in a famous father's footsteps to equal the parent, let alone form a distinctive image of his own. Yet that is exactly what Igor Oistrakh has accomplished.

The violinist, son of the late great master of the instrument, David Oistrakh, is now concertizing successfully all over the world, and is being regarded as the supreme talent of the younger generation of European violinists.

In assessing Igor's performance music commentators have commented on the individuality of his style, while noting that he has inherited from his father the exceptional degree of artistry, freedom and lightness of technique and graceful bowing.

The "spectacular violinist" (Eric McLean's description in the Montreal Star) will be the next guest soloist with Victoria Symphony, playing under Laszlo Gati's baton, the Khatchaturian violin concerto.

This concerto, coincidentally, was dedicated by the composer to Oistrakh's father.

Other numbers chosen by Gati for the Dec. 1 and 2 concerts are the Russian and Ludmilla Overture by Glinka and Cezar Franck's D minor symphony.

Some tickets are still available at the Symphony office, 748 Johnson Street.

Great entertainment with laughter and tears and music and everything else that makes going to the movies worthwhile.

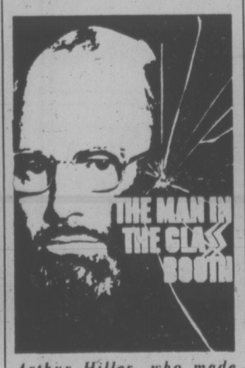
The fabulous long-running magical musical . . . now a mindboggling cinematic trip.

One year ago, The American Film Theatre invented a new concept in entertainment: a limited engagement, subscription series of great films from great plays.

Now The Second Season cometh. Five extraordinary films starring some of the world's best actors, directed by some of the world's best filmmakers. Two performances only... one evening and one matinee, on a Thursday each month, starting in February, and at a theatre near you. Order your Season Tickets. Now!

Alan Bates uncovers the lie and emptiness of a fortieth wedding anniversary celebration.

Topol, that "Fiddler on the Roof" man, challenges the universe . . . but is he strong enough to defy the church?



Arthur Hiller, who made "Love Story" directs a man on trial who professes his guilt and his accusers suddenly doubt their own innocence.

Academy Award Winner Glenda Jackson and Susannah York take turns at make-believe . . . and a masquerade ends in death.

ROLLING STONE

Backward, But Not Enough

By JON LANDAU

By 1972, Carole King had co-written at least a dozen rock standards. But she had never achieved popularity as a performer in her own right. Her solo album of that year, Tapestry, changed all that: It sold 12 million copies, making it one of the 10 best-selling albums in history.

Since then King's artistic and commercial position has faltered. At first she attempted to duplicate the contents of the original success in sequel-like fashion. When that didn't succeed she shifted gears. Instead of working in the intimate vein of Tapestry, she took to working with a big band and in a more arty sort of pop style. The resulting album, Fantasy, was a pretentious bore.

With her latest, Wrap Around Joy, King has taken a big step backwards to the kind of likable solid style that helps explain her success in the first place. Unfortunately, the album's flaws still overshadow its strengths. She's still singing with a big band, but their arrangements miss the point. While her plain and unaffected voice cries out for a shot in the arm, the big group offers, only a pat on the back. Even on the superb song "Jazzman," while she sings her heart out over the flowing sax lines of Tom Scott, the rest of the arrangemen is just too bland.

The album's other high-points also could have benefited from more appropriate settings. "Wrap Around Joy" begins with '50s vocal harmony but then wanders into a white rhythm-and-blues sound that just doesn't do justice to the material. "You're Something New" is perhaps the album's most successful, self-contained cut — although something intangible is still missing. It has a hell of a chorus though, and would make a fine single.

Despite its shortcomings this album remains an engaging work. Though they are repetitive, the melodies are good; although they are too diffuse, the arrangements have presence; and while David Palmer's lyrics for King's melodies are uninspired, they are consistent with the mood of the music.

Most important, Carole King does have the strength to hold so flawed an album together. It is far from great, but one way or another she keeps it entertaining. The woman has soul — she's just been spreading it too thin.

On another front, British rock singer Rod Stewart's latest, Smiler, is entertaining enough, but by his past standards it's disappointingly lightweight.

CAROLE KING . . . new album disappoints

Stewart first gained a following when he toured the United States as lead singer for the legendary guitarist Jeff Beck. Rod became a superstar when his own "Maggie May" sold over 2 million copies. In recent years he has recorded under both his name and as the lead singer for Faces, the British rock band — but both artistically and commercially, he has been more successful as a solo artist.

Stewart's distinctively raspy voice is ideal for conveying exuberance. His boozy ambience can at times be irresistible. But too often he loses control of his own act, and the results can wind up sounding halfhearted or downright sloppy.

The best work on the new album comes during Stewart's Sam Cooke medley of "Bring It On Home" and "You Send Me." The late R 'n' B singer is one of Stewart's idols, but instead of treating Cooke's songs reverentially, he brings them to life with his freewheeling, sympathetic performance.

Stewart also idolizes Bob Dylan, but he doesn't do so well with his latest Dylan interpretation. His version of "Girl From the North Country" is so loose that it comes out sounding like he never really cared much for the song anyway.

More exciting things are done to Elton John's "Let Me Be Your Car," and Stewart's and guitarist Ron Wood's "Dixie Toot." But his rehash of Chuck Berry's "Sweet Little Rock 'n' Roller" is a bore.

Stewart is usually at his best when he sounds rash and cavalier. He's at his worst when he sounds too casual. Next time around he needs to sound more involved more of the time. Otherwise, he may yet fritter away what he's worked for so long to achieve — his reputation as a first-rate rock singer.

LIFE PREMIUMS AIMS QUERIED

The British Columbia government is studying life insurance premiums to see if they violate human rights principles, Labor Minister Bill King said Friday.

King was speaking to a government amendment to the Human Rights Code of B.C. that would exempt insurance companies from requirements of the act in setting their premiums.

He told the legislature the proposal would protect the companies while the study is carried out.

"The insurance companies have based their whole system on differences (between people). Without getting into the argument of whether that is right or wrong, it is physically impossible for the insurance industry to break down the existing system without a massive amount of lead time and study time."

He said the B.C. government will focus on how the system can be changed to allow for the basic acceptance of human rights.

Warning Shot

EDMONTON (CP) — The death of Danny Dallas Smith came as a policeman fired a shot "to let him know we're here," a coroner's inquest was told.

The 25-year-old man was killed Oct. 19 after keeping police at bay for three hours while holed-up in a south-side business, the House of Coin.

Wes Vandusen, manager of the business, said he was with police officers in a warehouse that overlooked the store.

"One officer said to the other 'shoot the door, let him know we're here,' " Vandusen told the inquest.

After the shot was fired, the marksman said "I think I hit him," and ran to the back door of the House of Coin, threw out a gun and called an ambulance, the inquest was told.

Few Mourn JFK

DALLAS (UPI) — Fewer than 100 people attended a brief ceremony Friday marking the 11th anniversary of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. The quiet service consisted of prayers, the laying of a wreath, a eulogy by Mayor Wes Wise and sacred music at the Kennedy Memorial.

"President Kennedy championed unpopular causes but his integrity made him a popular man," Wise said before laying a wreath on the stone centrepiece in the rectangular memorial 400 yards from where Kennedy was shot.

"He advocated an open forum for dissent. It was a perversion of this freedom that killed him."

Kennedy was shot Nov. 22, 1963, while leading a parade to the Dallas Trade Mart where he was to speak. Then Texas Gov. John Connally was wounded.

Would You Nail Einstein for Parking?

SPOKANE — A University of Washington faculty representative told the Board of Regents that professors should be excused from parking and library fine because "genius should be treated differently than others." Regents were discussing the responsibilities of professors for paying the fines Friday when Dr. Ed Huitt said:

"A faculty member can't be charged for debts he doesn't feel are just obligations. Sure, we're forgetful, we're frail, we make mistakes — that's the price we pay for being academicians.

"Would you have tried to hold up Albert Einstein for a $4 parking fine?" he asked.

ROME — Italy's inflation worries have crept into children's letters to Santa Claus.

Paola Mola, 11, told Santa: "The times being what they are, I wish you could turn my dog into a cat so he would eat less."

SAN FRANCISCO — A judge has set aside an $80,000 default judgment against rock singer Neil Young, who was sued by a fan because the entertainer walked out of concert in 1973. Richard Kass, sued Young because he wanted his money refunded and that of the 14,000 others who turned out for the concert at which Young made only a brief appearance. Judge Ira Brown set it aside because the suit had not been properly certified as a class action and Young had not been properly served.

ANDES, N.Y. — Soul singer Wilson Pickett has been arrested after police said he fired a bullet through the door of a motel room occupied by two of the Isley Brothers singing group. No one was hit. Pickett and the Isleys were on a hunting trip. Pickett, 33, was charged with first-degree reckless endagerment and criminal possession of a dangerous weapon, both felonies.

BEDFORD, N.H. — Representative Morris Udall of Arizona today became the first Democrat to announce formally that he will seek his party's presidential nomination in 1976. He will enter the first of the presidential primary elections — in New Hampshire — in February, 1976.

MONTREAL — A self-confessed gunman testified Friday that it was he, and not his brother, who took part in a $276,000 bank holdup last year in which a Brink's guard was killed.

George McAllister, 36, currently serving a seven-year prison term for a $115,000 fraud last year, told Court of Queen's Bench that he and three companions took part in the robbery Sept. 12, 1973, in which guard Claude Viennau was shot down. Billy McAllister, 31, faces 10 charges for the incident, including armed robbery and murder.

LONDON — Helen Morgan, a 22-year-old British model who has made it no secret that she is an unwed mother, won the title of Miss World of 1974 Friday night.

WASHINGTON — Rose Mary Woods, former president Nixon's personal secretary and a major figure in the White House tapes controversies earlier this year, is back working in the White House complex. A source at Nixon's home in San Clemente, Calif., said Miss Woods is here as the former President's staff representative to deal with all matters concerning his interests in the transistion to the Ford Administration.

LITTLETON, Colo. — Despite protests that he will be earning wages of sin, Rev. Frederick McCallin is trying to obtain a liquor licence for a planned church-operated restaurant. "Liquor is a way of life, and we aren't going to hold it away," the priest said at a hearing before the Arapahoe County Commission on St. Thomas More Catholic church's application for a licence.

Opponents claimed that most parishioners were against the application. they said it would set a bad precedent for a house of worship.

LONDON — Diana Dors, 43, one-time sex symbol of British movies, was reported seriously ill Friday with a form of meningitis. London's National Hospital for Nervous Diseases said she was comfortable but her condition was causing concern.

DORS

'PREACHER' REAGAN

SAN FRANCISCO — Gov. Ronald Reagan says he will "preach the gospel" of the free enterprise system when he leaves office at the end of the year.

"I feel strongly that we have proved the system works but the free enterprise system is in greater danger than ever before, at least during my lifetime," Reagan said Friday.

"So I'm going to hit the sawdust trail. I'm going to write, employ radio and television and preach the gospel," said the one-time movie actor.

First Cup Win For Edmonton

VANCOUVER — Edmonton Eskimos got a pre-game boost Friday night when their 20-year-old representative, Betty Michalyshn, (right) was chosen Miss Grey Cup 1974.

The University of Alberta second-year student beat four finalists including Miss Ottawa Rough Rider, Miss Calgary Stampeder and Miss Winnipeg Blue Bomber.

The five-foot-six, 115-pound blonde drew cheers from the many Edmonton fans attending the Miss Grey Cup pageant dinner when she was named.

The presentation, made by Tony Gabriel of Hamilton Tiger Cats, selected earlier as most outstanding Canadian player in the Schenley awards, involved various gifts including a trip to Mexico or Hawaii.

LEGER BETTER, 'RARING TO GO'

OTTAWA — After a six-month convalescence, Jules Leger (left) is "raring to go" and will resume his duties as Governor-General Dec. 6.

Press secretary, Peter Cowan, said Friday that Leger's first official function will be the Order of Canada investiture at Government House here.

It is unlikely that Leger will make long speeches for some time yet, Cowan added.

Mexican MD Prescribed Marijuana

MEXICO CITY — Police raided a clinic Friday and arrested a doctor who confessed to treating his patients with hallucinatory mushrooms and marijuana.

Police said they detained 18 drug addicts in the surgery of Dr. Salvador Roquet Perez in Mexico City's plush Condessa Colony.

A police spokesman said more than 1,000 people had attended the clinic since 1967, paying an average of $40 each. Roquet Perez said he used drugs as part of a psychiatric treatment and without wanting to make excessive profits, according to the police.

A Sympathy For People

By PAT BARCLAY

This week I've been reading a splendid new book by Heather Robertson. It's what's called a "spin-off," a by-product of the research she did in 1971 for Grass Roots, her book about community and family life and how economic forces have influenced them in selected areas of Western Canada.

The new book is titled Salt of the Earth, and it's virtually impossible to convey a sense of its special flavor without cheating. Without, that is, quoting other people's words instead of struggling to invent one's own. "Salt of the Earth is a portrait of the settlement of the prairies seen through the eyes of the settlers themselves . . . It is their book," says Heather Robertson in her explanatory Preface.

The book is one more milestone in a most salutary recent development in Canadian publishing — the democratization of our history. If you've read Barry Broadfoot's collection of little people's memories of the Depression, Ten Lost Years, or his more recent book about the war, Six War Years, you'll already be familiar with the genre. If Canadian history ever was as deadly dull as most of us claimed, it's been resuscitated for good and all at last.

"Official" histories have their place, but it's not in their public's imagination. To move us, to make us understand where we came from and why we belong here; in short, to make us learn with our feelings — that is the achievement of books like Ten Lost Years and Salt of the Earth. Hooray for Broadfoot and Robertson. They've got a good thing going for themselves, granted, but it's a good thing for the rest of us, too.

W. I. Wabath home, Crossfield, Alta., area, 1904

Salt of the Earth is a compilation of old photographs, all taken between 1885 and 1920, and of excerpts from "unpublished letters, diaries, manuscripts and interviews in the collections of Canadian archives and foundations." Also included are excerpts from published works by Zella Collins, D. E. McIntyre and Nellie McClung. Together they bring us sometimes painfully close to the reality of other people's lives, and very much closer to an understanding of the early prairie experience.

Like James Lorimer, Heather Robertson's publisher, I was amazed at the photographs. If the musty relics in your own family photo album have never yet turned you on, take a look at them again after reading this book. I guarantee you'll see them with new eyes.

"Almost every little prairie village had its resident photographer," Robertson tells us in her Preface, comparing these early recorders of the new to Paul Kane, who documented the old. "Some were homesteaders and businessmen who had failed and bought a camera as a last resort, others were gifted amateurs, schoolteachers, journalists, farmers like John Howard of Whitewood, Saskatchewan, who made his own camera, developed his own photographs in a homemade tub and left 150 excellent glass negatives as a record of his neighbourhood."

My favorite is the photograph on page 81, which shows a Mrs. C. Bull from McLaughlin, Alberta, sitting amid the ruins of her sod home. There had been a tornado which dismantled the stove, shredded the beds, and stripped the wallpaper from the layers of sod it had been tacked across to conceal, but there sits Mrs. Bull under a jaunty Panama hat, gazing steadfastly into the lens.

Robertson's own personality appears but briefly, in the compact but eloquent Preface and Introduction and in the occasional characteristic juxtaposition. For example, a Land Company officer's self-contratulatory account of his work is followed by a quote from J. S. Woodsworth which describes a clear case of fraud. And a wedding picture faces a photograph of the groom in uniform 15 years later, captioned "killed in France, August 1915."

Robertson's technique here has been to select and arrange, then leave each reader to draw his own conclusions. The method may have its drawbacks, but it is a welcome relief from the mealy-mouthed, Respectability Forever attitude that prevailed among so many writers of the history texts which we studied as children in school.

"But," said James Lorimer when he saw Robertson's manuscript, "it was the written material for this book which I found overwhelming . . . there was . . . a kinship and a sense of sympathy with the people of the country which has never been part of the official version of the history of Canada."

Read Salt of the Earth for yourself. You'll see that he's right.

SALT OF THE EARTH, by Heather Robertson. James Lorimer. $17.50.

Father-Son Succession Not for Alta. Socreds

By AL FORREST

There is grim irony in the title: The Dynasty—The Rise and Fall of Social Credit in Alberta.

For the failure of Social Credit to establish a Manning dynasty may have been decisive in bringing about the party's downfall after 36 years in power.

THE DYNASTY: The Rise and Fall of Social Credit in Alberta, by John J. Barr. McClelland and Stewart. $12.50.

PRESTON MANNING
. . . could have won

Unlike British Columbia, where the Social Credit party established Bill Bennett as leader to succeed his father W. A. C. Bennett, the party in Alberta did not select Manning's son Preston.

There were two good reasons. One was that Preston was only 23, a little young to be premier. The more important reason was that for some reason his father disapproved.

Instead, a colorless politician named Harry Strom was selected and the downfall of the Social Credit Party was sealed.

In retrospect, it seems only the Manning name could have saved Social Credit from its resounding defeats at the hands of the Conservative Party of Peter Lougheed. Preston was at least the equal of his illustrious father as an orator and might have pulled it off.

Instead, Strom led the party and was defeated in his first election as leader.

The author, John Barr, does not tackle the question directly but suggests the party made a serious blunder in selecting Strom rather than the young Manning.

Barr was an insider during the change of leadership, leaving his position as editorial writer for the Edmonton Journal to join Social Credit as a campaign worker, finally becoming, in 1969, an executive assistant to a Social Credit cabinet minister, Robert Clark.

Because of the Social Credit defeat under Strom, Barr is out of a job, so he could be excused for being a little bitter.

However, this book is remarkably free of rancor or adulation, although the Mannings, father and son, obviously can do no wrong.

Barr began his project as a biography of Premier Ernest Manning. However, he decided to expand it into a Social Credit history, a happy decision. The early section on Social Credit founder William Aberhart is simply a rehash of known history written from afar, but his third section on the post-Manning years is the highlight of the book.

He gives a first-hand account of the internal wrangling that speeded up the collapse of the party.

The beginning of the end of Social Credit in Alberta probably came in 1965.

Young Preston Manning, then only 20, ran for Social Credit in the federal election of 1965 with the public blessing of his father. Young Manning was trounced by Conservative candidate Bill Skoreyko 13,596 to 6,762.

It was then the elder Manning may have begun to have doubts about the continuing invincibility of the Manning family. Manning Sr. began to publicly espouse a new cause, that of social conservatism, stressing that the Conservative party and the Social Credit party had much in common.

Premier Ernest Manning faced the electorate once more after that, in 1967, when he defeated Peter Lougheed's Tories 55 seats to 6 seats. But Social Credit's popular vote fell from 55 per cent in 1963 to 45 per cent in 1967. The Tory vote increased from 13 per cent to 26 per cent.

In 1968 Manning decided to retire. It was a fateful decision. He was only 60 but he was bored with being premier. He had been in the Social Credit government since Aberhart led the party to power in 1935, when Manning was 28. In 1943 at the age of 35 he became premier. After 25 years in the saddle, it was enough.

He would not fight one more election, nor would he endorse his son as the next premier at age 23.

The reasons are not clear — and this is the main weakness of Barr's book.

The climactic scene is very terse.

"The group went to see the premier with their proposition (that Preston should run). Ernest Manning heard them out quietly and said there were indeed several good reasons why Preston would run but there were more good reasons why he should not. The dynasty issue would be raised. Preston was very young and inexperienced in practical politics; he would have difficulty controlling a cabinet of much older and more experienced men."

There is little doubt that Ernest Manning, if he chose to continue in politics, could have won the election in 1971. He was a leader who inspired reverence and loyalty (as contrasted to W. A. C. Bennett who inspired only respect and admiration in his best years).

There is also little doubt that Preston Manning could have won the leadership if his father had approved. But his father did not. And there was no Manning to bail out Social Credit in 1971.

Without a dynasty, Social Credit fell.

BOAT DAY WAS A BIG DAY

By TORCHY ANDERSON

To British Columbians who knew their coast before the days of paved highways and efficient air services the title of this book sings a song. Among the islands of the Inside Passage, deep in inlets where sheer cliffs disappear into waters of mysterious depth, where distant snow-capped peaks breed roaring creeks and lacy waterfalls—in that country the whistle of a little Union steamer was a song.

WHISTLE UP THE INLET, by Gerald A. Rushton. J. J. Douglas. $10.95.

It brought out wives whose house and garden were floating on giant logs, it brought miners down to shaky wharfs and kids out of school.

It was Boat Day, a big day.

Author Rushton held many jobs in The Union Steamship Company, which was started on British capital and ended in Canadian control. The company began building a coastal fleet in 1890. The first ships built to their order were carried around Cape Horn to Vancouver in knocked-down sections. The increasing fleet served the coast through two wars. The end of the saga came in 1959.

Union ships whistled their welcome song up a coast that lacked all but a few navigation aids; was subject to the wildest weather, and could wrap itself in cottonwool fog for days and weeks.

From its skippers and crews came a loyalty that keeps men and ships in seagoing shape long after their time. They took gold-crazed men and women to The Great Gold Rush of '98. They carried thousands to view and wonder at the stern beauty of our coast. They mounted guns in war. They carried millions of tons of B.C. fish to market. They were loaded down with risky cargoes of ore from coast mines.

Rushton's love of the company, its red-funneled fleet, its men who met their few disasters with guts and initiative, stands out in every page of his book.

Words of Love

By GLENNIS ZILM

Book reviewers get used to letters from publishers' representatives announcing "A brand-new, best-selling author is about to burst upon the Canadian literary scene."

Lovers and Others came with just such a letter and, surprisingly, it may just make it. It is not great literature, but it is warm and endearing — much like the poetry of Rod McKuen and, as you may have heard, he's made about $5 million on his slim little books.

LOVERS AND OTHERS, by Joan Sutton. Clarke, Irwin. $5.95.

Ms. Sutton — she describes herself as a liberated woman and wants to be called Ms — writes prose of much the same type as McKuen's poetry and she, too, writes about love.

The 46 little essays in the 120-page hardcover book are almost all taken directly from her regular column on the women's pages of the Toronto Sun, which for three years has offered Ms Sutton's views. These have sparked hundreds of fan letters from her readers and led to this publication of a select few.

The essays contain such varied items as a birthday letter to her daughter, reminiscences of Easter days when she was a small girl, comments on love affairs, a description of her cat and the reasons she has been married for 19 years — all to the same man.

Although a number of the essays concern triangle relationships in marriage, the majority give warm, earthy advice on how to get along better. For example, she comments on the current trend to avoid getting involved. Her advice is "Do get involved" — do touch people, say nice things, tell people you love them.

Her advice is far from new, but it is tender, amusing and, yes, loving. The book is light, easy reading with advice for everyone you know, maybe even for yourself.

Worn Wisdom

By SUSAN MUSGRAVE

Therefore in the clear light of dawn I shall gird my loins, find me a high place and there, utterly alone before the great camera and the great tape recorder and the great ghost writer, I shall give thanks.

I shall give thanks for such publishers as Hancock House, who have already made one mediocre book a best-seller by putting my name on the cover, and have discovered the injun bandwagon and have perceived that books of minimum text may be printed large and sold at inflated prices.

MY HEART SOARS, by Chief Dan George. Hancock House. $9.95.

I shall give thanks for the ready fund of cliche and platitude that passes for Indian wisdom and the worn out rhetoric which is the slickest thing since Christmas card poetry and almost as lucrative.

I shall give thanks for my photogenic profile which allows me to sound not quite so much like an asinine Baptist lay preacher.

I shall give thanks for the movie industry that will cast me in any dignified role from Cheyenne to Cree, though my people are Coast Salish, and forget that "the only good Indian is a handsome one" is Hollywood's translation of "the only good Indian is a dead one".

I shall give thanks for an illustrator who'd be making better money doing paintings on velvet (which is obviously his thing) but who has given his time to make soppy charcoal drawings of me and my family and such animals as the moose which my ancestors wouldn't even have recognized. (He threw in a Haida totem pole too for good measure.)

I shall give thanks for the source of such lines as "A man who lives and dies in the woods/knows the secret life of trees" (though how would I know, being a Vancouver boy, born and bred?)

And I shall continue to exhort my people, in contradiction to the above perception, to seize the white man's tools (and why no one has yet spotted that for the comical and macabre piece of advice it is, I can't imagine.)

And I shall ask the Great Spirit (if my people ever believed in such a synthetic absurdity, which is unlikely) to pardon me finally for all these antics and see that I am more sinned against than sinning, and that, in the words of my ancestor, He-Who-Shakes-the-Spear, "I am a very foolish fond old man", exploited and ripped-off just as all my people have been.

I have spoken. (If you want more, my agent will tell you my terms.)

Telling It Like It Wasn't

By PETE LOUDON

Those six fantastic years when all Canadians seemed to march in step have finally been compressed into a book for ordinary Joes. A lot of them will read it and enjoy it. Former sailors, soldiers, airman, war workers, profiteers, good-time girls — just about anybody older than 45 in fact, will read it and sigh, "Ain't it the truth?"

The answer has to be no. I was gripped by the book and I know Barry has faithfully documented the memories of the hundreds of people he interviewed across Canada. But to use the language of the book, much of it comes through as beer parlor b.s.

SIX WAR YEARS, by Barry Broadfoot. Doubleday. $12.50.

I'm not knocking Barry, who I know to be one of the best writers in the province. He's a reporter-editor-writer-realist and he knows what I mean. He cranked up his tape recorder and it worked beautifully, just as it did in his first book about the Great Depression, Ten Lost Years.

But most of us are the same — when we start looking back 30 or 40 years we tend to jazz things up a bit to make a better story.

Take the picture on the dust jacket. It's been a grabber for me ever since Paul Detloff first had it published . . . the little boy running beside the embarking troops to grasp his Dad's hand. Okay, maybe Detloff didn't set it up but there isn't another little boy in sight in that whole New Westminster hillside of soldiers. And when the war ended and the father came back, the newspaper had the same boy posed and ready for the camera's click. The point is we all seek drama in our lives and, just like the newspaper, the average guy overdramatizes when he has a willing audience.

Barry lets them go to it and leaves it to the reader to sort the flyspots from the pepper. For instance, the ex-corvetter Barry talked to must have known Barry was an army type.

"It was a special kind of hell," says the corvetter. Actually, I remember convoys as a special kind of boredom, a few days of action, a few nights of fear and months and months of sheepdogging back and forth from Newfy John to Londonderry.

As a rule, the navy ate well and usually we were dry and clean. A lot of us spent more time ashore than we did at sea, in places like Halifax and Esquimalt. Most of us never saw the enemy's eyeballs, even when serving in corvettes — and the casualty lists bear me out. Don't get me wrong. I still grieve for friends who died but I don't think Barry's informants painted a true picture.

An ex-sailor can't be as definite in claiming the former soldiers and airmen were garnishing the truth. But when a story-teller says, "This cousin of mine had a cousin and he says . . ." one tends to have doubts. When an ex-sergeant starts telling about the duchess he lived with in England, one wonders. Some of the yarns about drunken generals, assassination of unpopular officers and Yanks getting their comeuppance from Canucks — well, with slight variations they've been using the same plots in vets' club bull sessions for years. The usual rejoinder was, "Don't eat that stuff Elmer, that's been on the road."

Many of the stories they told Broadfoot are strong on wartime sex life. There are going to be a lot of former service women angry about references to them as "officer's groundsheets" and immoral thrill girls. The book dwells a bit too much on unfaithful wives at home and of the apparently free rations of sex served up to Canadians when they arrived overseas.

The aging warriors Barry met probably were mostly looking backward through rose colored glasses. Ask any vet to be honest — would he rather have been a horny young man in 1942 or today, and the truth might emerge. The sexual freedoms that are taken for granted today make the war years appear Victorian in retrospect.

The bootleggers, the profiteers in car parts, rustled beef, liquor permits, ration cards and one-room apartments — they all got misty-eyed talking to Barry about the money they made in those years. But the same types are making it three times as fast today.

When you start plowing fields that have been left to pasture for 30 years you're going to step into a lot of that stuff. Barry's informants have given us a little too much gallantry, a little too much bravado and a little too much teeth-gritting in the face of adversity. For many, the toughest times came in those years when they were starting families and trying to find their feet on civvie street after the war was over.

One of the problems Barry must have been faced with is the situation that all reporters know about. The guys who suffer the most, they're the ones who tend to talk the least. It's the sensationalists in the crowd who edge forward when you hold up a microphone.

Having said all that, having warned the reader that this is no history text book, let me repeat that Barry's offering is entertaining. It will evoke both chuckles and tears and it shows the scope of the war in a way which will surprise younger readers who thought it was all fought outside our borders.

The war also was the building of the Alaska Highway, the zoot suit troubles in Quebec, the zombie (horrid word) rebellion at Terrace, the farm front on the prairies, the prisoner-of-war camps and internment camps in rural Canada, the building of ships on the west coast in 21 days, the cruel things hysterical west coast people did to other Canadians because they were of Japanese descent.

Many of the great adventures of those six remarkable years were never recited in the censored press of the day and would be lost to us but for the memories of the people actually involved and somehow Barry Broadfoot sought them out.

I don't know what Barry will do for an encore. The years of the Depression and the years of the Second World War had one thing in common. Perhaps fear brought us together. But they are the two occasions in the last half-century when Canadians pulled together. People of all ages, people of vastly different backgrounds for a few years were looking out for each other. A few hours after a train trip began there were no strangers. There was always someone to help you with a load. We talked to each other at bus stops without reticence, we shared our happiness and our sorrow and laughed together at our miseries.

Barry Broadfoot manages to bring this out in both his books. Perhaps if enough people read them they'll help us find a way back to caring for each other without the pressure of fear, privation and suffering.

Drought Over, Timbuktu Regains Its Beauty

TIMBUKTU, Mali (NYT) — Timbuktu is the beautiful, changeless desert city of old once more, now that the drought is over and its victims have either left or died.

On the feast day that marked the end of the one-month fast of Ramadan, sumptuously robed dignitaries crowded into the colonial mansion of the regional military governor to pay their respects.

They were received by the governor, Capt. Korcissy Tall, who in honor of the day had shed his paratrooper uniform and beret for an elegant white and gold robe and cap.

Later, the turbaned elders, leaning on sceptre-like staffs, joined the rest of Timbuktu's male population — few married women ever go into the street except to go to market or draw water — in an afternoon promenade on the market square of desert sand.

Everyone was dressed in his finest robes. As groups gathered, blended and dissolved, "a thousand and one nights" seemed to come in flamboyant hues.

At dark, Araby became Africa. Thetomtoms began to beat in the unlighted streets of low, stark mudhouses, and dancing began. Men and women danced separately.

"Dancing together is an offence to the sense of shame," explained a young man who said he would not personally be offended.

All was quiet on the sprawling expanse of sunbaked sand at the edge of town. Last year more than 10,000 nomads camped there for handouts of grain and for medical attention for those who barely survived the hungry trek across the grassless pastures and for more than 200 of them who lived this far to await death from starvation, measles or cholera.

Now it looks more like a scout camp.

Neatly aligned tents shelter only a few hundred nomads — old people and orphans mainly — who have no one to care for them and who have not been able to set out again to try to recreate their traditional way of life, which would depend largely on the animals they lost to the famine. No one in the camp showed signs of undernourishment.

The town has resumed its ancient ways. It is no longer inundated by once-proud Tuareg herdsmen who had lost their camels, cattle, sheep and goats and thus had been reduced to selling their swords and their wives' jewelry or to begging for money or food.

What the handful of remaining Tuareg offer for sale now are trinkets made for the tourist trade, many smuggled in from Mauritania. The only beggers are the usual smiling children who hold out their hands and continue smiling whether something is put in their palm or not.

Most of the Tuareg left the camp during the rainy season, which this summer brought what the name promises. Although many had lost all their animals — the average loss in this pastoral region is estimated at 85 per cent — they left toward their old grazing grounds as grass began sprouting.

They took with them, Tall said, three months' supply of grain and some powdered milk and cooking oil. Their hope is either to live off the animals that survived or to find clansmen who salvaged more of their animals and with them to reconstitute their herds and lives.

"It is an experiment," Tall said. "It is bad for them to stay in the camps too long and lose the habit of work. They have to try to resume their work. But if they don't manage, we will have to see what we can do."

A number of Tuaregs remain near here, living precariously from occasional government handouts and the sale of the milk of their few remaining goats. Those who stay around town strongly express traditional Tuareg animosity to the blacks who govern Mali. The Tuaregs, a Berber, Caucasian people, traditionally live from the milk and meat of their animals and the work of the black slaves they captured in frequent raids on sedentary villages.

Their attitude remains haughty to those of skin darker than theirs, and the governing powers feel little tenderness for the Tuaregs. But diplomatic observers believe that the government has nonetheless fairly distributed food and other available assistance to the nomads.

Whatever the victims of the drought have done to repair their lives, foreigners are above all impressed with the ability of the sendentary and nomad populations of this semi-arid region to survive and work with what to outsiders seems less than the minimum daily requirements of everything — food, shelter or medicine.

Where does their strength come from? Tell was asked.

"Underdevelopment," he replied laconically.

Oil Sands Threat

CALGARY (CP) — The future of two proposed Oil Sands projects has been made more uncertain by the federal budget.

The developers of the two plants, still awaiting Alberta Energy Board approval, say the federal move to increase resource taxation has made the marginal economic viability of their projects even more doubtful.

Ian Drum, vice-president of Home Oil Co. Ltd., said the current economic and political climate is "most unfavorable" to oil sands development.

"We are awaiting an improvement before making a commitment to our project."

Detroit Fans Shunning Leos

DETROIT (AP) — Attendance at Detroit Lions home football games is at an 11-year-low. The National Football League team has said none of their remaining three home games is expected to be a sellout.

In four home games so far, the Lions have drawn an average 50,751 fans. Projected over the whole season, it works out to just over 335,000, lowest since 1963.

Chateau Frontenac is one of city's historic landmarks

Old Quebec 'Reclaimed'

By ROBERT TRUMBULL

QUEBEC (NYT) — In a $36 million restoration program, this picturesque French-speaking city is reclaiming architectural treasures associated with the early settlement of North America and the founding of Canada as an outpost of France in the new world.

The project is related to the growing recognition that the survival of French culture in Canada helps to make this country different from the United States, a theme of Canadian nationalists.

The Gallic ambience of 17th-century Quebec persists here in the profusion of French-style restaurants and bistros. French is the first language of 96 per cent of the city's 186,000 residents. Although many are bilingual, English is heard only where tourists are.

"The city's pronounced French character has been enhanced by the restoration over the last four years of many historic structures built by the French Colonists.

French control in Canada ended in 1759 on the nearby Plains of Abraham, now a grassy public park, where British troops under Gen. James Wolfe vanquished the defenders, commanded by Gen. Louis Montcalm. Both generals died in the battle. In 1763 New France was ceded to Britain.

The two historical areas selected for restoration are both associated with the period of French supremacy.

One is the only walled fortress remaining in North America, an 8.2-acre welter of French military structures called Artillery Park, or, more commonly here, Parc de l'Artillerie. There, French defenders repelled an attack by a contingent of George Washington's soldiers, led by Gen. Richard Montgomery, and Gen. Benedict Arnold in 1775.

"If the battle had gone the other way," a guide said, "Canada might be part of the United States today."

The other restoration site with its towering church and a monument to Louis XIV, might have been transplanted from a French provincial city.

This is the open square known as Place Royale, "the cradle of French civilization in America," where Samuel de Champlain founded this city in 1608.

In both areas, the original structures reflect French architectural tastes of the 18th century. Since the restoration work began — in 1970 in Place Royale and two years later in Artillery Park — builders have been stripping away the appendages added by later occupants that had changed the appearance of the buildings.

The French soldiers who built the main structures in Artillery Park more than 200 years ago "did a hell of a good job," said Henri Tetu, the director of the project for the federal government.

"The main buildings are still as they were when they were built in the 18th century."

However, the painstaking reconstruction of such classic military structures as the buttressed Dauphine Redoubt, built in 1712, is expected to take the project beyond the target date of 1981 and the original budget of $16 million, Tetu said.

Work has been slowed by the discovery of foundations, walls, and even a stone stairway that had been built over and forgotten. Structures weakened by age and settling have had to be reinforced with steel straps and injections of cement.

The $20 million Place Royale restoration project, directed by the Ministry of Cultural Affairs of Quebec Province with half the financing provided by the federal government, has involved acquisition and refurbishing of 80 historic residences built in the 17th and 18th centuries by prosperous French settlers.

When the work is completed in a few years, a substantial chunk of the oldest part of Quebec will look, at least outwardly, as it did when this city on the banks of the broad Saint Lawrence River was the pride of New France, a short-lived empire that once extended to the Gulf of Mexico.

Strike Stalled By Hospitals

EDMONTON (CP) — Threatened walkouts by non-medical workers at city hospitals were postponed Friday pending the outcome of negotiations next week.

Spokesmen for both the Canadian Union of Public Employees and the Health Sciences Association said their members are prepared to negotiate with the Alberta Hospital Association in separate meetings Tuesday and Wednesday.

Deportation Order Issued for Sanucci

John Sanucci, a United States prison escaper blamed by a coroner's jury for the death of a woman near Gibsons, north of Vancouver last July, has been ordered deported.

The deportation order was issued against Sanucci, 29, after an immigration department hearing here Friday.

He is to be deported, the hearing decided, on grounds that he made false and misleading statements to an immigration officer at Gibsons last July 16 when he claimed to be a Canadian citizen. He also was found to have overstayed the time he was permitted to stay in Canada.

Sanucci was arrested and charged with possession of marijuana last Saturday after an RCMP drug squad raid in Oak Bay. Immigration department officials said that the deportation order probably would not be executed at least until the marijuana charge is dealt with when Sanucci appears for preliminary hearing in provincial court here next Wednesday.

A Gibsons coroner's jury found that the 33-year-old artist Mary Margaret Jones died as a result of a blow or blows last July 12. Sanucci had been charged with manslaughter in the death, but disappeared after being interviewed by an immigration officer on July 16. A stay of proceedings was entered on the manslaughter charge just before the inquest opened.

The jury's verdict led coroner John Harvey to recommend that the attorney-general's department drop the stay of proceedings and press the manslaughter charge.

His recommendation was rejected earlier this week by Neil McDiarmid, B.C. director of criminal law, who said there was not enough evidence to support the charge.

VOTE ON ROCKY EXPECTED DEC. 9

WASHINGTON (WP) — Nelson A. Rockefeller's nomination to be vice president was approved, 9 to 0, by the Senate Rules Committee Friday while the nominee underwent a second day of questioning by the House Judiciary Committee.

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield said he expects to bring the nomination to the Senate floor on Monday, Dec. 9 for debate. Approval by a majority in both houses is required and expected.

Sen. Howard Cannon (D-Nev.), rules committee chairman, said the committee had declined, also by a unanimous vote, to impose on Rockefeller any formal requirement to put his vast financial holdings in a blind trust or to refrain from making any further personal gifts to public officials.

The rules committee noted that Rockefeller in a statement volunteered to the House Judiciary committee had promised if confirmed to place all his securities in a blind trust, where he would have no knowledge or control over what securities his agents bought and sold. He also had promised at Senate hearings to refrain from making gifts to federal officials, except for token birthday or holiday gifts or aid with medical bills. While governor of New York for 15 years he had made gifts of more than $2 million to political associates.

Sen. Robert C. Byrd (D-W. Va.), toughest questioner of Rockefeller at Senate hearings, voted to send the nomination to the full Senate with a favorable recommendation, but said he reserved the right to vote as he pleased on the Senate floor.

Senate insiders now believe that despite a flap over Rockefeller gifts and his role in the financing of a 1970 campaign book critical of political opponent Arthur Goldberg, Rockefeller will win approval from the full Senate, unless new and damaging facts about his record come to light in House Judiciary Committee hearings.

Women's Role In Engineering Task Force Set

Highways Minister Graham Lea announced Friday he is setting up a task force to explore the opportunities for women in engineering professions.

Timing the task force with International Women's Year set for 1975, Lea said his department "finds itself in a very difficult position because it draws most of its senior staff from engineering professions" dominated by men.

"Now we all may have our suspicious as to why women are not attracted to the engineering professions, but I think it is time these suspicions were investigated."

Appointments to the task force, he said, will be made early in the new year.

Jail 'Turmoil' Flooded Toilets

A sewage problem described by a Wilkinson Road jail prisoner in provincial court Friday as creating a "terrible turmoil" was just two overflowing toilets, the prison director said later in the day.

Leo Baker, 24, of 885 Craigflower, being held at the jail while awaiting trial on a charge of committing armed robbery at the Criterion Club on Yates Street Sept 5. told the court a jail tier was "completely flooded out." The sewage was backing up.

Baker made the comments when he appeared for a routine remand with his co-accused, Henry Frank Guiney, 42, of 304 Oswego, who told the court he wanted to lay a charge of theft against the prison director.

Director S. A. L. Hamblin said in an interview two toilets in two cells had overflowed at 8:45 a.m., but a maintenance man was working on the problem 10 minutes later.

The toilets were operating again at 10:30 a.m.

The director said he believed a prisoner had plugged the toilet.

There was no disruption of prison life, he said.

Baker submitted a brief to Judge William Ostler that he indicated was concerned with medical, recreational, visiting and mail problems, at the jail, but details were not given in court.

He reminded Ostler a list of complaints had been given to him by prisoners in the summer.

"Things we submitted to you at that time were improved for a short time only," Baker said.

The judge said he would pass on the brief to correctional officials.

He pointed out "steps are being taken as soon as possible to phase out that prison."

Correctional officials, Ostler said, "are well aware of the deficiences of the prison any they are doing their best to correct them."

Discussing the other matters raised by Baker, Hamblin said prisoners awaiting trial are getting extra recreational activity, may have visitors for one hour five days a week, and may write all the letters they like.

He also said medical attention is available 24 hours a day.

The judge told Baker concerning the theft matter, he would be able to see the prosecutor about it.

Prosecutor Gordon Macdonald said in an interview Guiney told him after court he had ordered a copy of the Bail Reform Act but had not received it.

Guiney told Macdonald a cheque for a small amount had been cashed.

Macdonald said the prosecutor's office is investigating.

Hamblin said Guiney had asked the jail to deduct $2 plus a small amount for a cheque or money order from his personal account.

The money was to go to Information Canada for a copy of the act.

"If it (a copy of the act) arrives here, he would get it," Hamblin said.

Craftsmen, Artists Return for Gallery Display

By AUDRY JOHNSON
Times Staff

How is it done?

That's the single simple question that occurs to most children and other people as well when they encounter some art or craft work that is unfamiliar.

Or maybe some everyday article — a fisherman's creel, a student's fiddle, a woman's intricately patterned skirt — arrests attention briefly and sets a person wondering about the processes that brought these articles into being.

The everlasting fascination of special creative processes is that for the majority of people they lie within the realm of mystery and magic.

To draw close to some of this magic and penetrate the mystery, each year when the Greater Victoria Art Gallery presents "craftsmen and artists at work," Victorians pour into the Moss Street gallery, queuing up along the street to await their turn for admission.

They come in singles, in couples, in families. Neighbors come together and strangers meet and part as friends, knit by their common interest.

Starting next Thursday and continuing through Sunday, Dec. 1, the women's committee-sponsored event will be under way again.

Some of the artists and the processes that have fascinated visitors in other years, will be back.

Pat Martin Bates and her students will again demonstrate the intricate and lovely art of etching. On past occasions, youngsters and others with no previous art training have been thrilled with the production of their own etchings.

Carving of Indian masks by Richard, Tony and Calvin Hunt will be a highlight. And, intense interest in the art of making musical instruments has brought about violin-maker Sigvald Hoibakke's return by popular request.

The Ukrainian Community will again display its lavish peasant embroidrey and the delicafe craft of decorating eggs. The inlaid cheeseboards of Michael Rougier are becoming a collector's item and this year he had added hand-made hay rakes to his demonstration.

Spinners Frances Hunter and Margo Fainsford are returning while Carol Lawko is new to the show this year.

Those intrigued by the new and different will be fascinated by a display of skin illustration — tattooing — by Bev Lazonga of Seattle. But it's tattooing of a very different kind and quality to that associated with sailors in the seaport taverns of the world.

New also is Chris Aronson, whose specialty is stained glass mobiles, and Esme Davis, a former outstanding caligrapher who has turned her attention to the revitalizing of folk art basketry.

Music boxes in ceramic are the special interest of potter Byron Johnstad. Sculptor Neil Dalrymple whose work is on display at the gallery in the Fired Sculpture show, will be working at his craft, and so will fly-typing expert E. Oliver Harvey.

Controversial painter Luis Merino, the dynamic artist whose mural was regrettably obliterated from the wall of Gorge Road Hospital, is a part of this year's show.

The enchantment of jewelry lies in form and design, color and lustre; its mystery in the working and combination of metals.

Harry Schafer works jewelry

will be demonstrating their decorative craft; Harry Schafer who works with silver and ivory and precious and semi-precious stones; Alf Carlsen, a gallery member, and Frank Hannigan who specializes in handwrought silver.

Other craftsmen will be weavers Jane Kidd who works on two looms, one a huge 12'x12' tapestry loom, Pat Gislason and Joan Dennis; stitchery experts Joan Scarboro and Lorraine Calvert

Three creators of jewelry who produce collages and Martha Prentis who makes colorful stained glass-effect banners.

Wood block printers Hugh Matheson and Cornelis van Driel and potter Art Brendon complete the array of artists and craftsmen at work.

A silkscreened photographic montage is being made up by the Northwest Coast Institute of the Arts and Circle Crafts with the assistance of photographer Bill Porteous and will be hung in the gallery during the show.

Children will of course be able to attend the show with their parents but special school tours of Grades 5, 6 and 7 youngsters will take place, Friday. Limited to 600 and already fully booked, these tours will have priority on Friday between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Hours for the showing on Thursday are 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.; Friday evening, 7 to 9:30 and Saturday and Sunday, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

With Christmas little more than a jingle bell away the exhibition-demonstration presents a unique opportunity to do some extra-special gift selecting and hint-dropping.

Pan of Brownies

By MARY MOORE

When I want to win over teen-agers to help their mothers with the cooking there is nothing like a pan of brownies.

We have been saving Laura W's Brownie recipe for three or four years and now it has surfaced, been tested and tasted and approved.

LAURA W's CHOCOLATE BROWNIES
(double quantity)

1 c. butter or margarine (room temperature)
2 c. granulate sugar
4 large eggs
2 c. unsifted cake-and-pastry flour
1 tsp. salt
2 tsp. baking powder
½ c. cocoa
2 tsp. vanilla
1 c. chopped nuts
1 c. miniature marshmallows

In large bowl cream together butter or margarine and sugar. Add eggs and mix well. Add flour, salt, baking powder, cocoa and vanilla and blend thoroughly, scraping down sides and bottom of bowl two or three times. stir in nuts and marshmallows. Have buttered an 8" and a 9" square cake pan.

Spread a little more than half the batter evenly into the 9" square pan. Spread remaining batter evenly into 8" square pan pushing batter into corners and smoothing top. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 20-25 minutes. Cool on cake racks in pans then frost with fudge icing made by melting ½ cup butter or margarine in pot. Remove from heat but while still hot add ¼ cup cocoa, 2 cups icing sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla, and 3 tablespoons hot water and blend until smooth. Allow to stand at room temperature for an hour or so to set after frosting has been spread on brownies BUT if your crowd cannot wait to taste them chill one pan in the refrigerator for a while then cut into squares and go to it.

Free for the Asking

By HARRIET HART

You can have an excellent illustrated 16-page booklet, written especially for older children and teenagers who suffer from asthma.

The booklet tries to help them manage their condition through a better understanding of what is happening in their body. It also encourages these young people to live as full a life as possible and tells them about well-known personalities who, despite their handicap, have achieved world fame.

Patients 'Die', Defects Cured

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Infants born with serious heart or artery defects are being surgically cured by first being made to "die," a panel of doctors says.

The surgical procedure involves draining the babies of blood and then dropping their body temperature to about 60 degrees. This permits surgeons to perform complex repairs to such defects as malformed arteries or leaky hearts chamber walls.

"You're really operating on an infant that's dead," Dr. William Mustard of the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto said Tuesday.

"This creates a perfectly bloodless surgical field. You have about an hour."

During the hour, surgeons using the procedure can make life-saving repairs that would not be possible otherwise. Often the patients weigh as little as 5½ pounds and sometimes are less than a month old.

After the surgical repair is completed, the patient is warmed and the blood is restored.

"These children wake up crying," said Dr. Mustard. "And they've been dead for an hour. It's astonishing."

Dr. Mustard and Dr. Clarence Weldon of St. Louis, another surgeon using the procedure, say there is no evidence of brain damage.

"It's very difficult to find any neurological damage in these infants," said Dr. Weldon. "After all, you can't give them I.Q. tests."

In many cases, the risks of not doing the surgery outweigh the risks of the operation.

"These are critically ill, very fragile babies," said Dr. Mary Allen Engle of the Cornell Medical Centre in New York.

She said it often is a difficult struggle just to keep the infants alive long enough for surgery to be attempted.

Despite the radical medical procedures performed upon them, the children are remarkably unaffected, said Dr. Engle.

Doing the Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Llwy Gariad . . . an old Welsh tradition in replica . . .

If you're Welsh, you probably know all about "love spoons" . . . which in olden days were given by suitors to their loved ones in lieu of engagement rings . . . Designs are traditional and each one has a meaning of its own . . . Well, in a couple of weeks time, some genuine hand-carved wood Welsh love spoons, nicely boxed, will be arriving at the Welsh Hand loom . . . so do keep this in mind when making out your Christmas list . . . Even more exciting, from our point of view, are the sterling silver pendant replicas of these spoons which Mrs. Alguire personally brought back from Wales last week . . . As we said, they're sterling silver, complete with chains . . . single spoon replica . . . a double spoon . . . and a gorgeous dragon like the one on the Welsh flag. Real conversation pieces, these! . . . For the males on your list there are new handwoven ties in tweed . . . and the typically Welsh dragon ties (plain green with a tiny red dragon in front) . . . And coming in soon . . . Welsh wool tapestry cushion covers and skirt-and-sweater packs . . . tapestry skirt length with dyed-to-match yarn for knitting your own sweater . . . These make very nice Yuletide gifts . . . as do the tapestry place mats, coasters, and all kinds and sizes of purses, handbags, eyeglass cases and the like . . . There's a delightful book called "Wales in Color" . . . and a couple of small Welsh cook books coming in . . . so if you've ever wondered how to make those delectable little Welsh cakes done on a griddle . . . you'll find the answer here . . . Easy as pie, we're told! . . . Welsh Hand Loom, Nootka Court, 624 Humboldt St., 384-7723.

The evening stole can also be worn to hood the head, or as a floating side panel on a jersey or chiffon gown.

Happy hunting ground for sweaters . . .

We've lost count of the number of people we've sent to Roy Imports for sweaters they couldn't find anywhere else! . . . Fact is, not only are Roy's sweaters tops in quality but they're also tops in value . . . and their selection is enough to make your head spin! . . . This week a new shipment of those long V-neck sweaters with pockets which everyone seems to be looking for, have arrived at Roy's . . . Made in Scotland by Hogg of Hawich, they're 100% pure lambswool . . . have two pockets, a smart ribbing down the front . . . and come in a fine array of colors like navy, black, geranium, cornflower, grey, scarlet and bone . . . Still only $45! . . . More new arrivals are pure wool ski or outdoor sweaters from Norway . . . Really lovely, these . . . with their traditional Norwegian designs on variously colored backgrounds . . . Both pullovers and cardigans . . . the latter with either pretty antique silvery buttons or clasps . . . And if you'd like a lightweight botany wool Dalkeith pullover, Roy's have them too! . . . We noticed that there are still a few Longdon Fog raincoats with zip-out linings . . . great for this cool, wet weather . . . Twin sweater sets in both cashmere and lambswool are enroute from Scotland right now and will be here in time for Christmas giving, we're told . . . Some beautiful Swiss/printed hankies . . . round or square . . . to tuck in a Christmas card . . . And also from Switzerland . . . very pretty silk, and pure wool challis scarves at Roy Imports, 817 Government St., 384-4737.

Chiffon is a runner-up to jersey in big-sleeved shirt gowns on bright florals in melon or mint green.

Your needlepoint masterpiece starts at Christie's . . .

Writing a column like this is a liberal education . . . because we're continually learning interesting things which would never come within our ken in the normal course of events! . . . For instance, when Mrs. Low's at Christie's showed us the lovely hand-painted needlepoint canvases from Europe which have recently arrived at her store . . . we wondered why hand-painting was superior to just plain printing since it's all going to be stiched over anyway . . . The answer is that hand-painting provides more detailing . . . more nuances in shading . . . So you needlepoint experts who want to create something really superb . . . go see these new hand-painted canvases at Christie's . . . There are large figures, still lifes, scenes, and other pictures to delight your heart and set your fingers itching to get at it! . . . Very good printed Old Masters too . . . And to work them all with . . . full lines of Patton's Beehive and DMC tapestry yarns . . . Penelope crewel wool for the crewel workers . . . Petitpoint mesh and a full line of Anchor and DMC embroidery cotton at this needlecraft supply store which has simply everything you could possibly think of for creative stitchery, of all kinds! . . . We saw some pure linen tablecloths in various sizes, stamped all ready to be embroidered . . . New plastic embroidery hoops which are far superior to the old wood ones . . . and those plastic bag handles we told you about last month have now arrived . . . For a friend who does needle point or petitpoint, Christie's have some very nice kits . . . and anything in the way of canvases or supplies they don't have on hand they'll order for you from their big array of catalogues . . . Christie's, 818 Fort St., 384-8770

Now that fashion is once again lady-like and elegant, evening pajamas are back on the fall fashion scene.

Gift ideas with a difference . . .

We toured the Import Shop at Standard Furniture again this week . . . and discovered some new arrivals to add to the long list of different and unusual items you'll want to have a look at when doing your own Christmas shopping . . . There's some gorgeous stainless steel holloware from Denmark . . . called the Cylinda-line . . . and designed by Professor Arne Jacobsen, an international award-winning designer and architect . . . All sorts of things like tea and coffee pots, ice buckets, cocktail shakers, salad bowls and servers, jugs with and without ice lips, unique ashtrays that flip around . . . All with tall, clean cylindrical lines that are a joy to behold! . . . This steelware you really must see if you want to give a really handsome and unusual gift to someone special! . . . Then there's a lot of new Boda Swedish textured crystal . . . things like grapefruit, corn and avocado dishes . . . egg cups made like plates with a depression in the middle to hold your egg upright! . . . Delightful pewter pieces embellished with Norwegian folk designs . . . Candleholders, coasters, salts and peppers, salad servers and the like in this Norwegian pewter . . . The Tivoli plastic kitchenware from Denmark is really something special . . . Colorful as all get-out . . . and what's more it's dishwasher proof . . . heat and cold resistant . . . Among the many items in this ware are lovely mixing bowls with removable rubber rings on the bottom so your bowl won't slither around when in use . . . We even saw some very interesting jewellery . . . necklaces, rings, pendants, cuff links etc. in unusual contemporary designs . . . Standard Furniture Co., 737 Yates St. 382-5111

What we now call the chemise, used to be called the shift . . . which was originally called the chemise!

Fashion jewellery with style, verve and originality . . .

Customers wandering around Wilson's this past week have been doing a double-take when their eyes lighted on the exciting array of costume jewellery now on display! . . . We could write a whole column just telling you about it . . . but space being at a premium, will just mention the elegant bead necklaces hand-made by an extraordinary Finnish woman who has an uncanny talent with color . . . selects her beads from all over Europe, . . . the bazaars of Istanbul as well as the flee market in Paris . . . and makes necklaces for the biggest fashion houses in Europe . . . Also from Finland . . . one-of-a-kind bronze pieces . . . some of them really spectacular . . . designed by noted Finnish artists . . . They're mostly pendants on chains . . . one a huge medallion with a brown agate in the centre . . . Unique, elegant, extravagant pieces, these . . . for the woman who wants something spectacular and exciting! . . . Bronze, we're told, is especially in demand these days when gold and silver are soaring out-of-sight . . . But Wilson's do still sell sterling silver by David-Andersen of Oslo . . . Lovely pins, earrings, pendants, rings . . . as well as the well-loved gold-plated and enamelled silver jewellery . . . Getting into the lower price brackets . . . and just right for day and evening wear with Wilson's lovely clothes . . . are the chains, earrings, necklaces and bracelets in gold or silver non-tarnishable metal . . . Dainty chains with groups of sparkling rock crystal beads to add a touch of glitter to your after-five costume . . . Rope necklaces . . . chokers . . . jet beads and earrings much like those grandma used to wear . . . Pretty jewellery for all occasions! . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177 and 1210 Newport Ave., 592-2821.

Visit Charmante's for lovely holiday attire . . .

First thing to catch our eye when we breezed into Charmante's the other day were the acrylic metallic sleeveless scoop-neck tops which seem to fill the bill so well with many of the new long skirts . . . Worn either "as is" or over a tilored blouse for a festive touch with a more casual outfit . . . Noticed that these come in gold, silver and black . . . while some black metallic tops have long sleeves and a double frill around the scoop neck . . . Short black velvet skirts are new, too . . . and there's a really nice selection of long skirts . . . plaids, velvets and hand-washable acrylics with elastic waistbands and separate belts . . . If we hadn't been told differently we'd have sworn these latter were hand-woven! . . . We love Charmante's new loungewear . . . Palazzo pajamas in nylon jersey printed in a lizard design . . . pretty sexy stuff! . . . Other two-piece outfits with big floral patterns . . . either long skirt or palazzo pants . . . with pullover tops or shorter surplice tops . . . Charmante's peignoir sets in frosted nylon with warm quilted robe are most attractive and would make lovely Yuletide gifts from man to maid . . . Another good gift idea is a crocheted evening stole or shall . . . of which Charmante's have a fine selection . . . Or what about Charmante's separate fur collars . . . we noticed fox, opossum and silver mink . . . very elegant to wear with a long, shawl-collared sweater . . . And speaking of furs, Charmante's still have a small number of fur-trimmed coats at reduced prices . . . They're well worth a visit! Charmante's Hillside Shopping Centre, 385-1543

SPECIAL CAR FOR DISABLED

WINNIPEG (CP) — The modification of a 1974 model car has enabled a severely handicapped 27-year-old Winnipeg teacher to achieve a measure of independence in her daily living.

With the aid of a $1,200 grant from a local organization, Ruth Wiebe, the victim of a 1953 polio epidemic which rendered her arms virtually useless, was able to install a variety of equipment in her car to allow operation without the use of hands.

The adaptions include a photo-electric cell mounted on the dashboard to switch on headlights automatically when daylight diminishes, a sensor on the hood to operate a transistorized dimmer switch for highway driving and a special steering plate mounted on the righthand side of the driving column.

Ignition is accomplished by a foot-operated starter switch near the gas pedal.

Because she has limited use of her left hand, controls for turn signals, horn and windshield wipers are implanted on the arm rest of the door.

Designed by the Health Sciences Centre, Miss Wiebe's car was modelled on one constructed by a handicapped man's father last summer. After seeing it, Miss Wiebe was convinced she was capable of operating a similar vehicle.

'It's a Time to Remember'

elizabeth forbes

Fifty years!

Look ahead and they stretch endlessly into the future. Look back and they are so crowded with happenings, you find the time has passed almost without realization of its length.

That's the way it seemed to early members of the Royal Jubilee Hospital Auxiliary, who reminisced over coffee the other morning in the Newport Avenue home of the 1974-75 president, Mrs. C. C. Simpson.

Miss Norma Macdonald, first president of the group, was there, also Mrs. A. L. Harvey (the former Miss B. M. Pemberton) a charter member. With them were Mrs. P. J. Steel (Barbara Bullock-Webster) who joined at one of the first meetings; Mrs. J. L. Aylard, a past president who has been compiling a brief history of auxiliary events and Mrs. G. B. McKay, the immediate past president.

Why were they there? Because, as Mrs. Simpson said with no little pride, "the auxiliary celebrates its golden anniversary on Dec. 1. Naturally then, it's a time to remember our past."

How did it all start? According to Miss Macdonald, hospital needs were rapidly growing and the Women's Auxiliary was looking for help.

That help, it was believed, should come from the many young and single women in Victoria. So, Mrs. Herman Robertson, wife of a well-known physician, set out to find those women.

"She invited us to a bridge party in her home on Clive Drive," Mrs. Harvey remembers, "and when she had us seated around the card tables, she presented us with the idea of forming a junior group.

"We accepted, and there and then, the Junior Branch of the Women's Auxiliary of the Provincial Royal Jubilee Hospital, was formed."

Other charter members were the Misses Helen Macdonald (now Mrs. Oliver Pauline); Inez Carey (Mrs. Mutershead of Sooke); Helen Foreman (Mrs. Gordon Macdonald now living in Nova Scotia); Betty Kirk, Gwen Lemon (Mrs. Manton, living in England); Ruth McBride (Mrs. W. M. Carmichael); Bessie Jones (Mrs. Allan Wylie); Grace Robertson, Maraquita Nichol (Mrs. R. Walter) and Gladys Irving.

Mrs. Robertson and a Mrs. Rhodes were ex-officio members representing the Women's Auxiliary.

First undertaking was the decorating of trees in four hospital wards for Christmas and presentation of small gifts to patients.

Many of the projects that are active on the auxiliary's program today, were started back in those early years.

A showcase of baby clothes (made by the members) was maintained in the maternity wing of the main hospital block (demolished many years ago).

The Thrift Shop was opened for two half days a week. Now it is open five full days a week.

"We sold used golf balls in that shop for a time," Mrs. Steel remembered, "and we dug a good many of them out of the bushes ourselves."

By the time of the second annual meeting in 1927, it had been decided to admit married women to membership. And from then on the auxiliary expanded rapidly and many exciting innovations were introduced.

Money for the various projects was raised in a variety of ways, first with bridge teas and sales from the showcase, then through annual dances, fashion shows and bazaars.

Raffles wtre organized, one prize being a trip to Skagway and another a round-trip ticket to Hawaii.

There were Hospital Balls and Bunny Balls too, also decorated table displays and the start of what was for many years the very popular Dolls' Bazaar.

Membership grew and with it the number of programs and projects.

Wards on one of the floors were painted, a new ambulance donated, two cots and furnishings were given to a new ward established for two-year-olds.

Social service work was started in the hospital, first with a part-time worker, Miss Joan Hallet, and then a full-time worker, Miss Martha McBride.

A visiting and transportation committee was formed, also a committee to roll and prepare bandages and another to give out diets. Aid was made available for vocational work.

Volume of revenue grew. Back in 1926, a doll was dressed and raffled for $18.75, the forerunner of the first Dolls' Bazaar which brought in $428.

Earlier this month, the 1974 bazaar — again featuring dolls after a lapse of several years — brought in a sum of $13,000.

Total receipts during the 1973-74 year were approximately $74,000; over the past five years $205,420.

During that five years the auxiliary has supplied many expensive pieces of equipment in the hospital.

These include a high vacuum sterilizer, a two-channel automatic well counter, a fiberoptic colonoscope, a cardiac monitor and defibrillator and pacemaker, three kidney machines and cribs and chairs fo the pediatrics ward.

Social services have been assisted, renovations made to the nurses' residence, the Thrift Shop and the showcase have been maintained and stocked, also a mobile general store for the benefit of patients. Monetary help was given to the Eric Martin Institute.

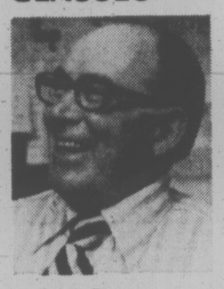
Name of the auxiliary has been changed twice in the 50 years, first in the mid-30s to the Junior Auxiliary to the Royal Jubilee Hospital and, when the Women's Auxiliary finally closed its books for the last time in 1972, to the Royal Jubilee Hospital Auxilairy.

Today's records show 168 active members and 110 associates.

"You can see by all this that we have not been idle in our 50 years," Mrs. Simpson says.

That, I imagine, could be labelled as the understatement of the year.

ABOUT YOUR GLASSES



by Ralph Drew, Consultant to the Canadian Guild of Dispensing Opticians

"I'm going to get some new glasses. This time I'd like one of those big frames with large lenses. Will there be any difficulty with my prescription?"

If you find yourself in this category you're not unusual these days. And if that question about your prescription does occur to you, you're pretty smart. Because there just might be difficulty. Not always, just sometimes.

It depends on the kind of lenses you need. With some there's no trouble at all, with others we have to be careful. In extreme cases, they simply can't be made.

How can you tell? And what do we have to be careful about? Mostly it's the power of the lenses, and whether they are for one vision—like only for distance—or for two, like bifocals. If you're very young and the lenses are not bifocals, then your only concern is how thick, and therefore how heavy your glasses may turn out to be. Remember, the bigger they are, the heavier. Ask your optician about optical plastic lenses. They weigh about half as much as glass lenses and they are resistant to impact too. They look exactly the same as glass and behave precisely the same way. You might be surprised to know how many of your friends have optical plastic lenses. If they are bifocal, you may have a problem. Not all bifocal lenses can be made for some of those big frames. But some can. It depends on the kind of bifocal, and how big the frame is.

My advice—Talk it over with your dispensing optician. He'll tell you whether your lenses can be made for the frame you'd like to wear, and he'll show you how they will look too. The chances are they can be made all right, and that you'll like them. And frankly, I don't blame you. Some of these new big lens styles are really attractive.

Babysitter No Poser: Kiddies Come to Work

VANCOUVER (CP) — For Pat le Roux and June Demetz combining motherhood and career is no problem — they take their children to work.

June and Pat have side-by-side shops in Vancouver's Pat is a spinner and June a florist. Pat's daughter Jennifer, 21 months, and June's daughter Casey, 4, spend the day there.

The mothers love having their daughters at the shops — although that was not their initial reaction.

"I decided to bring Casey in here with me and although it was difficult at first, she does as well here as she does at home," said June.

Pat had her shop all planned when she discovered she was pregnant.

"I thought, so much for the business and my shop," she said. "Then I figured, it was my business and my shop so why couldn't I have my baby with me?

"She wasn't walking or anything. I built a cot in the back — she sleeps well.

"Jennifer rarely gets into the stock because she's grown up in it and knows it's something she shouldn't touch. She has a big smile for people coming into the shop and gives it a casual atmosphere. And she amuses other children who come in with their mothers — her toys are here and they play together."

CUSTOMERS HELP

Like all children, Jennifer can be crabby at times but Pat says the customers are a diversion.

"She's not that way often enough to worry about. If I was really busy, I couldn't get away with it, but then if I was busy, I could afford someone to take care of her."

Shopkeeping has been an educational experience for Casey.

"Casey has learned the names of the flowers and makes displays out of broken flowers," said June. "She learned to count on my adding machine and has been printing for some time.

"She doesn't interrupt any more when I have a customer but she will quote wholesale prices to them on occasion.

"She rearranges my displays and I have to redo them — but she thinks what she's doing is good. She doesn't answer the business phone any more but she sure uses up a lot of our good stationery on her projects."

'Youngest' Dean Taking Charge

VANCOUVER (CP) — At age 32, Lynda Haskins thinks she may be the youngest college dean in Canada. "That makes me feel very good," she said.

Ms. Haskins is dean of Columbia Junior College which has 316 students, a dozen full-time teachers and at least 12 part-time teachers.

Ms. Haskins, who has taught at the college for four years, is not worried about being in charge.

"There may be times when I will have to say, 'OK, this is the way we will have to do it,' but for the most part decisions will be made by the people who are most concerned — the faculty and the student."

She worked for a while as executive director of Nasaika Lodge, a home for adolescent native Indian girls and said the experience taught her a great deal about counselling and the problems of minorities.

"I really know how blacks and Indians feel being isolated, never quite knowing how people are going to react.

"I can understand how young people particularly become diffident and don't want to push themselves.

"A lot of people assume they know what it's like to be in a minority but very few people actually do."

She says the small size of the college is an advantage.

"This makes a fantastic difference to the kids. We get to know all our students personally and the result is they never feel lost or left out."

Ms. Haskins is part owner of a farm on South Pender Island and goes there on most weekends. "I enjoy shovelling manure with the rest of them," she said.

She said she doesn't want to get married because she doesn't believe in lifetime relationships "but I can become totally committed to a relationship for as long as it lasts."

Recovery Urged

SASKATOON (CP) — A Toronto business executive has called on governments to establish a national network of resources recovery plants.

Ron Hayter, executive director of the Plastics Industry Council, said in an interview that Canada has an escalating solid waste problem and it is no longer wise or economical to buy or burn it.

He said it is too valuable because modern technology now enables society to recover and recycle garbage.

In that way, he said, consumption of non-renewable resources would be retarded.

Avon Lady, 78 Fights Inflation

TORONTO (CP) — Della Goard thought it was time to fight inflation.

So, at the age of 78, she got a job as an Avon lady.

"I won't make a fortune but every little bit counts," said Mrs. Goard, who figured she makes $35, after expenses, for about 48 hours of work.

Mrs. Goard said her greatest fear is that rising rents will force her out of her comfortable one-bedroom apartment and into a senior citizens' home.

"You don't even have a bedroom in a senior citizens' home," she said. "I'm used to space."

Mrs. Goard receives a $190-a-month pension plus $22 monthly under the Ontario guaranteed annual income program.

Most of it goes to pay the rent, $160 a month.

"I get so scared when I hear them on the TV news predicting that rents are going up by 30 per cent," she said.

Her other big expense is drugs. She spends about $30 a month on drugs not covered by the province's price prescription drug plan which makes a list of 1,200 drugs free to needy senior citizens.

That leaves $22 a month for food, but Mrs. Goard said she is not a big eater.

1,200 Volunteers Needed

More than 1,200 volunteers are needed to help Kiwanis Villagers raise money to defray capital costs at the village.

Volunteers and Kiwanis Club members will collect money in a Porchlite Blitz Monday, Nov. 25, to help pay for the housing project that accomodates 231 persons near Cook St. and Mallek Cres.

Anyone interested in helping should call 382-0331.

Santa Only Slick 'Huckster'

CHICAGO (UPI) — Santa Claus, the kindly old dispenser of Christmas cheer, is really a slick huckster who has taught greed, not love, to millions of children, it was charged Wednesday.

"Let's leave Santa at the North Pole" writes Catholic layman John Mahoney in the December issue of U.S. Catholic.

"How often do you see a Santa who is not serving as an outright huckster?" Mahoney asked in the sounding board section of the Clarethian Fathers monthly magazine.

"Whereas the true lesson of Christmas is a message of divine mercy and sacrifice, Santa is the front man for greedy corporations and the tutor in greed for millions of American children. He is the saint of gimme . . .

"A couple of generations back Santa was a relatively innocent imposter, but today he has become a total sellout to materialism and greed. He is in the pay of the big toy manufacturers and department stores."

Mahoney said he was once shattered when told there was no Santa Claus and vowed his children would not have to suffer such a blow. Later he said, he found better reasons "for puncturing this over-inflated figures."

"Young children, whose unformulated motto in life is 'what's in it for me?', can scarcely overlook that, according to the information they have received, it is the jolly old elf rather than the babe who delivers the tangible goods."

Mahoney maintains the "Santa myth" means unhappy children.

"A greedy child is never peased. A spoiled child appreappeased. A spoiled child appreciates nothing. An over-in-the major figure of Christmas is not Christ, but himself."

Alvarez-Welch Medical Report

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

I fear that many people do not realize how much disturbance emotion can make in the functions of parts of the body. For the first half-century of my life, I was known as a stomach specialist, and much of my study was done on the functions of the stomach and bowel in men and animals.

And yet, by 1910, I was so interested in nervous upsets in digestion and the discomforts of the abdomen that I gave a paper before the San Francisco Medical Society on "psychosomatic medicine" (psyche meaning mind, and soma meaning body). I was told that it was the first talk on that subject that had been given up to that time. Later I wrote a number of books: "The Neuroses," "Live at Peace With Your Nerves," and others.

Eventually, around 1945, I realized that I was no longer much interested in abdominal discomforts. My interests had changed, and I was more a student of neuroses, minor psychoses, migraine, little strokes, and non-convulsive epilepsy. Those were the diseases that I kept seeing every day.

Many a time, when I have had to say to a nervous or perhaps mildly psychotic woman that the very thorough examination which she had received had failed to show any signs of organic disease, as we doctors call it, she flared in anger and said, "You mean to say that I'm faking this, or enjoying it, or making it up, or searching for sympathy?" I have had to answer, "Oh, no. I would rather have a broken leg than what you have; because my broken leg could be cured in six weeks, and I fear that much of what you have you will have to fight and live with for the rest of your days."

Often I could quiet the woman and get her to see what I meant by telling her of a time during the horrible influenza epidemic in 1918-1919, when my 5-year-old daughter got a fever of 105 degrees and promptly went out of her head. Because I knew that that type of influenza with pneumonia was killing children in two or three days, a great fear came over me, and, until the child showed that she could recover, I had a severe pain in the pit of my stomach. It was almost impossible for me to swallow, because the food came back up into my throat. When she got well I got well.

Sometimes, trying to get a woman to see how some tragedy in her life, in her home, in her husband's business, or in her sex life had brought illness, I have reminded her that laymen have always known that emotion can affect the organs of the body.

As I have said here before, we have many slang expressions about this fact; we say that somebody got "cold feet" when frightened; or he got "hot under the collar" or "all in a lather," or his brother-in-law was a "pain in the neck" and so forth.

I just read, in the Archives of Internal Medicine for November, 1972, that the rare Scheie syndrome (group of symptoms) have now been found to be due to the body's lack of a ferment that enables us to use certain complicated sugars. What interests me in this announcement is my impression that more new puzzling diseases are going to be found to be due to such a lack. Recently I saw a list of some 15 such diseases, each due to a chemical that an infant can lack when he is born. More and more, medicine is becoming a matter of chemistry.

I'll never forget a very able young man who came to see me at the Mayo Clinic, suffering from a depression. Because he didn't want much treatment, he was ill for some two years before he came out of the spell. Later, he had another spell and again he went about two years before he came out. Psychotherapy didn't do him any good.

The next time he came to see me and agreed to go to my good friend, a very able psychiatrist, Dr. A. E. Bennett of Berkeley, California. Dr. Bennett gave him eight electroshock treatments, and that was the end of his spell. As long as he lived, he never was depressed again.

In another case, years ago, the patient was an able young man who was in such a bad depression that he had to give up his position in a big company. I wanted to have a psychiatrist give some electroshocks, but he refused. I then prescribed for him a drug which often relieves depressed persons, and in thre weeks he was well. He has been well ever since.

DRINKING TOO MUCH? WORRIED? WANT TO QUIT?

After much study hospitals and universities have worked out a series of questions used as a guide in the determination of alcoholism. The following 20 questions or a variation of the same is generally accepted as a reliable measuring stick.

Answer YES to one or two of them and it is a warning. Answer YES to three or more, you ARE an alcoholic and you had better do something about it.

1. Do you lose time from work due to drinking?
2. Is drinking making your home life unhappy?
3. Do you drink because you are shy with people?
4. Is drinking affecting your reputation?
5. Have you ever felt remorse after drinking?
6. Has drinking gotten you into money trouble?
7. Do you turn to lower companions when you drink?
8. Do you forget your family's welfare when you drink?
9. Has your ambition decreased since drinking?
10. Do you crave a drink at a definite time daily?
11. Do you want a drink next morning?
12. Does drinking cause you trouble in sleeping?
13. Has your efficiency decreased since drinking?
14. Is drink endangering your job or business?
15. Do you drink to kill worry or trouble?
16. Do you drink alone?
17. Have you ever had a memory "blackout" through drink?
18. Has your doctor treated you for drinking?
19. Do you drink to give you self-confidence?
20. Have you been to hospital or institution because of drink?

If you are worried call us at 383-1633 or drop in. We respect your privacy.

Mother Barges In

DEAR ABBY: My mother-in-law has a habit of barging into our bedroom (and even the bathroom, if it's not locked) to "talk" to Jerry. (He's my husband.)

Yesterday she barged into our bedroom while Jerry was dressing, and he didn't have a stitch on.

I said in a nice way, "Mother, you really should knock first and ask Jerry if he is presentable." Then she said, "Oh, don't be silly. I used to diaper him!"

What are your views on the subject?—Wife.

DEAR WIFE: Same as yours. But it's up to Jerry to tell his mother to knock first. (If she breast-fed him when he was a baby, would that give him the right to barge in on HER when she's topless?)

DEAR ABBY: I have just returned from a baby shower where the family dog was allowed to wander around among the guests. The dog is friendly and quite lovable, so nearly all the guests petted him, and the dog licked their hands. This included people who were preparing and serving the food, as well as those who had their fingers in the candies, handling baby presents, etc.

I noticed that after playing with the dog nobody washed their hands before eating.

We teach children to wash their hands before they eat. Doesn't that go for dog lovers, too?—Disgusted.

DEAR DISGUSTED: It should, but for some reason most dog-lovers do not feel contaminated after playing with a dog.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 26-year-old mather, of a two-year-old daughter. My husband has been urging me to have another child since our daughter was born. He was very disappointed that she was not a male, and this hurt me. Although he loves the girl, he still feels that he is missing something by not having a son. He thinks I am selfish for not wanting another child, but here are my reasons.

1. All during my pregnancy (not only in the morning) I was in a constant state of nausea.

2. We live 400 miles away from our parents, and I have no one to help me with the chores of child rearing.

3. There is always the possibility that the second child would be another girl. My husband says he wouldn't keep trying for a boy but he'd like one more chance.

4. I want to return to work when my child is of school age, and another child would postpone it to a later date.

I am a good mother, Abby and I'm very happy with one child. We have talked it out, and are both immovable. I know that I have the final say, but he makes me feel so guilty that at times I'm almost ready to give in, and yet I don't know if it would be the best thing for me or the child.

What is the solution, if there is one?—Mrs. X, Jr.

DEAR MRS. X, JR.: Feeling as you do, don't "give in." If you had another child in order to accommodate your husband or to relieve your "guilt", you would resent the child for the above reasons and children sense resentment. Have you considered adopting a boy your daughter's age? No nausea, no gambling on the sex, no time lost in returning to work. And you'd be giving a good home to a little boy who needs one.

No Drinking Link To Heart Attacks

DALLAS (UPI) — A team of doctors say cigarette smokers run a very high risk of sudden fatal heart attacks, but there appears to be no link between drinking and heart attack deaths.

Dr. Arthur L. Klatsky of the Kaiser-Permanente Medical Care Program in Oakland, Calif., told the American Heart Association conference of a study of 197 men who died within hours of an attack.

"Cigarette smoking was positively associated with sudden cardiac death: coffee drinking, heavy aspirin use, and alcohol showed no statistically significant association," Klatsky said.

"The comparison of responses about cigarette smoking showed that current cigarette smokers seemed to be at substantially greater risk of subsequent cardiac death than those who stated that they do not currently smoke," he said.

He said previous theories were that aspirin and limited alcohol drinking helped prevent sudden attacks. However, he said, the study showed no connection.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Sunday, Nov. 24

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are in beter position to achieve goals. Barriers are removed. Philosophical persons express their views, take you into their confidence. Cycle is such that your timing is on target. You can be at right place at right time.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You could be part of a fund-raising drive. You socialize within club, group situation. Hospital may be part of the overall picture. Accent is on what happens behind the scenes, what is closed in — and also on certain restrictions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You change your mind about what you want, need. You gain access to information which causes you to revise, refine and demand definition. Another Gemini — and a Virgo — could be involved. Member of opposite sex could "turn your head" with romantic assertions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accept challenge. People in high places will make room for you. You also will receive benefit of any doubts. Be diplomatic. Win rather than force your way. Taurus, Libra individuals prove great allies.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Good lunar aspect coincides now with long-range plan, writing, general correspondence and education. Be selective. Accent quality. See persons as they are, not merely as you wish they could be. If realistic, you could make fantastic gains.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Investments, insurance policies, tax shelters — these areas could be emphasized Do some organizing — get an accounting. Reward factor is greater if you accept added responsibility. Relationship will be intensified.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do more listening than asserting. You are finishing rather than beginning a project. Emphasis is on contract, public relations and co-operative efforts. Partner or mate will figure prominently. Let others show their hands and reveal plans. Respond after you obtain facts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): New approach to work associates is a necessity. Strive for a more independent stance. Break in procedures which eliminate red tape. Trim costs. One who works with or for you needs a lecture. State needs, expectations in positive manner.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21); Favorable Moon aspect coincides now with creativity, special relationships. You may find that you are being wined and dined. Enjoy it without being susceptible to false flattery. Don't risk something of value for temporary advantage.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are rewarded for what you do best — your natural abilities surge forward — and are applauded. Gemini, Sagittarius will be in picture. Accent is on older person, possibly a parent, property — and ability to close a deal. Flexibility can be a real asset. Act accordingly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your ability to "come across" with ideas is emphasized. Key is to be frank, on the square, willing to let chips fly and fall free form. Some around you are pugnacious, seeking a fight. Stick to principles despite harangues from neighbors and relatives. You are on right track.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Money and count your change — that's the highlight. Spotlight is on collection, payment, obtaining what you need without giving more than you should. Message should become increasingly clear. Gemini, Sagittarius, Virgo are in picture.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have unusual voice, can be diplomatic, but will fight when the cause is right. Taurus, Libra persons play significant roles in your life. You are due for more freedom — and relief from emotional burden. Happiness, which kept its distance in recent times, is ready to make your acquaintance. You are frank, a natural teacher, a principled person who attracts persons who seem willing to sway with the tide.

Forecast for Mon., Nov. 25

ARIES (March 21 — April 19): You are going to get "static." Means what appeared a smooth course could actually be riddled with obstacles. Key is to know and be prepared. Take special care with legal documents. Avoid rushing — time is on your side. Delay. Play waiting game. Read between the lines.

TAURUS (April 20 — May 20): You may have to complete task started by another. Accent is on tangled affairs, clandestine agreements. Be analytical. Check facts. Insist on being "let in" on what is happening. Gemini, Virgo are likely to be in picture.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Friends tend to have "hot" disputes. You may be caught in middle — unless cautious and wise. Lovers' quarrel could also be on agenda. Key is to know difference between wishful thinking and factual information. Don't fall prey to false flattery!

CANCER (Junt 21 — July 22): Two persons you respect, perhaps love, seem intent on having a dispute. Don't rush off in panic. Key is to see as is, to learn, to listen and to come away with your own opinions, based on observation rather than emotion. You will understand as scenario unfolds!

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Hold off on journey, if plausible and possible. Reservations and the like tend to be confused. Deal with one in position of responsibility. Bypass red tape and ribbon clerks. Ignore envious persons who may be victims of "emotional plague."

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Money and how it gets away — that could be featured. You reach beyond limitations. It could cost — but you also achieve goal. Know what you want and decide on what it's worth. You must now respond in grown-up manner.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): New plans are on agenda. What appeared cut-and-dried turns out to be unsettled, ripe for revision. Leo Aquarius persons figure prominently. You do some overturning for purpose of remodelling, rebuilding and recouping. Don't feel you must adhere to status quo. Shake-up is beneficial.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 — Nov. 21): Study Libra message for valid hint. Red tape is present and you can perceive it. Accent is on delay, temporary confinement and apparent setback. However, you gain co-operation from one who cares — and you land on your feet. Property value is questioned.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Highlight versatility. Explore various methods, procedures. Another Sagittarian — and a Gemini — could be in picture. Accent is on creativity, love, friendship, special relationship with young person. Make intelligent concession. Then you help assure emotional stability.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): You may find yourself at loggerheads with one in authority. Key is to be frank, straightforward. If you stick to basics, you ultimately achieve goal. Otherwise, one who has confidence could have change of heart. Aquarius, Leo, Scorpio could be in picture.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Restlessness should not be permitted to dominate. Avoid actions based on whim, impulse. Applies specifically to calls, letter writing, short trips. Permit logic to have a say. Don't jump at first offer. You are being tested.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — March 20): Be conservative where money is concerned. Remember recent resolutions. Be a comparison shopper. Stick to quality — avoid get-rich-quick schemes. Family reconciliation is in offering. If gracious, diplomatic, you invite happiness. Taurus, Libra could be in picture.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a spiritual person, somewhat of a perfectionist, interested in justice, basically introspective and sensitive. Forces have been scattered, but you are due to find your niche. Pisces, Virgo persons play significant roles in your life. April of 1975 will find you on more solid ground, emotionally and in financial sense.

Family Nurse Plan Works

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — An experimental project in which nurse practicioners augment thinly-spread doctors in rural areas is being called a success.

Three nurses with special training have been working at cottage hospitals in Botwood, Placentia and Grand Bank since April, 1971. The project was begun by the faculty of medicine at Memorial University.

Dr. Boyd Suttie, the provincial associate deputy health minister, says the "family health nurses" are not substitute doctors nor assistant practitioners.

But at the same time their role is "something more than of an ordinary nurse," Dr. Suttie said.

In their expanded capacities, the nurses can do physical examinations, compile a medical history of patients and take part in diagnostic work.

Kiwanis Village Society of Victoria, B.C.

Dear Friend:

Contributions to the Society through the "Porchlite Blitz" have benefitted a great many senior citizens of the Metropolitan area over the years since 1954. We again seek your generous support in the promotion of this most gratifying work. All funds received from the canvass are used to defray Capital Expenses, thus allowing us to provide most reasonable accommodations to 231 persons.

Your substantial response will certainly be appreciated by the many seniors, and will help us continue this most successful and rewarding work.

Thanking you for your very kind consideration.

Sincerely

Stonework Mellows Kitchen

Mellow stone textures and imaginative design combine to create a particularly attractive kitchen. And the floor plan makes it efficient, too, with plenty of storage and counter space.

Besides the obvious economy of using hardwood-faced plywood instead of solid wood in projects like this, you can cut costs even more by making all cabinet shelves, partitions, tops and bottoms from inexpensive fir plywood. All work surfaces here are teak-grained plastic laminate applied over fir plywood tops. Upper cabinets are hung on fir beams and backed up with a covering made of rough marble trimmings glued to the existing wall.

Lighting is provided by fluorescent ceiling fixtures, covered with plastic diffusers.

To order the kitchen project pattern No. 2-x, send $3.00 cheque or money order to: DECO-PLANS, Victoria Times P.O. Box 90, Boucherville, Quebec.

GREY CUP TESTIMONY

By WINSLOW SHIELD

Grey Cup Day is just a "grey day" for some people. Little boys pout while frenzied dads delight in the capers on the football field. Dedicated wives suffer loneliness as hubbies develop a bad case of television huddles.

Grey Cup Day is a "cup day" for other poeple. Grey Cup festivities have been labelled as "the great national drunk" by a well-known Toronto sports writer. The drinking sprees do a great injustice to what could be a truly national sporting event. But let us not forget the participants of the game itself.

Grey Cup Day for the players is "the day" because that is what the Canadian Football League is all about — winning the Grey Cup.

Among those shoulder-stuffed men who chase the "fatted pigskin" are some dedicated Christians. These locker-room laymen are courageous enough to take their Bibles with them. That isn't easy. Peter Muller (Toronto Argonaut) has made such an impact on his team mates they have "ordained" him "the reverend." Dave Buchanan (Winnipeg Blue Bomber), during the Grey Cup event a couple of years ago in Hamilton, participated in a special Christian outreach gathering. His testimony is probably remembered more than his playing on the field.

Jerry Organ (Rough Rider) is a member of a Christian group that is making plans to do some Christian witnessing during the Olympics in Montreal in 1976. We can learn a lot from these men. May God bless their efforts. They see beyond the goal line. They see the goal of life — and eternal life at that.

Three-Stage Pay Hikes For Servants

VANCOUVER (CP) — An 18-month wage contract, providing a three-stage series of pay increases and a cost-of-living adjustment next year, has been ratifed by members of the environment, resources and conservation component of the British Columbia Government Employees' Union.

Component chairman Nat Inglis said the vote was 83 per cent in favor of accepting the contract negotiated earlier with the government's Public Service Commission. The vote was 1,604-to-311.

Inglis said the contract provides wage increases retroactive to April 1 and Oct. 1 and a third pay hike and a cost-of-living adjustment taking effect April 1 next year.

The BCGEU and the commission agreed to withhold more details about the pay settlement until wage negotiations are completed for eight other union groups, Inglis said.

The 2,500-member environment and resources group is the fifth component to complete negotiations. Contracts were ratified in September and October by members of components representing correctional hospital, clerical and unlicensed ferry workers.

'Relic' Clearihue Recalls

About 275 persons attended Oak Bay United's 60th anniversary dinner this week to hear Judge J. B. Clearihue speak on the history of the church.

Clearihue calls himself "a relic of the Presbyterian Past of this church" because he attended Sunday school there in the 1890s before the union of the Presbyterian church with the Presbyterian church with others to form the United

He gave a detailed and entertaining account of the church in the last 70 years.

Present at the anniversary celebration, too, was Don Morton, chairman of the Victoria Presbytery of the United Church.

Morton brought greetings to the congregation on the anniversary occasion as did representatives from several other churches in town of various denominations.

Cold-Weather Gear Newest Sunday Best In Chilly Churches

ST. ALBANS, England (AP) — A churchgoing kit of specially warm clothing for men and women has been suggested to a Church of England panel considering how congregations might be kept warm in winter.

Another proposal was reintroducing spats for men, once a fashionable adornment but nowadays unseen.

Panel chairman J. R. Kell, who has advised on heating Canterbury, Durham and St. Paul's cathedrals, said that rising fuel costs are straining church finances, while the warm air rises to the high rafters leaving worshippers cold in the pews.

Another suggestion is to subdivide churches with a "winter tent" of transparent material erected in the nave. This would be comparatively simple to heat, leaving the rest of the building at a lower temperature.

A letter to the weekly Church Times suggests men might be permitted to wear "some decent and discreet head-covering" in church as one way of keeping warm. The correspondent added:

"I even wondered whether to leave the Church of England and join one of those religious bodies where the men remain covered. However, I decided to remain where I was and be a Christian martyr in cold winters . . . but churchmen must beware and must realize that a church which is uncomfortably cold will lose much of its congregation, and cannot function as an effective agent of Christian mission."

No Fuel Today?

No Food Tomorrow?

How can you sleep tonight, when tomorrow you may have nothing to eat?
Empty grocery shelves and meatless meat counters are fast becoming a reality to many Canadian housewives. Yes, shortages in the land of plenty. Some are real and, perhaps, some are artificial, but the distinction means little to you when confronted with a deserted gas station or an empty plate.
Sam Andy Foods saw the shortages coming and is prepared to keep your cupboard filled with a kitchen tested, family food reserve program. From hot blueberry pancakes to zesty beef stews, these mouth-watering foods are ideal for individuals or families. Unit 1 or Unit 2 can provide a three months' supply for a family of five for less than 50c per person per meal . . . easy to prepare and convenient to store with maximum shelf life.
To know more about delicious Sam Andy mini-moisture, mini-weight foods, fill in the coupon and mail today or call us at 477-9111. No obligation!!

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet archeologists claim to have unearthed musical instruments 22,000 years old that they said once formed the world's first orchestra.

The newspaper said the instruments were found in an archeological dig at Chernigov in the Ukraine.

According to the scientists' report, the instruments, while primitive and made of mammoth bones, formed discernible rhythm and percussion sections of an organized orchestra.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

Weariness, Tension Expressed in Prayer

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

"Lord, I am weary this morning, very weary. I shouldn't be so weary, and I know that by tomorrow morning I'll have come out of it: I still find "all joy and peace in believing', as the Apostle Paul put it. But sometimes I feel temperamentally unfit for my calling. It is not easy for me to cope with the tensions in the Church between the traditional and the innovative, between complacent stand-pattism and equally complacent with-ittery. Help me, Lord, as I walk through the valley of weariness."

As an occasional victim of that kind of ministerial weariness I responded feelingly when I read a prayer, of which the above is the opening section, written by a middle-aged minister on a bleak Monday morning. As I read it I said a few soft Amens, and two or three times I raised an eyebrow. It does make a point, and perhaps it can have some meaning for persons in other vocations who face similar problems. Here, then, are a few other sections from that prayer:

"O Lord, so many things make me weary. Sentimental ecumenism which thinks that brotherly smiles are all that is needed to resolve differences among the churches. Much current theological literature in which a striving for novelty is more connspicuous than a wrestling with ideas that really matter. Ecclesiastical committees and task forces and the such which seem designed to evade problems rather than face them.

"Lord, you know that I like to use modern language for prayers in public worship, but I must tell You that I find very wearisome those cute and smart-Alec prayers which draw more attention to their clever fabricators than to You. And it wearies me sometimes when I hear worship called "celebration": that word often carries the implication that entertainment values make worship more real.

"I am weary, Lord, of preachers who try so hard to be relevant that a note of redemption is often not sounded in their sermons. Forgive me, Lord, for the occasions on which I have fallen into that trap. I am also made weary by coy folksiness and slick wit in the pulpit offered in lieu of careful and responsible exposition of your Word.

"Some of the bright young ministers weary me, Lord, when they seem to be thanking You that they are not as other men are, even as us middle-aged and elderly ministers. But I am made even wearier when I hear the older brethren snarling at anything new and different attempted by one of the younger ones. I am more amused than wearied, however, when I see an older minister trying so hard to be with-it and contemporary that he is in danger of rupturing himself.

"But, Lord, I must be honest with You. I am also made weary by the lethargy and complacency into which I sometimes let myself fall. Help me by your grace that my weariness may not go sour and turn into despair and cynicism. Keep me from being self-righteously censorious of things which do not immediately appeal to me. With your help, Lord, I'll not feel quite so weary tomorrow morning.

"Hear me, Lord my God, as I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, whose way in faith and life, whose continuing influence, whose living Spirit, are, after all, what the Church is all about. Amen."

Potash Industry To Stagnate

TORONTO (CP) — A potash industry official said that the federal budget eliminates the possibility of new investment in Saskatchewan's potash industry.

J. L. Carpenter, vice-president of the Canadian Potash Producers Association, said the "cumulative" effect of Monday's budget will be 80 to 90 per cent taxes on the industry.

"It is clear that under these circumstances there will be no significant new investment in Saskatchewan's potash industry," he said.

The budget's restoration of the 100-per-cent writeoff for exploration costs will not help potash producers "in view of the extent of known reserves."

Pant Ban Off

KAMPALA (Reuter) President Idi Amin of Uganda has lifted a ban on women wearing trousers. But Amin warned the women Friday that he will keep an eye on them to ensure they are properly dressed at all times, radio Uganda said. A ban on wigs and mini-skirts remains in force.

BREAD, SALT FOR BISHOP

Members of Victoria's Ukrainian Catholic community will make a traditional presentation of bread and salt to Bishop Jerome Chimy on Sunday when he pays his first official visit to the city.

The bishop was recently ordained in Vancouver and given jurisdiction over all Ukrainian Catholic parishes in B.C.

Sunday's ceremony will take place at 9:30 a.m. on the steps of the church at Cook and Caledonia just before a Pontifical High Mass is held in the church.

Following mass, a dinner will be served at the church hall.

Chimy was born in Radway, Alberta in 1919 and entered the Ukrainian Basilian Order of St. Josaphat at the age of 15.

He has since worked in Edmonton, Winnipeg and Rome among other cities.

At Empress our business is a family affair. Because of this we recognize the need for shorter working hours and more leisure time for our sales staff.

We feel it is high time that our people have the opportunity, as many others have, to spend more time with their families. We think that this is one more progressive step in our industry, to pass on a benefit others have long enjoyed. We are sure you'll understand — we really are!

THE HASTINGS PREMIER TOURNAMENT
By Guest Columnist
SIR HARRY GOLOMBEK

The shores of Hastings are rich in chess traditions and whenever I go there, I seem to see the ghosts of the great players of the past, from 1895 onwards. There goes the meteoric victor of that year, Harry Nelson Pillsbury, or the aging ex-world champion Wilhelm Steinitz, or the Russian giant, Tschigorin, or the didactic Tarrasch, or the world champion himself, Emanuel Lasker. All were at Hastings and gave and drew distinction from it.

Lasker, in fact, was the forerunner of a series of world champions — Capablanca, Alekhine, Euwe, Botvinnik, Smyslov, Tal and Spassky. Only champions tigran Petrosian and Bobby Fisher have NOT played there. One wonders what the present world champion would make of the informal atmosphere at Hastings. No, he will have to wait until we build our $7,000,000 complex.

One former world champion, Mikhael Tal, paid a return visit to Hastings this year. But despite his vivid presence, it was a dull affair in which most players tried to avoid losing rather than try for wins. Thus, for example, English Master Ray Keene wrongly got it into his head that if he played a number of grandmaster draws he would also gain the Grandmaster title. Four high scorers, including Tal, got 10 points, the number Keene would have needed to join the Grandmasters' august company. He scored but 9, a half point behind the great Yugoslav player Svetozar Gligoric.

I thought Tal looked ill and not himself. But he did play one gem of a game against the Cambridge undergraduate Mischael Stean.

Drugs Prescribed For Prison Tension

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Dr. Donald Workman, physician to 320 prisoners at Millhaven maximum security prison, 13 miles west of here, says too many prisoners are dependent on tranquilizers.

Medically active drugs are being prescribed for an administrative problem, he adds.

Dependence on anti-depressants by some prisoners was one of several observations made following a tour of the prison by reporters.

The tour was the first since prison riots last winter and spring.

Other observations made as a result of the tour:

—cell searches still are turning up hidden or home-made weapons;

—some prisoners are taking keen interest in trades they are learning while behind bars;

—confiscation of "unauthorized" books is irritating prisoners;

According to acting prison director John Dowsett prisoner-staff relations are "acceptable."

Dr. Workman, who prescribes medication along with Dr. Michael Heaton, prison psychiatrist, said tranquilizers may be detrimental to the prisoners.

HELP AGGRESSION

He said tranquillizers, which cut down a person's inhibitions, may promote aggression in some prisoners who he describes as "the most aggressive people in the country."

Dr. Workman said that if a person on the outside is suffering from anxiety a doctor or psychiatrist or friend may help solve the problem.

"What happens if a prisoner says he can't sleep because he's anxious and needs something for his nerves? You end up in a situation where you don't think tranquillizers are the answer.

"The paradox it puts a doctor in is giving medically active drugs for an administrative problem.

"I'd like to use tranquilizers a lot less."

Bergeron Alphee, senior health care officer at Millhaven, said 5 per cent of prisoners are at sick bay each day for depression or tension.

"It's tension between each other. It's too much time on their hands or it's no letter from home," he said.

"They can't go downtown and have a shot of rye like you or I."

FIND WEAPONS

Millhaven guards say they are continuing to uncover utensils and weapons in cells despite the use of a metal detector to scan prisoners entering cell blocks from exercise yards and shops.

Guards say prisoners are skilled at passing contraband from cell to cell and even lowering articles from an upper to a lower cell block with a fish-hook device.

Cell searches begin with the prisoner stripping. Guards frisk the prisoner and all areas of the cell are searched. Books are opened and guards unscrew ventilation panels in search of hidden weapons.

"The prisoners get very upset during searches," guard Raymond Mullin said.

Many prisoners take an active interest in a trade to dispel boredom.

A prisoner serving 28 years for armed robbery and attempted murder said he was happy in the print shop. The shop produces most of the forms used by the penitentiary service.

LIKES WORK

Another prisoner said he enjoys working in the mailbag construction and patching shop.

Mailbags are only made in prisons.

"We have to violate our parole and return here so we can practise our trade," the prisoner muttered.

Politically activist and radical publications are banned at Millhaven.

Only books from the prison library or books wearing the official prison stamp of approval are allowed.

Visitors cannot mail or bring in reading material for prisoners, Mr. Dowsett said. Anything not in the prison library must be ordered directly from the publisher. What is a "radical publication" in the mind of the prison administration?

"The relationship between most of the prisoners and most of the officers is acceptable."

LOWER TENSION

Amenities have been added to prison life to ease the borredom and the tension.

All cells have piped-in radio with a choice of several channels.

Food services have improved over the years. During the tour a luncheon menu offered pizza, french fries, tossed salad, split-pea soup, bananas and ice cream.

Citizen volunteer groups began to be welcomed back to Millhaven last month. The prison was declared out of bounds following disturbances earlier this year.

The disturbances reached a peak in March and April when guards booked off sick in protest of too many prisoner privileges and assaults on guards by prisoners.

Evidence Of Society 'Breakdown'

BELLEVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Dr. Alvin Toffler, author of Future Shock, The Culture Consumers and editor of Learning for Tomorrow, said the breakdown in "life-support systems" such as trucking and postal services and political scandals is evidence of the disintegration of industrial society.

Dr. Toffler told delegates attending an educational development conference that the world is moving into an area of increasingly rapid changes driven by a more rapid cycle of technological improvement which, in turn, is fuelled by an expanding bank of knowledge.

Society cannot stop the flow of change, he said, but it can select the most beneficial changes and train people to meet them and make decisions under the new conditions.

Although he was optimistic about the changes taking place in education, Dr. Toffler said today's schools, modelled on industrial society's needs, are in danger of turning out robots who must face a non-robot world.

Dr. Toffler said that under the guise of different subjects, the schools are teaching the disciplines of routine, obedience and punctuality which the industrial system needed and in some places still needs.

Schools should adopt courses aimed at the future and its needs, he said, while the interaction in classes should be varied to meet the variety of situations the students will meet in the emerging society.

He said that teachers must gear students to a future consciousness, otherwise the future will bring "passivity, paralysis and pessimism."

Miller Nominated

VANCOUVER (CP) — The University of B.C. alumni association has nominated Donovan Miller, president and general manager of the Canadian Fishing Company and former president of the Fisheries Council of Canada, for the post of university chancellor.

How many invitations have you turned down recently because you just can't hear like you used to?

Five in the last few months? Eight? Maybe you "just don't feel like being with a lot of people" because you can't understand what folks are saying as well as you used to. You feel pretty embarrassed when you miss part of the conversation, so you would rather turn down invitations.

If you find yourself staying at home because of a hearing loss, take the first easy step back to better hearing and a fuller life. Just phone me for an appointment. I'll be happy to give you a FREE electronic hearing test using a precision Beltone Audiometer. Have it at home, or my office, at your convenience.

Beltone can help almost any correctable hearing loss. And a tiny Beltone hearing aid may be far less conspicuous than the hearing loss you're trying to hide.

Find out if you need the passport back to better hearing that Beltone can give. Remember, when hearing is your problem, Beltone is your answer

'Politics Won, Food Lost'

OTTAWA (CP) — A statement by Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan on the recently-concluded Rome world food conference drew an angry response in the Commons Friday from a Conservative who sat as an observer.

William Jarvis (PC-Perth-Wilmot) said he would have been "ashamed to release this statement."

"Heaven help the world's hungry and starving!" he said, paraphrasing a newspaper report that "politics won and food lost" at the two-week conference attended by more than 1,200 delegates from 23 countries.

The issues were political, the actions were political and the conclusions were political."

Whelan's statement warmly lauded the efforts of the Canadian delegation. He said it "was well-prepared and was one of the best ones there, if not the best."

Jarvis, however, said "none of us . . . can claim that the conference in Rome was successful."

As for the commitment for $50 million in aid, this was simply a reallocation of Canadian International Development Agency funds.

"There are no new funds," Jarvis said. "It's no big deal."

"We demonstrated no real leadership at all. The conference itself did not come to grips with this issue."

New Rules to Favor Ontario MP Count

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Representation in parliament is increased even more heavily in favour of the central provinces under provisions of the new redistribution measure, given first reading in the commons Friday.

Rules of the new Representation Act if approved by the house will give Manitoba one more member, raising its membership to 14; Alberta will get one more member giving it 20 MP's; Saskatchewan one making its members total 14 and British Columbia four new members raising its membership to 27.

Ontario now has 88 members and will get seven more making its total membership 95 under the new measure. Quebec has 74 members and will get one more raising its membership to 75 members.

The legislation is designed to provide more equitable representation of the provinces in the commons Privy Council President Mitchell Sharp told the house. It would start again the process of redistribution of commons seats which was suspended in July, 1973.

It would increase the total number of seats for all the provinces in the next election from 262 to 277. This does not include seats for the Northwest Territories and the Yukon Territory. They are not subject to the same rules.

Statistics Canada has forecast population for the 10 provinces in 1981 will reach 23,967,800.

Ontario now has 88 seats. Under the proposed redistribution and based on the 1981 census its membership will soar to 110 members.

Quebec now has 74 seats. On the basis of the projected 1981 population Quebec would have 79 seats.

After the 1981 census Manitoba would have 15 seats; Saskatchewan 14; Alberta 23 and British Columbia 32 seats.

Housing Loophole Allows Tax Saving

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A loophole in a budgetary housing proposal announced by Finance Minister John Turner that would allow a family that already owns a home to still save $1,000 a year and get the tax savings, was exposed in the Commons Friday.

When Harvie Andre (PC Calgary Centre) drew attention to this loophole he got little satisfaction from the government benches. Finance department spokesmen had acknowledged that the loophole exists but apparently are not prepared to act to close it.

This is how it works:

The budgetary plan designed to encourage more home building makes it possible for any individual to put aside $1,000 a year for 10 years toward the purchase of a new home.

This means a husband and wife could save $20,000. Each year the $1,000 can be deducted from taxable income, and the interest earned on the money is tax free.

However persons who already own a home cannot participate.

This is where the loophole comes into operation.

For example, a husband, if he transfers the family house to his wife, no longer owns a home and can start a savings plan.

Once the $10,000 has accumulated, he simply buys back a portion of the home he sold his wife.

Finance officials are gambling that property transferred to a spouse remains her property in the event of a divorce. This, they suggest, is a possibility husbands would not want to risk.

Tax Cut 'Best News'

The president of the Canadian Construction Association said Friday the industry could expect a real growth of about 3.5 per cent in 1975, plus a nine-per-cent inflationary growth.

Henry de Puyjalon of Toronto also told a Vancouver Island Construction Association convention the best news to hit the construction industry in a long time was Finance Minister John Turner's announcement Monday of a reduction in the 11-per-cent tax on building materials to five per cent.

He also praised the removal of sales tax from construction equipment, adding the two measures would result in annual savings of up to $480 million.

De Puyjalon said the association, representing more than 12,000 members, has become a force the federal government reckons with. The industry is beginning to get its views across to the politicians, he said.

He said he expects the federal government to introduce measures soon which would make unemployment insurance less accessible.

Elaborating later in an interview, he said benefits now are too readily avaiable, resulting in more unemployment than is really necessary.

Measures are required, he said, to create incentives to work, not to draw unemployment insurance.

De Puyjalon said heavy construction is Canada's largest single industry, employing more than 650,000 persons on job sites and an estimated 500,000 in plants manufacturing building materials.

Frank Beinder of Trail, an economist, vice-president of Cominco Ltd., and past president of the B.C. Chamber of Commerce, told the group he expected an unprecedented demand for capital works and heavy construction in the years ahead.

Growing population pressures and the increasing demand for power and transportation facilities accompanying that growth will tax the construction industry's capacity to a maximum, he said.

He spiced his remarks with warnings to the provincal government to stop meddling in business affairs. Post product shortages were caused almost exclusively by "direct political meddling in the market process."

Trudeau Backing Down

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau appears to be regretting an outburst of temper Friday in which he stormed from the Commons after hurling an epithet at a Tory member.

According to his press secretary Pierre O'Neil, Trudeau later in the day exchanged notes of explanation with Tory George Hees and was in receipt of a note from Calgary member Hervie Andre whose question provoked the outburst.

In the House, Andre had queried points in conflict-of-interest legislation asking if it also concerned spouses and what would happen in the event of a divorce.

It was use of the word divorce which apparently caused the Prime Minister to call Andre a "son-of-a-bitch."

Tory leader Stanfield, in Halifax for a Nova Scotia Progressive Conservative meeting, later commented that Andre "appeared to have touched a raw nerve."

Equal Time

ATHENS (AFP) — Exiled King Constantine will be able to "appeal to the Greek people on television to take him back as their king in the Dec. 8 referendum on the restoration of the monarchy, authoritative sources here said Friday night.

Krogh Says He Was Told To Lie and 'Hang Tough'

WASHINGTON (WP) Former White House aide Egil Krogh said Friday he was told to lie and "hang tough" throughout the course of the Watergate scandal in an effort to keep government investigators from uncovering the 1971 break-in of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

The head of the White House "plumbers unit" that carried out that top secret operation, Krogh was called to the witness stand at the Watergate cover-up trial here for a final burst of evidence aimed at former White House domestic adviser John D. Ehrlichman.

Arms folded, Krogh calmly recited how he learned in March, 1973, that Watergate spy E. Howard Hunt was threatening to "blow the lid off" the still-secret Ellsberg burglary unless he was quickly paid more than $100,000.

Two days later, Krogh said, Ehrlichman told him that Hunt had become "stable" and that "now was the time to hang tough."

The testimony touched off a prolonged spate of protests from Ehrlichman's lawyers who charged that their client was being put in double jeopardy by the allegations.

Ehrlichman was convicted last July of conspiracy in the plumbers' operation, which was carried out at the California offices of psychiatrist Lewis Fielding in an effort to obtain the medical records of Pentagon papers defendant Ellsberg.

Watergate prosecutors charged that the long-secret burglary was a key factor behind Ehrlichman's participation in the subsequent cover-up of the 1972 Watergate break-in.

The legal wrangling all this touched off kept prosecutors from resting their case as expected. Friday's session ended in a spirited debate of attempts by Ehrlichman's chief counsel William S. Frates, to suggest the Ellsberg operation was really no crime at all in Ehrlichman's mind.

Repeating the argument that he unsuccessfully presented at Ehrlichman's trial in the plumbers' case, Frates said that all the one-time White House aide had authorized was "a covert operation" in the name of national security.

Consequently, the defence lawyer contended after the jurors had been excused from the courtroom, Ehrlichman could not have had any criminal intent in trying to keep it a secret. On top of that, Frates said, both Ehrlichman and Krogh had been instructed by then-president Nixon that "under no circumstances were they to discuss" the work of the plumbers' unit.

Chief trial prosecutor James F. Neal denounced the contentions in an impassioned rebuttal.

Engagements and Weddings and Anniversaries

Riseborough — Morton

The engagement is announced of Phyllida, daughter of Mr. John Riseborough, O.B.E. of Mbabane, Swaziland, and Mrs. John Riseborough of Victoria, B.C., to Glenn Thomas Morton, only son of Mr. and Mrs. William Morton of Nelson, B.C.

The wedding will take place at 5 p.m. on Saturday, December 21st, 1974 in the Chapel at Queenswood House of Studies, Arbutus Road, Victoria, B.C.

Bedford — Lokken

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur F. Bedford, 2989 Foul Bay Road, Victoria, are pleased to announce the engagement of their only daughter, Deborah Elizabeth Jane, to Gary, only son of Dr. and Mrs. John E. Lokken, 852 Parklands Drive, Victoria.

Purvis — Knowles

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis A. Purvis, 107 Kingham Place, are pleased to announce the forthcoming marriage of their only daughter, Mary Margaret Jane to John William Chesworth, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Knowles, 1576 Midgard Street, Victoria.

The wedding will take place Saturday December 28th, 1974 at 7 p.m. in Centennial United Church.

Weddings

MacKenzie — Ridley

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Ridley of Parry Rd., Metchosin, are happy to announce the marriage of their daughter, Carol Elizabeth, and Scottie Leroy MacKenzie, originally from Shubenacadie, Nova Scotia. The wedding took place on Saturday evening, October 26, in St. Mary's The Virgin Church, Metchosin, Reverend H. Silvester officiating.

Carol adorned by the traditional white gown, distinctive in its Victorian style, was attended by her twin sister Mary, as maid of honour; Sylvia (Ridley) Richens and Deanna Hendry as bridesmaids; Shelley Ridley and Sandy Gibbons as her flower-girls. Scott's best man was Sigmund Aasebo, with ushers Leo Backer, Dave Kellough (also from Nova Scotia) and James Richens, an outstanding ring-bearer.

The reception, held at Strawberry Vale Hall, offered the newlyweds a chance to greet their friends and relatives who helped to make the evening a memorable one. Mr. Robert Thomas, Carol's uncle, proposed the toast to the bride, showing the warmth and affection he feels for her. Among the guests were Mrs. Hilda MacKenzie, the groom's mother, Willie and Avril MacKenzie, Corey and Darlene Fraser and Joan MacPhee, all who came from Nova Scotia for this occasion. Out-of-town guests also included Mrs. Joyce Pagel, and Mr. Philip Dowling from Vancouver, and Albert and Winnie Cole of Cowichan Bay.

Boyte — McCorkall

A beautiful fall candlelight wedding took place in Metropolitan United Church Sanctuary September 6, 1974, at 8 p.m. when Rev. Alex Calder united in a double-ring ceremony Pamela Rae, younger daughter of Mrs. M. E. McCorkall, 3235 Admirals Road, and Pte. Lawrence Alexander Boyte, CAF (LAND), son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Boyte, 3131 Qu'Appelle Street.

The attractive, dark-haired bride wore an old-fashioned styled gown of silk crepe, high neckline of lace and ruffles repeated on bodice, wrist and slightly entrain full-skirted hemline. Her headpiece of lace and seed pearls enhanced the double long veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow carnations, white mums, baby's breath, making a lovely picture as she entered the church on the arm of her uncle Mr. Lynol Mack. The bride chose her sister Bev. McCorkall as maid of honor, bridesmaids Cathy Newcombe, Jonine Boyte, groom's sister and Sherrie Boyte, groom's sister-in-law. All attendants' gowns were styled similarly to bride's in green and white, flocked nylon, white lace picture hats trimmed in matching material of dresses. Their bouquets matched the bride's with green ribbon. The groom's military uniform made an impressive contrast. He chose his brother Charles Boyte as best man. Ushers Brian McCorkall, bride's brother, Gordon Taylor and Pierre Blanchard wore tuxedos, green ruffled shirts and green boutonnieres. The bride's mother was gowned in a long beige dress, lace bodice and sleeves, gold and beige accessories, peach-toned carnation corsage. The groom's mother was in soft pink long gown accordion-pleated skirt, silver accessories, pink rosebud corsage. While the register was signed, the organist played "O, Perfect Love." Bells tolled as they left the church for the reception at "Playland Club" which was decorated in green, yellow and white. The bride's great-uncle Mr. Cecile Ridout proposed the bridal toast to the happy couple as they cut their three-tiered wedding cake. A telegram was read from Mr. and Mrs. Bill Boyte, Gibson, B.C. The bride and groom waltzed to "We've Only Just Begun" as music was enjoyed by guests for dancing. The bouquet and garter were caught by former school chums of the couple, Pam and Alex were surrounded by guests singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows" on leaving for a motor trip in the Interior. For going away, the bride and groom wore co-ordinating brown and beige outfits. The couple are now residing in Victoria.

Weber — Olynick

A pretty double-ring ceremony was solemnized on Oct. 12, 1974, in St. Paul's Anglican Church when Cheryl Olynick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nick Olynick became the bride of Mike Weber, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Weber, all of Victoria. Rev. Greenhalgh officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, was attended by Linda Simons, matron of honour, and bridesmaids Tas Duncan, Sue Weber and Barb Davison. Bob Crawford was the groom's best man and ushers were Jim Allen, Bill Phillips and Wayne Weber.

A reception followed in the Legion Hall, Esquimalt, where Gerry Gerrard was master of ceremonies. The toast to the bride was made by her cousin, Jim Walton, and Mark and Vance Anderson supplied the music for the entertainment.

After a short honeymoon in Reno, Nevada, the young couple will make their home in Esquimalt.

Dunn — Mitchell

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. H. Mitchell of 4309 Houlihan Place, Victoria, are happy to announce the marriage of their younger daughter Susan Linda, to Philip John Dunn, son of Mrs. P. Dunn of Burnaby, B.C., and the late Mr. F. G. Dunn.

The wedding took place on Saturday, November 9, 1974 in St. Helen's Church, Burnaby.

Banner — Halliwell

A lovely autumn wedding uniting Margaret Ann, daughter of Doctor and Mrs. David Halliwell, and Michael Anthony Banner, son of Mrs. Walter Banner, and the late Mr. Walter Banner, was solemnized on October 11th, 1974, in Cadboro Bay United Church, Victoria, B.C. Dr. R. A. McLaren officiated at the double ring ceremony and Mrs. J. B. Baker was the organist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in a floor length white gown trimmed with Guipure lace. Her veil of illusion net fell floor length from a cap of Guipure lace and pearls. Her cascade bouquet was of yellow roses and bronzed carnations framed by ferns. The matron of Honour was Mrs. Colleen Politano, the bridesmaids were Barbara and Mary Pat Halliwell, sisters of the bride. They all wore identical long dresses of jade green polyester and carried colonial bouquets of bronze mums. The groom was attended by Alden Govenlock and the ushers were Peter Songhurst and Danny Heggelund.

A reception followed at Holyrood House where the toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. John Young of Vancouver, B.C. Mr. and Mrs. Banner are now residing in Sooke, B.C.

Carter — Sanders

Reverend C. Klassen officiated at the wedding on November 1, 1974 of Douglas W. Carter, to Miss Gillian Sanders at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Carter, witnessed by relations and close friends.

The bride was given in marriage by Mr. Ferguson, who also proposed the toast to the bride. A reception followed with 60 guests attending. Telegrams were received from the bride's parents and sister in England.

Norris-Jones — Emberlin

Mrs. Margaret Emberlin is pleased to announce the marriage of her daughter Susan, to Grant Norris-Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Norris-Jones, all of Victoria.

The ceremony took place on October 25 in St. Luke's Anglican Church with Archdeacon Wolff officiating. A reception followed at Norway House. After a brief honeymoon in Edmonton, the happy couple are now residing in Victoria.

Anniversaries

Roskelley 60th

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel R. Roskelley will celebrate their diamond wedding anniversary with open house at their residence, 866 Brett Avenue, Victoria, from 2 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. on December 1, 1974.

The Roskelleys were married in Victoria at the David St. home of the bride's parents by Rev. Green of Centennial Church on December 2, 1914. Mr. Roskevlley was born in Victoria and has lived here all his life, attending North Ward and Tolmie Schools and for many years operated his own blacksmith shop. He was also employed by the Greater Victoria Water Board for many years. Mrs. Roskelley was born in Queensland, Australia, coming to Victoria in 1904 and residing here since that date.

The Roskelleys have two daughters, Mrs. T. H. Johnstone (Doris) of Hololulu, Hawaii, and Mrs. Ken Shepherd (Hazel) of Sooke, 14 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

The anniversary cake made from the original recipe was made by their granddaughter, Mrs. Jim Rose (Lynda), and decorated by their granddaughter-in-law, Mrs. Ken Shepherd (Darlene). Mrs. Roskelley's bridal attendant, her sister Mrs. Hilda Barnes, will be pouring tea, also her sister-in-law, Mrs. W. R. Roskelley. Attending from out of town will be granddaughter, Miss Nina Johnstone of Portland, Oregon, and daughter, Mrs. T. H. Johnstone from Hawaii.

Rates for publication of Wedding, Engagement and Anniversary notices, with or without pictures, available on request from the Advertising Department (Special forms to assist you in writing copy also available). Copy for weekend editions should be in the Victoria Press office no later than 5 p.m. the Wednesday prior to publication date.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to thank our many friends in Victoria for their gracious acts of kindness and sympathy in our hour of need, in the death of a dear wife and mother, Aileen. Floral tributes, donations to the Cancer Society, the many cards and phone calls are very much appreciated. — Lou Borden, Darryl, Sharon and Shelly.

9 IN MEMORIAM

GREEN — Garham Cyril Green. In loving memory of my darling son Cyril (Cy) who passed away Nov. 24, 1963. Still missed by Mother and all who knew him.
His smiling way and pleasant face are a pleasure to recall,
He had a kindly word for each and died beloved by all.
Some day we hope to meet him,
some day we know not when,
To clasp his hand in the better land, never to part again.

MEAGHER — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Thomas Meagher, who passed away Nov. 24, 1968.
And while he lies in peaceful sleep
His memory we shall always keep.
—Lovingly remembered and deeply missed by his wife and family.

SPROULE — In Loving Memory of a dear husband and father, Bob Sproule, who passed away November 23, 1973.
To Hide our Sorrow we always try,
We smile with others, alone we cry,
These words are written with sad regret,
Of a husband and father we loved and will never forget.
No longer here our lives to share
But in our hearts he is always there.
Lovingly remembered and greatly missed by his loving wife Eleanor and his family, Dale and Hartiet, Dennis and Anne, Brian, Allen and Michaell. Also his sister, Marjorie and Charles Quilley, Edmonton.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

DIVERS AND FISHERMEN
One swim grid attached to a beautiful freshly painted 24 ft. double planked eight foot wide cedar transverse hull, made by Canadian Power Boat Corp. Below the grid is a large propellor with more than enough "oomph" to "get up and go" in the range of 28 to 30 MPH or normal cruising at 20 MPH or all day trolling speeds of your choice. Between the prop and the motor is a recently completely overhauled transmission with all new bearings. The "Power Section" — a startling 283 Chev with 50 hours since complete overhaul by the best marine mechanics on the island. A real gas miser. Salt water crystal baffle cooling. Exhaust headers cooked at the Cove in August 1974. Volvo Marine cans. 25 gallon gas tank. Bilge pump fan and pump, compass with nite lite, fantastic fish and depth finder, dual outrigger poles prevent line tangles meaning more fish per line foot of water travel, Marine head, fire extinguisher, New Danforth anchor with 130 ft. anchor lead. Windshield wipers, full lighting with oversize alternator, New upholstery, life jackets and new hi-grade all weather stern covering. A safe family cruiser with loads of room for fishing and diving equipment. All verified results to prove excellent maintenance. Have a look at this beauty at $5890.00. Phone 656-5320.

LAND INVESTMENT
Maybe we won't be able to go "skinny dipping" in the pool by the little waterfall if people buy the lots near by (listed near $30,000), but the scenic Koksilah River is still the prize feature of our 20 acres near Shawnigan Lake. We don't need all the nearly one-third mile of frontage, will sell bulk of it or sell with leaseback. Speculators may consider long term option agreement that gives use of land and maximum leverage with minimum cash. You and friends might form syndicate, put in a few thousand a year on what could be retirement investment.

290 FARMS FOR SALE AND WANTED

Wanted to Purchase not less than 200 acres of good farm and woodland with or without buildings for the purpose of establishing a comfortable and self-supporting Residential farm
(some small meat and milk productions, some cultivation of grass, wheat, oats, barley, rape, potatoes, sugar beets, vegetables, fruits, forestry).

Opportunity should be existing for the establishment of a goose and duck farm, for pisciculture (trouts, etc.) and for Gentleman's guest ranch activities.

The land should be situated either on the shores of a lake or on a quiet secluded beach, or should contain an own lake, or should consist of an entire own lake or sea island or should be a combination of some of these components.

Regions preferreed: Beach land or lake areas on Vancouver Island or on the mainland in upper-central or in the southern British Columbia (even directly neighbouring the U.S.-border).

Wellwo oded land appreciated. Vicinity of a good road preferred. Eventual neighbourhood should be agreeable.

Remote places considered if it does result in low price. Long-term leasehold opportunities would also be studied.

THE CORPORATION OF THE DISTRICT OF OAK BAY
NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING ON AN AMENDMENT TO THE ZONING BYLAW

NOTICE is hereby given that all persons who deem their interest in property affected by the provisions of the proposed "ZONING BYLAW, 1974," being Bylaw No. 3066 of The Corporation of the District of Oak Bay, will be afforded an opportunity to be heard before the Municipal Council on the matters contained therein at a Public Hearing to be held in the Council Chamber, Municipal Hall, Oak Bay, B.C., on Monday, December 2, 1974, commencing at 7:45 p.m.

The proposed Bylaw repeals the "Zoning Bylaw, 1973" and nine amending bylaws which are now consolidated under this Bylaw; and amends legal descriptions where new subdivision plans have been registered since the adoption of the "Zoning Bylaw, 1973."

A copy of the proposed Bylaw may be inspected at the Municipal Hall, Oak Bay, B.C., any weekday except Saturday, between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

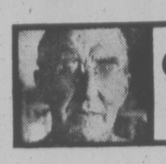
All Seasons a Month Late



GARDENING
jack beastall

First a note on the weather, then two possible causes for poor vegetable crops in some gardens.

Comparing weather records for the past nine months with those of previous years, it soon becomes apparent the whole season was one month late from April until mid-November. Even now the temperature readings compare favorably with past Octobers.

The home gardener with several years experience in this climate took the whole matter philosophically, for he has learned it is better to drift with the season than try to go against it. But it was not so easy for beginners. Some tried frantically to push things along while others become disheartened when results were not according to the book.

However, the excellent weather in October allowed the July sowings to mature well, and at the final reckoning the results were about average.

Some vegetable gardens never progressed far beyond the seedling stage, the seed germinating and the plants remaining stunted with no indication of growth until too late to produce satisfactory crops.

This condition was checked in several home gardens and was also apparent on some allotment plots. In each case it was noted that a large quantity of peat moss had been added to the soil before sowing, or applied as a mulch after germination.

Having used several tons of peat moss in the past 30 years learning the hard way its good and bad effects on growing plants, it seems reasonable to assume that its presence in the soil was a contributing factor to the poor results.

Several gardeners had the idea that peat moss and compost were different names for the same thing, the one being conveniently available in bags, the other something laboriously made in the home garden.

Being produce from plants, both are organic, but any similarity ends right there. Peat is found in boggy areas being formed from discarded parts and dead plants of normal bog vegetation.

Complete decomposition, such as takes place in the compost heap, is prevented because the bog water excludes air and the micro-organisms of the compost heap are not present. When decomposition is arrested in this way, the resultant material is extremely acid and never breaks down further than the peat stage. That is why you find traces of peat moss in the soil many years after the original application; its extreme acidity and its texture is something soil micro-organisms cannot handle.

Another misconception is that peat moss is a fertilizer. Peat moss contains no nutrients for plants, and its acidifying action can lock up available plant foods in a form plants cannot use.

When peat blocks are removed from the bog the water content is extremely high, and drying is done naturally or artificially. The natural, or syndrying, process is said to produce a superior product for garden use.

After the moisture content is reduced to a predetermined point, the blocks go to the grinders which produce the different grades, fine, medium, coarse and nursery grade. Chicken litter is the top layer from a bog containing debris, dried plants and mosses.

Once peat is dried it is very difficult to again moisten, yet it has an affinity for water. So much so, that dry peat moss added to the soil will absorb soil moisture and the moisture from any plants whose roots it touches, causing the plants to succumb from dehydration.

Even after a winter of heavy rain when the water table has been at the surface for weeks, peat moss placed in a planting hole in fall will contain less than 25 per cent of the moisture needed for saturation.

An indication of its extreme acidity is its pH reading of 3.4 to 4 as compared to a neutral soil reading of 7 on the same scale.

The only cultivated plant that will grow successfully in straight peat moss is the blueberry, a native of peat bogs, but the peat must be kept constantly wet.

Going back to the vegetable gardens and allotment plots, the peat moss was applied dry, not saturated and wrung out before being mixed with the soil. In fact, some used it dry hoping it would soak up the excess moisture that was present at the normal April sowing period.

As the soil dried naturally in May the peat moss continued absorbing moisture and left little available for the seedlings, while later in the season no amount of artificial watering applied to the surface could penetrate deep enough to draw the roots to the proper depth for good plant growth.

Throughout the season, the peat moss never obtained enough water to reach the saturation point with a surplus to spare for the plants. This gives us one possible cause for poor results, insufficient moisture for peat moss, plants and soil.

A known cause of stunted growth is high acidity in the soil for the type of plant being grown. The rhododendron, for example, is called an acid-soil plant, doing best in a soil reading around pH 5 to 6. On the other hand, vegetables and flowering annuals prefer a nearly neutral soil with a pH reading of 6.5 to 7, which happens to be the average reading of our local garden soils.

It must be remembered that a reading of pH5 indicates the soil is twice as acid as a soil reading pH6, and it takes very little peat moss (pH4) to make this difference. Ten per cent saturated peat moss added to 90 per cent garden soil gives conditions right for acid loving plants such as rhododendrons. Adding peat moss to a local garden soil will increase the acidity beyond the tolerance of vegetables and flowering annuals.

Compost, which is plant wastes decomposed in air by soil micro-organisms, even when made entirely of oak leaves, never becomes sufficiently acid to affect plant growth, and it freely absorbs, holds, and gives back moisture. Compost is made suitably acid for acid-soil plants by adding saturated peat moss.

Peat moss is not compost in a bag, nor is it a substitute for compost; it contains no plant food. Mainly it is an acidifying agent, and in small quantities a summer mulch for acid-loving plants to protect surface roots. When properly used it is a necessary and very useful product in gardening.

'Curse' Kills Baby

MAIMI (UPI) — An 11-month-old baby girl who was afflicted with an ailment called 'Ondine's Curse,' that made her "forget" to breathe when she fell asleep lost her battle for life Thursday.

Little Faye Monroe was afflicted since birth with the rare breathing defect. Doctors had kept her alive with the use of a respirator which breathed for her when she slept, but complications set in three weeks ago and her heart failed Thursday.

Dr. Charles Bauer said she had become undernourished, developed a kidney infection and then complete kidney failure.

"Her heart rate went down gradually last night, and then it just stopped," Bauer said. "The respirator was still breathing for her."

Faye's mother and her husband had driven to Miami everyday from their Delray Beach, Fla., home to Jackson Memorial Hospital in Miami.

"It hurts, it hurts to have her die," Mrs. Monroe said. "But I saw her suffer the whole 11 months, and she never had any relief. In a way, I'm kind of relieved she's beyond all that now."

DROWNING DESCRIBED AS PLEASANT BY 60%

Drowning, it seems, can be a "pleasant," "beautiful," "relaxing," "calm" or "happy" experience, according to people who have nearly died this way.

A study by the Canadian Red Cross suggests this state of euphoria is one reason people drown — many don't call for help.

Sixty per cent of 300 near-drowning victims described their experience as pleasant while only 20 per cent found it entirely horrible.

Many reported the experience as initially horrible but this feeling lasted only a short time before they felt calm and peaceful, sometimes seeing vivid colors and sunlight and hearing beautiful music.

Researchers believe drowning victims experience a sequence of feelings: first, a brief period of panic, with some pain; then a sudden relaxation, a feeling of well-being and general resignation to one's fate.

Few people saw "their whole life flash in front of them," the study says, but many reported worrying about how their families would be affected by their drowning.

Half the near victims said they did not call for help. In some cases those who thought they had called for help said they were told later that people nearby had heard nothing.

This finding, the report says, confirms lifeguard reports that drowning people often do not call for assistance.

More than half of the near drowning incidents happened less than 10 yards from safety. Three of four questioned reported they were rescued by another person while one in 10 said they had rescued themselves.

Other aspects of the report:

Drowning in a sinking car has accounted for one in 10 of the 6,451 drowning deaths in Canada over the past five years. In B.C., 13 lives were lost last year this way and another 12 between May and September this year.

Boating accidents have replaced swimming as the largest cause of drownings, now accounting for a third of such fatalities. Half of fatal boating accidents involved capsized boats while 32 per cent involved people falling overboard.

Most boat accidents leading to drownings involved small, unpowered boats, such as canoes.

Alcohol was involved in 41.9 per cent of boating accidents and in 27.9 per cent of all swimming drownings.

A startling 84.1 per cent of all drowning victims are males, with the largest age group between 15 and 19.

Important First Steps For Manitoba Daycare

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba's new day-care program has been in operation only a few months, but it has already taken some important first steps toward meeting the needs of many of the province's 100,000 pre-schoolers.

Since the $4-million federal-provincial program was launched in September, one new centre has opened in Winnipeg, another is waiting for final approval and 10 more are in the process of getting organized.

Equally significant is the fact that all were begun not by government, but by interested individuals and community groups.

Roxy Freedman, program co-ordinator, explained its thrust this way: "Where there is initiative, we will supply the background resources and the funds."

Two types of services are being offered: group day care provided by incorporated, not-for-profit agencies and family care provided in approved private homes for up to five children.

Both types of centres will be eligible for start-up grants and annual maintenance grants, and both will have their maximum daily charges limited to $5 a child.

For persons in lower-income groups, subsidies up to $5 a day will be paid by government, with the amounts decreasing as incomes increase.

"The single-parent family is a priority," said Mrs. Freedman. "However, some families with two parents will also be eligible for a subsidy in paying the $5."

As the program gets established, existing day-care centres will be brought under the umbrella of the new plan. Mrs. Freedman said this will assure them of a continuing supply of funds and free them from the fear funds could be cut off at any time in the future.

"Funds until now have been ad hoc," she said. "Now people who run the centres will be assured of a continuing supply of money, without review every month or year."

The financial side of the daycare program, however, is only half the story. The other half is making sure that the youngsters involved have something more than a place to stay while they are away from their parents.

"It isn't baby-sitting," says Mrs. Freedman. "It should be a stimulating, enriching experience for children."

A group of consultants is available to help centres get started and advise them on menu-planning and nutrition and a host of other topics.

"Also, the children will have the advantage of other facilities provided by the government. For example, medical or learning problems may be spotted earlier by health visitors."

"This program support is just as important as helping with money," Mrs. Freedman says. "This means that where there is a need, we will respond equally, whether it's in Winnipeg or remote areas."

TALKS DELAY MORE SLAYINGS

Angered Hijackers Kill First Hostage

Times News Services

TUNIS — Palestinian gunmen killed a hostage today but agreed to postpone the slaying of more than 40 other captives in a hijacked airliner and resume negotiations with Tunisian authorities, government officials said.

The government-controlled TAP news agency quoted an "authoritative source" as saying 13 maverick Palestinian guerrillas, whose release the hijackers are demanding, will be flown from Cairo to Tunis.

Egyptian authorities Friday refused to release the prisoners but after the slaying of the first hostage by the gunmen shortly after 8 a.m. today Tunisian President Habib Bourguiba appealed to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to meet the hijackers' demands to avoid further bloodshed.

The hijackers said they would blow up the hijacked British Airways jetliner after executing the hostages, negotiating sources said.

Earlier today representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organization said their attempt to negotiate a compromise with what they called an extremist "suicide commando" had failed.

The gunmen shot West German banker Werner G. Kehl, 43, and dumped his body on the tarmac of the Tunis-Carthage airfield where they landed Friday with the British Airways jetliner captured in Dubai.

Witnesses at Tunis-Carthage airport, where the hijacked British Airways VC10 has been sitting since Friday, said they heard a gunshot and saw a body fall from the plane.

The body was put on a stretcher by medical personnel, carried to an ambulance and driven away at high speed, witnesses said.

TAP reported that at 8:35 a.m. the rear door of the hijacked plane burst open and a body was hurled onto the runway.

The gunmen said they were were falsely told the 13 Palesdouble-crossed because they indivate.

tinian prisoners were flown to Tunis in a special Egyptian airliner. In fact, the plane brought in a PLO delegation and only one of the 13 Palestinian guerrilas.

The gunmen belong to a left- wing extremist faction that has been the target of a violent purge by the main Palestinian guerrilla groups, communiques issued in Beirut indicate.

Readers Are Judge

It's Claude Hopper's birthday, well sort of, and he wants to hear from you.

Two months ago today the Times began publishing Officer Hopper's experiences as he stumbled from one near miss to another, that cartoon strip top left on the comic page.

Hopper, myopic egotist that he is, would never admit it but he's the creation of 41-year-old civil servant Barry Caviness of Saanich.

His future now rests with Times readers.

The question is: What do you think about Claude Hopper? Does he add something to your life or not? How about dropping him a line, care of the Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria.

If Hopper passes this popularity test, efforts will be made to gain wider distribution of the cartoon through syndication, thus assuring his continued appearance.

Britons Bomb, Assault Irish

Times News Services

BIRMINGHAM, England — A wave of firebombings, bomb threats and assaults against Irishmen and Irish-owned businesses swept parts of Britain today.

Police said the attacks apparently were in reprisal for Thursday night's bombing of two Birmingham taverns by the Irish Republican Army. The blasts killed 19 persons and injured 184, many of them seriously.

Security officials in Northern Ireland said at least one of five persons killed in Belfast since Thursday night was shot in revenge for the Birmingham bombings.

For a second day Birmingham police questioned five suspects in the pub explosions. The chief investigator reported some progress in the inquiry.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson's appeal Friday night for no backlash against Britain's one million Irish-born residents was ignored in several cities.

Firebombs wrecked a tavern and several construction company trucks in Birmingham. In each case the firms involved were owned by Irishmen.

A gasoline bomb touched off a small fire at the Irish centre in Birmingham Friday night.

There were no injuries in any of the incidents.

Cambridge police received a call from a man who said five Irish-owned taverns in the university city would be bombed and they issued a warning to all taverns in the area to be on the alert.

Police in Birmingham said they were investigating "more than a dozen" instances of stones being thrown through windows of Irish homes, windshields of Irish-owned taxis being smashed and Irishmen being assaulted in the street.

A British army spokesman in Belfast said the bullet-riddled bodies of a young man and a woman were found in a pool of blood at a filling station in a Protestant area of the city.

Security officials said a 17-year-old Roman Catholic girl shot to death Friday in Belfast was killed in revenge for the Birmingham bombings.

Government officials in London worked through the weekend to prepare emergency legislation perhaps banning the IRA in Britain for presentation to parliament next week.

During a tour of Birmingham General Hospital Thursday British Home Secretary Roy Jenkins heard of Thursday's blast effects from a white-faced young surgeon who had worked all night.

"We've got a young girl who's almost certainly blind in both eyes, she'll probably lose a leg. We've got two or three people who'll probably lose a leg as well. We've got people with bits of metal in their necks and bodies and glass in their legs. A man came in, 30 years old, both legs blown off, arm blown off. There was an ambulance with four bodies, charred, burned, maimed, blasted. It's just horrific. Very horrific."

A senior bomb squad police officer said Thursday night the reason for the charring on both the living and the dead is a new IRA-designed bomb which is meant to kill by explosion then scatter a napalm-type substance on the survivors to roast them alive.

Ottawa Oil Export Ban Raises Ire

Times News Services

The federal government's decision to limit oil exports to the United States brought swift and angry reaction from the oil industry today, demands from the opposition that Ottawa cease its "war on the provinces," and official silence from Washington.

The president of the Canadian Petroleum Association John Poyen said Friday's announcement was "the other shoe" that the industry had been awaiting.

"It's counter - productive," Poyen said. "I think the thing that bothers me the most is that we seem to ignore our future requirements.

"I guess that the combination of the budget and excessive taxation and excessive royalties being imposed on the industry by the provinces has already siphoned off a great proportion of the cash flow for the industry."

G. W. Cameron of Calgary, manager of the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada, said Energy Minister Donald Macdonald's proposal to reduce oil exports to 650,000 barrels a day from a possible 900,000 barrels by mid-1975 only adds to the uncertainty created by the federal budget.

Hans Maciej of Calgary, manager of the Canadian Petroleum Association, said the budget already has cut the oil industry's income and the export reduction will undermine its market.

The industry spokesmen agreed the only positive aspect was that the federal government did not take the "rash step" of cutting oil exports immediately.

The 800,000-barrels-a-day export limit proposed for Jan. 1 is similar to actual exports to the U.S. during the last six months, they said.

Stan Milner of Chieftain Developments Corp. Ltd., said in Edmonton that Ottawa's long-term strategy appears to be one of getting control of Alberta's oil resources by taking away the only competitive market.

Reducing exports is a negative step making Alberta's oil industry dependent on the eastern Canadian oil market, according to Milner.

"The U.S. has always been prepared to pay us the fair market value for oil," he said. "The Montreal oil market has never done this and once the pipeline to Montreal is built, we will wind-up subsidizing them as well as paying for their pipeline."

Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed said reduced exports will make no difference in Canada's move towards a serious energy shortage.

"Unless we find more oil shortly, we're in a very serious situation," he added.

The danger would occur, Lougheed said, if Canadians are misled into thinking that a move to control exports will

U.S. Steel Corp. Friday announced the layoff of 4,300 more employees and began banking several additional blast furnaces because of the coal strike.

This brings to 18,000 the number of U.S. Steel employees furloughed since the start of the strike two weeks ago.

No break is yet seen in that dispute which has seen the disappearance of 23,000 coal-related jobs. Analysts in Washington say that figure could reach 400,000 by December.

Slumping new car sales, meanwhile led to a further 50,000 men being laid-off by major U.S. auto manufacturers Friday.

The layoffs touched into Canada, with an announcement from American Motors that 1,000 men would be idled at its Brampton, Ont., plant.

The latest auto layoffs bring to 178,000 the number of blue-collar workers who will be out of work all or part of next month, but the cut also extended to office personnel.

Grain Inspectors Strike, Meat Men Work-to-Rule

VANCOUVER (CP) — Grain shipments from Vancouver were halted for the second time this year when 45 federal grain inspectors went on strike today for higher pay.

No pickets were reported at the downtown offices of the Canadian Grain Commission, or at the Saskatchewan and Alberta wheat pools, although no loading or unloading operations were being conducted at either of the elevator terminals.

Three pickets appeared at the Burrard Terminals, where grain pellets were scheduled to be loaded.

A terminal spokesman said railway unions which bring the grain to the terminal, grain handlers who load and unload it, and longshoremen who handle the grain products on board ships all are respecting the picket line.

"The inspectors have agreed to allow us to continue maintenance and housekeeping work, which will keep 20 men employed for about a week here," the Burrard spokesman added.

About 100 federal meat inspectors in the Vancouver area, also members of the Public Service Alliance, were to work to rule today and 40 to 45 of them who have the right to strike will do so in a few days.

The work to rule plan is just as effective as a strike, said regional alliance spokesman W. E. Bitz.

"There are so many regulations and when the inspectors require all of them to be followed to the letter, it will bring operations in all packing plants to a halt within a few days," Bitz explained.

"We can promise the public that their meat will never be inspected better than it will be over the next while."

VW BILL $1.9M

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (UPI) — A U.S. superior court jury has awarded $1.9 million to a teacher, severely burned in an auto accident, on the grounds that her volkswagen's gas tank design was a safety hazard.

Marlene La Grippo, 31, of Long Beach, Calif., received third degree burns over 70 per cent of her body when the Volkswagen collided head-on with another car in 1967, and flaming gasoline from the front-mounted tank showered back on her.

The jury said there was negligence in putting the gas tank in the trunk in front of the driver, where fumes could accumulate, placement of the filler cap on the left side, which is most often hit in collisions, and failure to place a firewall between the gas tank and the driver.

Defence attorneys said they would appeal.

★ Ford, Breshnev Click

VLADIVOSTOK (UPI) — Cancelling a formal dinner at their summit site in frozen Siberia, President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev spent almost eight hours today in marathon talks on nuclear arms limitations.

It was the first meeting between the two, and both pledged to give "an irreversible character" to Soviet-American detente.

The White House issued a text of a toast Ford had planned to give at the dinner, calling for the nuclear superpowers to "get on with the business of controlling arms."

But Ford and Brezhnev struck such an instant rapport and the talks were going so well that the dinner was brushed aside in favor of hard discussions.

A presidential spokesman said Ford took two half-hour breaks during his 7 hours, 45 minutes of talks with Brezhnev at a snow-covered ocean-side health spa near the secret port city of Vladivostok.

Hopes Fading For Fishermen

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Hopes are fading for five fishermen lost in heavy seas north of Vancouver Island will be found alive.

"We might as well say goodbye to them if they hit a rock in those seas," Stan Svege, owner of the fishing vessel, Yaquina, told the Times from his home in Bellingham.

A search resumed at dawn today for the five men who abandoned the 75-foot fishing boat in stormy Millbank Sound early Friday.

Three aircraft from CFB Comox and at least six boats are battling huge seas and gale-force winds searching for the men who radioed at 2:40 a.m. the Yaquina was sinking and they were taking to a liferaft.

At the time seas were running with 25- to 30-foot waves buffeted by a 60-mile-an-hour gale.

A long tendril of wreckage was sighted Friday between Goose and Price Islands, about 70 miles north of Vancouver Island, but rescue officials have been unable to determine if it is from the Yaquina.

Svege said his boat was equipped with a 10-man liferaft which was well-provisioned with water and food and carried automatic running lights.

If they managed to get into the raft and zip the cover shut they probably would be able to survive, he said.

"But it seems unlikely they made it . . . I mean how could searchers from the air fail to spot the raft — it's a huge thing and bright yellow."

Svege said he was holidaying in Mexico and returned home last Sunday to find his boat gone.

He said it had been taken without his knowledge and was disturbed to learn the man who took it had also taken his son along with him.

Little 'Gardens of Eden' in Canada?

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians, don't despair! Although we would be among the first to bear the brunt of a new ice age, which some scientists say is imminent, there could be cozy Gardens of Eden among the mountains of ice.

At least, that was true during the last ice age, known properly as the Wisconsin Glaciation, which began 30,000 years ago and lasted for 18,000 years, say federal scientists.

In fact, the largest land area free of ice was in the Yukon, says Gerry Holdsworth, an environment department glaciologist. This territory formed a gap between two giant ice caps that came together and moved southwards.

He and V. K. Prest, a glacial geologist in the energy department's geological surveys branch, said there is evidence that man and animals lived and survived comfortably in the Yukon during the ice age.

Dr. Prest said other ice-free areas where man and beast survived included Banks Island in the Arctic, a thin strip of land in the Alberta foothills and the Cypress Hills area of southern Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The ice pack, whose movements can be calculated by rock and soil deposits and erosion, travelled as far south as southern Ohio, he said.

Both scientists termed premature the reports this week from London of experts warning of a new ice age. They said it was too soon to predict whether the earth's present cooling trend will be long-term.

More Fugitives From Snowfields Prefer Living on Wheels in City

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

The gypsies have come to Victoria.

Not the kind who have dark flashing eyes and dance around campfires.

The kind who are Saskatchewan farmers and Newfoundland secretaries and Kamloops truck drivers, all in search of a mild snow-free winter in Canada's banana belt.

There is a whole community of them living in the Inn City Trailer Park on Seymour Avenue one of the few trailer parks close to downtown.

Officially the park is for tourist camping, with stops of five to seven days, but this year most people seemed to have settled for the winter.

There are 45 trailers there this week, compared with about 20 this time last year, according to park manager William Popowich.

He said he gets four or five calls a day from people looking for a place to park their trailer.

Like many in the park, the Popowichs are escaping from Saskatchewan winters.

They came two months ago and took charge of the trailer park in return for free use of the manager's residence.

Other residents pay $85 a month to set down their trailer or motor home and hook it up to water, sewerage and electricity.

People in this mini-community come from across the country, but they seem to make friends quickly and do a lot of visiting between trailers.

Hazel Patrick of Cornerbrook, Newfoundland, has been here since the end of September and still hasn't

She's pretty well given up hope of finding a house.

Mrs. Patrick spent her first week in Victoria at the Red Lion Inn and answered every house ad that appeared in the papers, with no success.

No one wanted to rent to a woman with two small King Charles spaniels. She bought a second-hand trailer so she wouldn't go broke paying hotel bills.

Darleen Thiedt of Whitehorse, Yukon Territory, came with her husband and four children in September expecting to settle here.

Now they're planning to go back north.

"We found the housing prices here so out of reach we had to forget it," Mrs. Thiedt said.

The family has ended up living packed into their small trailer, with the children going to nearby schools. The family furniture which was shipped down remains stored in Vancouver and will have to be shipped back to Whitehorse.

"For the wages here your cost of living is much too high," Mrs. Thiedt said.

Her take-home pay as a nurse in the Yukon was more than her gross pay here.

Jack and Bertha Anderson, farmers from Arelee, Saskatchewan, are enjoying their first winter here.

Anderson isn't looking for work, and has been spending the last few weeks in the legislature listening to the debates.

"Why take jobs away from B.C. people who need them?" he says.

The Andersons, who leave the farm for six months each year, spent a month at the trailer park last winter.

There were only about a dozen trailers there then, they said, and many were Saskatchewan people like themselves. This year there seem to be more B.C. people in the park because of the housing crisis, Anderson said.

Their next door neighbors on boths sides are teachers working in the city.

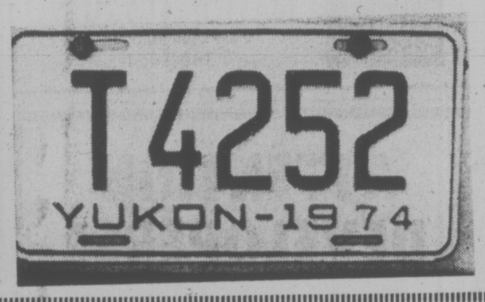
Martin Doree of Kamloops is one of several students living in the park this winter.

His trailer provides cheap accommodation, and when he's through at the University of Victoria he can just hitch up his home and move on.

Only thing he misses at the trailer park is not having a phone, and having to rely on one phone for the whole park.

The telephone company considers the residents transients, so won't install phones, said Doree.



Disappearance of Marine Life Alarms B.C. Ecological Chief

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

The new head of B.C.'s ecological reserve programs says marine life in tidal zones needs protection.

Various forms of marine life around B.C. shores are slowly but systematically being depleted, says Bristol Foster, who gave up his job as director of the Provincial Museum to administer a program that sets aside samples of endangered flora, soil and animal life in natural laboratories.

He listed as an example the abalone in Barkley Sound.

"A year-and-a-half ago you had no trouble in finding abalone," he said. "Now they are getting difficult to find as the number of hunters increase."

He also noted that the Japanese today are havesting sea urchins off the west coast of the island. The depletion of these animals would affect the food chain, he said.

"The day may also not be far off when Japan may seek to harvest our blue mussels," he added. "All this is going to affect life in inter-tidal and sub-tidal zones."

. . . time running out

Foster said the matter of providing legislation to protect marine life in inter-tidal zones is complicated because it involved federal and provincial jurisdictions.

"Something will have to be worked out by the two governments," he said.

Foster is equally concerned at the vast changes in the province's environment.

"Never have so few people done so much change to such a new area (the province) in such a short time," he said. "And change is moving at an ever-increasing pace."

"Take Vancouver Island for example," he added. "In 20 years there won't be any virgin forest left except in parks. The island today is crisscrossed by roads. Hundreds of creeks and rivers have changed."

He noted that Tsusiat, Hobitan and Squalicum lakes in the Nitinat area, to be included into Pacific Rim National Park, will be the only natural, untouched low level lakes on the south half of the island.

"The trouble is when man cuts the forest, he generally replants the land with one or two species — on land which once produced 30 species," he said. "as he simplifies, he destroys the complexity of nature and wipes out species.

"So we are losing species at an unknown rate," he added. "The world is losing its genetic diversity."

This was why the setting aside of land as ecological reserves was important today, Foster said.

"They provide a benchmark against which the environment altered by man may be compared," he said. "They also protect life forms endangered by man."

He noted that since the Ecological Reserves Act was approved in 1971, 55 reserves had been created and 65 others are under consideration.

They ranged from virgin stands of Douglas fir to windswept bird islands off the west coast of the island.

Foster said B.C. was the first province to enact an ecological reserve act.

"Quebec is now expected to pass a similar act," he said. "One state in Australia is also showing an interest in doing the same and is asking us for information.

Ald. Joe Bourque of Saanich is looking for residents who have been left off the municipality's voters' list.

Bourque, chairman of Saanich council's legislative committee, said that because of the re-enumeration of voters, some residents may have found themselves unable to cast their ballots in last Saturday's municipal elections.

Under an amendment to the B.C. Municipal Act, all municipalities were required to make up new voters' lists which were to include all residents—both property owners and tenants.

Enumerators called on most residents and left application cards where the residents were not at home.

Bourque said the responsibility for getting on the voters' list now rests with the resident.

He asked anyone who is not sure whether or not they are on the list to call Saanich Municipal Hall at 386-2241.

Pollen Asks 'Discipline' On Educational Costs

The provincial government should impose a "disciplined budgetary process" on various educational agencies and force them to co-ordinate their activities, Mayor Peter Pollen said today.

Pollen said the Victoria community should be able to induce capable people to run for election as school trustees, people who would be able to keep educational costs from "skyrocketing."

"But if they can't, and they don't seem to be able to, then the provincial government should step in."

Pollen said the school board, Camosun College, the Greater Victoria Library Board, the University of Victoria and the newly-created Community Resource Boards are all competing in various areas of education in "uncoordinated way."

"Each of these agencies is building library services, each is developing night courses and each is demanding a larger share of the tax resources," the mayor said.

"If this continues, the community will go bankrupt and it's also obvious that some coordinating and responsible authority must impose a financial discipline on these agencies."

Pollen was reacting partly to an expected increase of 30 per cent in the Greater Victoria School Baord budget, and a 58-per-cent increase in Camosun College's budget.

Pollen earlier described the candidates in last week's school trustee election as "appalling."

School trustee Walter Donald countered by saying the mayor had never been to a school board meeting and "how would he know what is required of a school trustee?"

But Pollen said today his description of the candidates was not meant as a personal description," because I don't know them."

"But they are appalling in their lack of definition of the problems of education and what they're going to do about them."

Visitors on Rise

A record 176,107 visitors have toured the Legislative Buildings this year. Public Works Minister Bill Hartley said Friday.

The steady increase, compared to 145,357 last year and 87,015 in 1972, is attributed to a "growing public interest in seeing the legislature in session."

Hartley said most visitors expressed approval with the $5 million restoration project in progress.

Increase also included higher number of school student visits, he said.

Chief Asked to Report On Student's Findings

VICTIM NAMED

Victoria police have released the name of a man on crutches who died at 7 a.m. Friday, 45 minutes after he was hit by a B.C. Hydro bus at Douglas and Pandora.

He was Andreas Lampert, 717 Pandora.

Lampert, a one-legged retired millworker moved to Victoria a few years ago after a long career with McMillan Bloedel in Port Alberni.

Victoria police chief Jack Gregory has been asked to submit written comments on the controversial Teskey report on the city police force.

The request was made Friday at a meeting of the full Victoria Police Board.

The report, written by University of B.C. second-year law student Kenneth Teskey, 22, details his impressions while a special constable on the force last summer.

The board unanimously supported remarks made by its chairman, Mayor Peter Pollen, who earlier declined to make the report public.

Pollen said the report only dealt with "routine police procedures" which were of "little interest" to the public.

The board will review the matter at its next meeting Dec. 18.

Teskey has refused to release his report because he says the "people who can do something about it" have the document. He also didn't want to jeopardize the program of hiring law students as summer constables.

Teskey's report mentioned low morale, understaffing, inadequate uniforms and overused cars.

Sparks to Fly at Hearing

Hot and heavy debate is expected at a Saanich public hearing Monday when Colquitz residents take aim at a plan to build 305 housing units in the Interurban-Marigold district.

An indication of the strong opposition nearby residents are expected to mount against the project of provincially-owned Dunhill Development Corporation was given at a meeting Thursday in St. Joseph's church hall on West Burnside.

At the meeting the project was attacked as certain to cause problems of traffic, schooling and esthetics.

Monday's hearing begins at 7:30 p.m.

Needed by Barrett, an Ear for Echoes

ONCE IN THE AGE OF INnocence when practically every British Columbian who wasn't a Liberal was a Conservative, a cynical old codger undertook to define a socialist for me.

"He believes that what's yours is his," this beer parlor pundit declared, "and that what's his is his own."

The strugglin little Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, a party born of adversity and nursed through its formative years by some very fine Canadians, held a loftier view of both human nature and the socialist intent.

"To each according to his need — from each according to his ability." That was CCF doctrine, reiterated in the flea-bag halls where the faithful gathered to share the vision and the dream.

It was a noble doctrine, and as a needy young hireling of the capitalistic press assigned to cover those meetings, I knew CCF effectives who practiced it in their daily lives. The elder Winch for instance: and if ever a politician deserved party sainthood, that good man did.

But not every dream can survive the harsh daylight of reality. The CCF became the NDP, the New Democratic Party became our provincial government, and increasingly these days, I catch a mocking echo from the past.

The gravest threat to the Barrett government does not stem from the industries that are feeling its heavy hand, or from its own ineptitutes in office. It is implicit in the interpretation of human nature which the old fellow in the beer parlor offered as his tongue-in-cheek definition of the socialist credo.

To understand this inconsistent but very widely held attitude, it is necessary to accept the fact that true, bedrock socialism has relatively few adherents in this province.

Like the CCF before it, the NDP has its convinced stalwarts who hold firmly to the tenets of socialism, and can be depended upon to support the Barrett government in any kind of weather. But these consititute a minority, and they lacked the voting strength to sweep their party into office.

What about the others, the not-so-silent majority of voters whose collective clout sent Social Credit down the road and rocketed the NDP Opposition into the seats of the mighty?

We can speculate that the vote went as it did in protest against Social Credit, or from a widespread belief that the NDP would deal kindly with education and organized labor, or out of concern over the corporation grip on our natural resources. But whatever the combination of reasons, I find it impossible to believe that socialist conviction on the part of the electors figured significantly among them.

This is not the outraged bleat of an old-liner whose party has been relegated to the dark side of the moon. I enjoy the luxury of being about as non-political as a man can get. I also suspect that the Barrett government may be right for this province at this time, and hope that its premier will not upset his applecart by failing to recognize the nature of the governed.

In more than ample strength to dictate the outcome of the next election, we are a province of small capitalists. Not slaves of the capitalist system, but capitalists in our own right.

The change was part of the shift from a depression economy that began in the late 1930s. It was paced by the growth of the unions and accelerated dramatically by the desperate need for industrial manpower that continued through the war years into the post-war period of replenishment.

It amounted to a revolution that profoundly affected the employed British Columbian on fronts ranging from job and living conditions to sense of personal worth and status in his community.

His way was opened to possessions and luxuries that would have amazed the workers of earlier generations. He might damn the system under which these benefits accrued. But a capitalist he had become, inhabiting a climate in which the true-blue socialism of share and share alike does not flourish.

With this in mind, I suggest that the Barrett government develop an ear for echoes. British Columbians, within reason, have demonstrated their willingness to give to each according to his need. If this weren't so, no united Appeal drive would achieve its quota.

Beyond that point, we cling to the dour, capitalistic conviction that 'What's mine is (or should be) my own.'

As a detached observer, I think the Barrett government has let some badly-needed daylight into the swamp without yet treading too heavily on non-socialist toes. But the margin between reform and unwarranted trespass is narrowing and a party that would retain a working legislative majority would do well to take warning.

Craftsmen, Artists Return for Gallery Display

By AUDRY JOHNSON
Times Staff

How is it done?

That's the single simple question that occurs to most children and other people as well when they encounter some art or craft work that is unfamiliar.

Or maybe some everyday article—a fisherman's creel, a student's fiddle, a woman's intricately patterned skirt—arrests attention briefly and sets a person wondering about the processes that brought these articles into being.

The everlasting fascination of special creative processes is that for the majority of people they lie within the realm of mystery and magic.

To draw close to some of this magic and penetrate the mystery, each year when the Greater Victoria Art Gallery presents "craftsmen and artists at work," Victorians pour into the Moss Street gallery, queuing up along the street to await their turn for admission.

They come in singles, in couples, in families. Neighbors come together and strangers meet and part as friends, knit by their common interest.

Starting next Thursday and continuing through Sunday, Dec. 1, the women's committee-sponsored event will be under way again.

Some of the artists and the processes that have fascinated visitors in other years, will be back.

Pat Martin Bates and her students will again demonstrate the intricate and lovely art of etching. On past occasions, youngsters and others with no previous art training have been thrilled with the production of their own etchings.

Carving of Indian masks by Richard, Tony and Calvin Hunt will be a highlight. And, intense interest in the art of making musical instruments has brought about violin-maker Sigvald Hoibakke's return by popular request.

The Ukrainian Community will again display its lavish peasant embroidrey and the delicate craft of decorating eggs. The inlaid cheeseboards of Michael Rougier are becoming a collector's item and this year he had added handmade hay rakes to his demonstration.

Spinners Frances Hunter and Margo Fainsford are returning while Carol Lawko is new to the show this year.

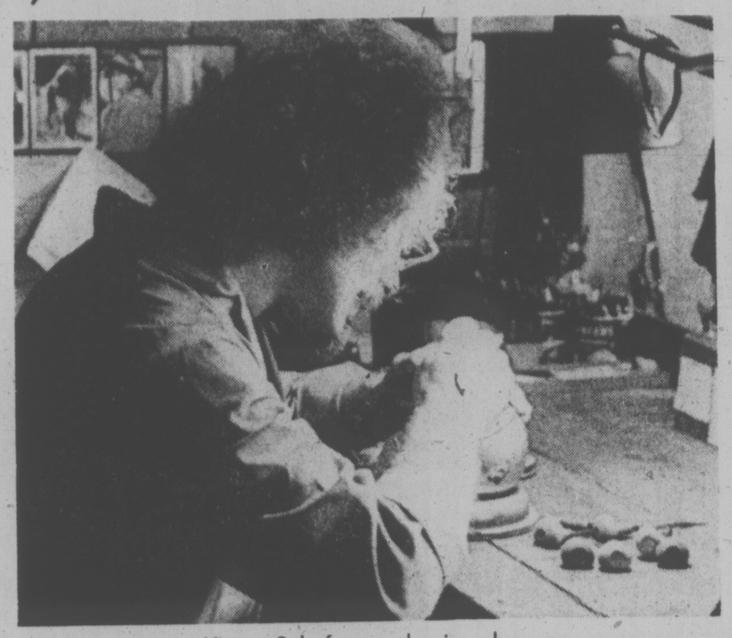
Those intrigued by the new and different will be fascinated by a display of skin illustration — tattooing — by Bev Lazonga of Seattle. But it's tattooing of a very different kind and quality to that associated with sailors in the seaport taverns of the world.

New also is Chris Aronson, whose specialty is stained glass mobiles, and Esme Davis, a former outstanding caligrapher who has turned her attention to the revitalizing of folk art basketry.

Music boxes in ceramic are the special interest of potter Byron Johnstad. Sculptor Neil Dalrymple whose work is on display at the gallery in the Fired Sculpture show, will be working at his craft, and so will fly-typing expert E. Oliver Harvey.

Controversial painter Luis Merino, the dynamic artist whose mural was regrettably obliterated from the wall of Gorge Road Hospital, is a part of this year's show.

The enchantment of jewelry lies in form and design, color and lustre; its mystery in the working and combination of metals.



Harry Schafer works jewelry

will be demonstrating their decorative craft; Harry Schafer who works with silver and ivory and precious and semi-precious stones; Alf Carlsen, a gallery member, and Frank Hannigan who specializes in handwrought silver.

Other craftsmen will be weavers Jane Kidd who works on two looms, one a huge 12'x12' tapestry loom, Pat Gislason and Joan Dennis; stitchery experts Joan Scarboro and Lorraine Calvert

Three creators of jewelry who produce collages and Martha Prentis who makes colorful stained glass-effect banners.

Wood block printers Hugh Matheson and Cornelis van Driel and potter Art Brendon complete the array of artists and craftsmen at work.

A silkscreened photographic montage is being made up by the Northwest Coast Institute of the Arts and Circle Crafts with the assistance of photographer Bill Porteous and will be hung in the gallery during the show.

Children will of course be able to attend the show with their parents but special school tours of Grades 5, 6 and 7 youngsters will take place, Friday. Limited to 600 and already fully booked, these tours will have priority on Friday between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Hours for the showing on Thursday are 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.; Friday evening, 7 to 9:30 and Saturday and Sunday, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Pan of Brownies

By MARY MOORE

When I want to win over teen-agers to help their mothers with the cooking there is nothing like a pan of brownies.

We have been saving Laura W's Brownie recipe for three or four years and now it has surfaced, been tested and tasted and approved.

LAURA W's CHOCOLATE BROWNIES

(double quantity)
1 c. butter or margarine (room temperature)
2 c. granulate sugar
4 large eggs
2 c. unsifted cake-and-pastry flour
1 tsp. salt
2 tsp. baking powder
½ c. cocoa
2 tsp. vanilla
1 c. chopped nuts
1 c. miniature marshmallows

In large bowl cream together butter or margarine and sugar. Add eggs and mix well. Add flour, salt, baking powder, cocoa and vanilla and blend thoroughly, scraping down sides and bottom of bowl two or three times. stir in nuts and marshmallows. Have buttered an 8" and a 9" square cake pan.

Spread a little more than half the batter evenly into the 9" square pan. Spread remaining batter evenly into 8" square pan pushing batter into corners and smoothing top. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 20-25 minutes. Cool on cake racks in pans then frost with fudge icing made by melting ½ cup butter or margarine in pot. Remove from heat but while still hot add ¼ cup cocoa, 2 cups icing sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla, and 3 tablespoons hot water and blend until smooth. Allow to stand at room temperature for an hour or so to set after frosting has been spread on brownies BUT if your crowd cannot wait to taste them chill one pan in the refrigerator for a while then cut into squares and go to it.

Patients 'Die', Defects Cured

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Infants born with serious heart or artery defects are being surgically cured by first being made to "die," a panel of doctors says.

The surgical procedure involves draining the babies of blood and then dropping their body temperature to about 60 degrees. This permits surgeons to perform complex repairs to such defects as malformed arteries or leaky hearts chamber walls.

"You're really operating on an infant that's dead," Dr. William Mustard of the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto said Tuesday.

"This creates a perfectly bloodless surgical field. You have about an hour."

During the hour, surgeons using the procedure can make life-saving repairs that would not be possible otherwise. Often the patients weigh as little as 5½ pounds and sometimes are less than a month old.

After the surgical repair is completed, the patient is warmed and the blood is restored.

"These children wake up crying," said Dr. Mustard. "And they've been dead for an hour. It's astonishing."

Dr. Mustard and Dr. Clarence Weldon of St. Louis, another surgeon using the procedure, say there is no evidence of brain damage.

"It's very difficult to find any neurological damage in these infants," said Dr. Weldon. "After all, you can't give them I.Q. tests."

In many cases, the risks of not doing the surgery outweigh the risks of the operation.

"These are critically ill, very fragile babies," said Dr. Mary Allen Engle of the Cornell Medical Centre in New York.

She said it often is a difficult struggle just to keep the infants alive long enough for surgery to be attempted.

Despite the radical medical procedures performed upon them, the children are remarkably unaffected, said Dr. Engle.
